POINCARE SCORES TRIUMPH IN MAKING RECORD BUDGET; STABILITY NOT YET ASSURED

Funds Voted Before Christmas as Premier Wished They Should Be.

BROUGHT METHOD.

Bonds Issued For Two Years Instead of For Few Months.

PARIS, Dec. 20. — As alert and alive as when he began his task two months ago of shoving through in record time the biggest budget France ever dreamed of having, 65-year-old Premier Raymond Poincare was Saturday night at the end of that task.

He has done what no one has done for forty years—got the French budget voted before the Christmas holidays, and that other budget for forty years ago was the merest minnow to the 40,000,000,000 franc whale which the former President of the Republic had Saturday successfully landed.

Into chaos he brought method. For the first two months of his ministry he worked with the one sole object or getting the budget into proper shape. When the Chamber met at the end of Octobr he was ready, with everything planned.

"Economy in expenditure and the fullest possible yield from existing taxes" has been his motto and he has done what he set out to do.

There are critics who point out that this budget of 39,500,000,000 francs with its apparent excedent of 370,000,000 is a thing dependent still on the stability of the franc. That is an argument to which the Premier has always replied that stability of the franc must have as its first essential basis the balancing of the budget.

The Premier does not for a moment count Saturday's accomplishment as more than a first step toward a solution of his difficulties. Of his budget 22,500,000,000 francs is devoted to administration of the internal debt, a fact which in itself prevents any possibility of complete revalorization of the france. With this budget, it is true, there has begun the operation of a properly fed sinking fund and for the last four months provision of foreign monies has been made sufficient to meet all foreign debt charges during the next year.

Yet except for the moral and material accomplishment of this balancing of the budget, the financial situation as a whole is still admittedly in no great state of certainty. There are many pins and bolts to be fixed before the structure can be warranted to stand. Here and there little matters are being fixed. Two days ago a decision was taken to suspend from Friday the emission of one-month National Defence bonds and begin from Jan. 1 the issue of two-year bonds bearing 6 per cent. interest. At the same time the interest on three-month, six-month and one year bonds will be reduced to 4, 4½ and 5½ per cent.

Dog Arouses Family But Perishes In Fire

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 20. — After rousing the family of Ernest R. Williams, so that they were able to make their escape from their burning home, yesterday morning, "Patsy," a little Boston bull terrier, himself lost his life. The firemen saved the three members of the family.

CHARITY BOARD GIVES RELIEF TO CITY'S POOR

Functions the Whole Year Round—Appointed By Churches.

CHRISTMAS CHEER.

Organization Well Fitted For Handling Distribution in This Line.

Now that the Christmas season is approaching, the thoughts of the average citizen go out to the needy perhaps more than at any other period of the year. But one organization in Peterborough, while not especially active at the Christmas season alone, has for the past twenty-nine years dispensed relief at all periods of the year to those who are unfortunate enough to require it. The organization is the Central Charity Board.

The Board was first established on January 29, 1897, and has functioned with a great measure of success ever since.

It is composed of a representative from each church in the city the representative being appointed by the church, and also a representative from the Children's Aid Society. The constitution also calls for a representative from the William Hall Poor Trust, but this appointment has not been made for some time.

TAKES OWN LIFE.

Ashland's Mayor Shoots Himself Through Heart With Shotgun.

ASHLAND, Ky., Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—William B. Whitt, 57, Mayor of Ashland, shot himself through the heart at his home here Saturday afternoon while his family waited for him to join them. When a daughter went upstairs to call her father, she found him stretched on a bed, a shotgun clutched in his arms.

Letters, believed to contain Whitt's explanation of his act, were found in the mail-box, but members of the family last night declined to make public the contents.

THE WEATHER.

On Saturday night the thermometer went down to 13 degrees below zero, but the temperature moderated towards morning. Sunday's lowest point was 11 degrees, and highest 23 degrees. As usual the cold dip has brought another fall of snow. The U.S. Weather Bureau now issues a long range weather forecast for a week in advance, and although at times the forecast does not prove correct, it usually comes close to the mark. "Milder conditions with snow or rain in Eastern States Sunday, Monday and part of Tuesday, then a change to colder until Friday, with milder again Saturday and Sunday." At the present time no decidedly cold weather prevails anywhere.—W.P.

"DON'T FORGET US, PLEASE!"

Eeny, meeny, miny, mo—four little shut-ins, all in a row. You'll find others like them in institutions of Peterborough if you look for them. And certainly someone ought to look for them in time to see that they have a lot of Christmas gladness. A few toys will turn the trick! Can't you just hear them saying, in baby language, "Don't forget us, please!"

ADVANCE MADE IN DOMINIONS

SOME DIFFERENCES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—Liberal, Conservative and Radical representatives of British opinion agreed Saturday at a luncheon of the Foreign Policy Association that an advance toward independence of the Dominions within the British Empire has resulted from the recent Imperial Conference at London.

Some difference of opinion was voiced, however, as to how much of an advance is represented.

John S. Ewart, of Ottawa, former vice-president of the Canadian Bar Association, criticized the report of the conference as ambiguous. It contradicts itself, he said, one part declaring the Dominions Sovereign or independent states, united by common allegiance to the Crown, and another part saying the British Parliament remains the dominant part of the Empire.

Professor H. Duncan Hall, of the University of Sydney, Australia, viewed the report as an indication of complete constitutional independence of British Dominions.

Another speaker for the result of the conference was Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times.

Prince Checks Runaway Of Belgian Millionaire

LONDON, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—Hunting with the Cottesmore hounds in the Melton Mowbray district Saturday, the Prince of Wales displayed great pluck and presence of mind in checking the wild career of a runaway horse which had thrown the Belgian multi-millionaire, Captain Alfred Loewenstein. The Belgian financier was hunting on his estate in the neighborhood when his mount stumbled and threw him. He was not injured.

Among others who went in pursuit of the animal along with the prince was Mrs. Keld G. Fenwick, formerly Peggy Marsh, actress.

(Alfred Loewenstein is the Belgian financier who recently offered the Belgian Government a loan of $50,000,000 for two years. The offer was refused).

SMATONA TAKES LITHUANIA POST

NOT INTERFERING.

KOVNO, Lithuania, Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press).—Antanas Smetona was elected President of Lithuania by the Diet yesterday and immediately took the oath of allegiance to the constitution.

He succeeds Dr. Kasimir Grinius, who formally resigned the office after he and his Ministers had been overthrown by a military coup d'etat. Charges that his Government was too friendly with Soviet Russia was the cause of Dr. Grinius' downfall.

Smetona was the first President of Lithuania, having been elected to the office when the country became independent.

Dr. Astulginska, also a former President of the Republic, was chosen President of the Diet. The town was gaily decorated in honor of the change of administration.

Unfavorable Impression.

MOSCOW, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—The overthrow of the Lithuanian Government has caused an unfavorable impression in political circles here. The reason for this is that the overthrown Government has pursued a policy of rapprochement with the Soviet Union by concluding a non-aggression pact and was preparing to conclude a treaty of commerce.

Disclaiming any intention of interfing with Lithuanian affairs, the newspaper Ivestia, organ of the Soviet, editorially declares that Lithuanian events may threaten the peace of Eastern Europe, especially if Poland attempts to interfere for the alleged purpose of protecting Polish residents in Lithuania.

PAPERS DISCUSS CHINA OUTLOOK

Lloyd George's Warning Over British Affairs in Orient Recalled.

LAMPSON AT PEKIN.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—While proposals of the British Charge d'Affaires at Peking are being considered by the diplomatic corps at that place, the British Minister, Miles Lampson, who has been in conference at Hankow with Eugene Chen, former Minister of the Cantonese Government, has gone to Peking to take up his new post.

The contents of the document which the Charge d'Affaires has presented at Peking have not been made known, but it is presumed the proposals have to do with the future attitude of the powers towards China.

Some of the London newspapers, notably the Liberal Star, express apprehension over the coincidence of the departure of Mr. Lampson for Peking with the despatch of British naval forces to China. These warships consist of eight destroyers and one cruiser from Malta.

The Star recalls Mr. Lloyd George's warning that the British Government might be pushed into "something impulsive and provocative in China," and fears that Mr. Lloyd George may have been justified. It points out that no sooner had Parliament adjourned and the Ministers could no longer be questioned, that Mr. Lampson quits Hankow to assume his duties as Minister to "a dummy government at Peking."

The paper adds that it is significant that these moves coincide with the retreat of the Cantonese from Hangchow, capital of Chekiang Province, which they occupied for a few hours Wednesday last, and the reported intervention of General Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, who demands that the powers shall not recognize the Cantonese.

The Sunday Observer, which is a Conservative paper, expresses similar anxiety, but in less alarmist tone.

D. W. DUMBLE, K.C. EX-MAGISTRATE, PASSES TO-DAY

Distinguished Citizen of Peterborough Dies This Afternoon.

LED ACTIVE LIFE.

Late Mr. Dumble Was Prominent in Church and Civic Affairs.

It is forty-four years since Mr. Dumble was appointed Magistrate for the Town of Peterboro, and his long term in office will be remembered for his unfailing justice, tempered with mercies, and his ability to handle difficulties. Mr. Dumble was born at Ballymore, Ireland. The family moved to Yorkshire, England, and when Mr. Dumble was seven years of age, came to America. His father, Thos. Dumble, was one of the party of surveyors, who fixed the boundary between Canada and Maine, made under the Ashburton Treaty. On the completion of this duty, Mr. Dumble, Sr., removed with his family to Cobourg, and there spent the remainder of his life.

Mr. David Dumble was educated in Victoria College, graduating with the degree of B.A. He was articled to the late Senator Kerr of Cobourg, and later attained the distinguishing mark of being appointed a King's Counsel. After his long service as Magistrate in Peterboro, he resigned on November 14, 1921, and on Dec. 31, 1921, presided at the Police Court for the last time. He was succeeded by the present Magistrate C. A. Langley.

Mr. Dumble was not only prominent in legal circles, but was an active and valued member of the George street Methodist church. He served for twenty-five years as recording Steward, and for forty years as a member of the Board of Trustees. He was particularly active in the welfare and schemes of the Methodist party and was energetic in promoting foreign mission work. He was superintendent of the Sunday school for many years.

On May 23, 1862, Mr. Dumble married Mary Louise Harvey. His chil-

STRESEMAN TO BE IN ANY MINISTRY

League Circles Believe He Will Retain Foreign Ministry.

GENEVA, Dec. 18 (Canadian Press)—League of Nations circles believe that Dr. Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister in the Marx cabinet, which was overthrown yesterday in Berlin, will be a member of any new ministerial combination that will be formed.

Information received here from Berlin indicates that Dr. Stresemann is likely to meet Premier Mussolini at some Italian port while enroute for his six weeks visit to Egypt.

Radio In Finnish Diet Checks Up Windy Orators

HELSINGFORS, Dec. 20. — (Associated Press).—The radio has put Finnish Legislators in such close touch with the voters that the latter can tell orators when to stop speaking.

Broadcasting has just been installed in the Diet to enable the nation to listen to the legislators. An important debate was scheduled the first night the radio was operated and the members, naturally, were anxious to make a good showing.

One rural legislator entered into a long discourse on the subject of ham and bacon. As the speech ran on and on one of the speakers' constituents about 100 miles away became bored. He reached the house by long-distance telephone and requested an official to tell the long-winded speaker that if he did not stop he would be defeated at the forthcoming election. The surprised orator stopped.

Poet Leaps To Death In the River He Loved

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 20 (Assocpiated Press). — The "poet laureate" of the Genesee," Thomas Thackeray Swinburne, Saturday ended his life in the wintry flood waters of the river he had so often celebrated in verse.

Broken in mind and body by the long illness of his sister, Mrs. Rose Swinburne Horton, which culminated in her death two weeks ago, Mr. Swinburne jumped from a bridge into the Genesee River here and his body was swept over a falls.

He had written and published scores of songs and poems, perhaps his best known poem being "The Genesee," the adopted song of the University of Rochester. He was 62 years old.

JAPAN WORRIES OVER ILLNESS OF EMPEROR

Festivals Forgotten Because of Apprehensions Regarding Condition.

THEATRES CLOSED.

Natives Gather Around the Shrines and Temples, Offer Prayers For Recovery.

TOKIO, Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press).—The critical illness of the Japanese Emperor, who lies near death at the Imperial villa at Hayama, has cast a pall of gloom and business depression over Japan.

Numerous festivals and beflagged streets, the usual holiday dress of the nation at this season, have been forgotten because of the gravest apprehensions regarding the Emperor's condition. Theatres generally are dark, or playing to vacant seats, while the aisles of department stores are empty.

A succession of extra editions of the newspapers, containing bulletins from the sick room, find anxious buyers.

The villa in which the Emperor is confined is set on a pine-clad point facing the ocean, where a number of warships are anchored. Braving the icy waters on the beach, numerous priests and worshippers are constantly wading towards the sea, performing a water purification service.

In the villa, which is a temporary structure, replacing one destroyed by the earthquake of 1923, numerous ladies-in-waiting attend the Empress and the Emperor's mother, who are watching the sick ruler day and night. The Empress has been untiring in her devotion and her fidelity has won the praise of all her subjects.

Approximately 350 reporters and correspondents are assembled outside the villa walls, rushing in motor cycles and automobiles to Tokio with frequent bulletins.

Friday night, the coldest of the present winter, was a trying one for the band of reporters. The Empress, upon learning of their untiring vigil, personally ordered refreshments carried to them. This was considered an extraordinary honor by the Japanese reporters, who did not eat the sandwiches and cakes, but wrapped them to be saved as treasures.

Because the entire Cabinet is at Hayama, informal meetings of the Ministry are frequently held in a little teahouse, which is carefully guarded by the police. The problem of securing accommodation for the Government Ministers and high Government officials has become a difficult one, because Hayama is a small village.

AROUND THE CITY.

Last week there were 18 placements at the office of the Government Employment Bureau. There were also 44 new applicants and at present there are 145 on the list.

SIX ARE LOST FIRE DESTROYS COAST SCHOONER

TWO RESCUED.

Officials Believe Fire Started By Explosion of Gasoline.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.) — The coast guard schooner Lincoln was destroyed by fire with a loss of six lives late Saturday several miles southwest of Cape Lookout lightship, off the coast of North Carolina, the navy department was advised by the coast guard cutter Modoc. Two of the crew were rescued.

A message from the British steamer Defender, intercepted by the Modoc, said she had picked up Gordon J. Schultz and Howard Carter, only survivors of the fire. The schooner burned to the water line and sank. The cause of the fire was not learned.

The Lincoln was a supply ship, based at Cape May, N.J., and was carrying oil and gasoline. She was destroyed so quickly that coast guard officials here believe the fire probably started with an explosion. Apparently there was no time to launch the two lifeboats she carried.

A high wind helped hasten the ship's destruction. All the coast guard vessels in the vicinity have been ordered to join in a search for the bodies of the dead.

CAPE MAY, N.J., Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.) — The coast guard schooner Lincoln, reported destroyed by fire off the coast of North Carolina, had a crew of seven men aboard in addition to Boatswain A. Erlington, who was in charge, Commander Edward F. Addison, commandant of Cape May station, said when informed of the vessel's destruction.

The schooner was equipped with a Diesel oil engine and had three small oil stoves aboard which would cause no great explosion, the captain said.

Besides Erlingson, the crew consisted of:

Olaf Eaveson, boatswain's mate; Olaf Hansen, Washington, D.C., chief motor machinist's mate; Adolph Quiroga, ship's cook, second class; Gordon J. Schultz, Chicago, motor machinist's mate, second class; William H. Alston, Jr., Absecon, N.J., coxswain; Howard J. Carter, Pasadena, Md., seaman, second class; Wm. E. Hupnicutt, Cleveland, Ohio, motor machinist's mate, second class.

"The Lincoln had a particularly fine crew," the commander said. "They were all picked men and the best at the base."

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST.

The services in Murray Street Baptist Church were well attended and will live in the lives of all present. Prof. L. H. Marshall of McMaster is one of the truly great preachers of this generation. He is scriptural, spiritual, simple and scholarly.

At the morning service he preached on Galatians, chapter 4, verse 4: "God sent his son, born of woman." He pointed out that the coming of Christ to our world was a unique act of God. The Jesus of Galilee did not emerge out of the circumstances of His time. He was not a product of His age. He was not simply one, Who, by one of the accidents of history, happened to develop into an amazingly spiritually-minded and virtuous person. No, God sent His Son. A Divine Helper took pity on our race. He laid aside His heavenly majesty, entered into our world, clothing Himself with our flesh, and after living a peerless life and teaching with a sublime accent never heard before or since, He sacrificed Himself upon the Cross. The advent of such a One is the event we celebrate at Christmastide. Its significance we cannot exhaust. Two important considerations emerge from the text. Christ came that we might really know God. Truth of any kind can be effectively expressed only through personality. This principle applies to the truth about God. Apart from Christ, a measure of knowledge of God is possible; but such knowledge is usually vague and shadowy. It has been truly said that apart from Christ, God would be little more than an abstract noun. History and nature convey an idea of God, but they leave us with a very imperfect conception. Man's experience of a power, not himself, that makes for righteousness is very precious, but not adequate. In Christ, however, God speaks. To know Christ is to know God. To follow Christ is to follow God. To do the will of Christ is to do the will of God. In Christ the truth about God comes home to us through a Person, the Supreme Person. This is not mere dogma, but something that can be verified in experience. For the closer we follow Christ and the more Christ-like we become, the deeper, the richer, the sublimer our sense of God. To deepen the Christ-consciousness is to deepen the God-consciousness. Then, too, the fact that Jesus, wonderful and beautiful as He was, was born of woman—and one of the obscurest and lowliest, of women — is a reminder of what the Spirit of God can make of this human nature of ours. The Law of Incarnation is eternal, and ever operative. God is ever seeking to find expression in the lives of men and women. All Noble and sublime behavior ever witnessed on this fair earth is due to the free yielding of man to the urge of the Spirit of God. The Spirit of God is like a sea beating upon the shore of our life, besetting us, invading at the slenderest invitation and then transforming. How far are we opening our hearts to the surges of divine grace and the divine spirit? "Christ in you, the hope of glory." The Apostle Paul could say: "I live, yet no longer I, but Christ liveth in me"; in other words, he claimed that Christ was incarnate in him. There lies the central truth of Christianity and the secret of Christian life and power.

At the Bible Class, following the morning service Professor Marshall expounded the passage in the Sermon on the Mount that deals with retaliation. He pointed out that Christ was pleading for the elimination of vindictive passion, and was urging that instead of inflicting a counter-wrong upon the man who has injured us, we should think of destroying his enmity and turning him into a friend.

At the evening service Professor Marshall spoke on the parable of Jotham, the story of the kingship of the trees, which, after being refused by the olive and the fig tree and the vine, was accepted by the boxthorn. He declared that the lust for power in any shape or form, when it was a purely selfish quest after self-aggrandisement, always leads to fatal results. There are two ideals before us all, and we have to choose between them, viz., self-interest or service.

In the international realm, savage imperialism (like that of Napoleon Bonaparte), represented the King Thorn principle. In social life the lust for power was revealed of all who sought their own self-interest regardless of the public good. In individual life, the same lust for power is revealed by all whose ambitions are utterly selfish.

In conclusion, the preacher pointed out that the spiritual message of Jotham's parable found in Jesus Christ its noblest and sublimest expression. He displayed a passion to spend and to be spent. Service was the motive of His Advent to our earth. Service was the spirit of His life—He went about doing good. Service was in part the meaning of His Cross. In the light of the Pararble of Jotham we can see a new meaning in the words of the Apostle: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." How much it would mean for the world if all professing Christian people were truly Christ-like in their outlook on life, in their attitude to their fellows, and to the manifold problems of our day. The preacher concluded with an appeal for surrender to Christ, as the one through Whom alone the meaning of life could be found, and life itself inspired and ennobled and enriched.

LINDSAY GIRL WEDS U. S. CONGRESSMAN

Miss Hodgson Met E. J. King While Nursing His Wife.

LINDSAY, Ont., Dec. 20.— An interesting romance is rumored in the marriage here, of a Canadian nurse and a United States congressman, Miss Marguerite (Rheta) May Hodgson, 35, and Congressman Edward John King, barrister, of Galesburg, Ill., U.S.A., said to be 63 years of age. They were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hodgson, 9 Colborne street east, by Rev. E. C. Curtis, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

Miss Hodgson graduated as a nurse in Lindsay. She met Congressman King at Washington, where she was nursing his wife. The romance is said to have quickened in the months following Mrs. King's death, resulting in the recent wedding of the two. Congressman King is said to have settled $100,000 on his bride before their marriage.

FERDINAND WISHES CAROL TO SUCCEED

Wants To Abdicate in Favor of Former Crown Prince.

PARIS, Dec. 20. Canadian Press.—King Ferdinand of Rumania wishes to abdicate the throne and restore Former Crown Prince Carol to the rights that he renounced on Jan. 4th last.

He made this wish known to his ministers at a secret council held in Bucharest last week, it was learned from a high Rumanian political source in Paris.

King Ferdinand, who is 61, ascended the throne of Rumania, on Oct. 11, 1914, during the troublesome times which attended the outbreak of the war.

As a result of the king's ultimasuffering from an intestinal ailment termed sigmoiditis and cancer.

As a result of the king's lutimatum to his ministers, General Coanda was sent to Paris, and already has advised Ferdinand that Carol is willing to comply with his father's wishes, but under several conditions.

These are, first, that King Ferdinand must acquiesce to Carol's divorcing Princess Helen; that, if possible, she must leave the country before his return; and, second, that before he ascends the throne, the present government must be thrown out, and a Democrat Cabinet headed by Prof. Jorga, be given power.

Radio To Make English Almost Universal Tongue

LONDON, December 20. — Canadian Press. — Radio may do what all other forms of communication have failed to do—standardize pronunciation. At least great things in that direction are looked for by Sir Richard Paget, fellow of the Psychical Society of London. When that was associated with standard spelling, he said, the English language would become the almost universal language of the world.

A Well Planned Bathroom

A WELL PLANNED BATHROOM
By W. S. Limbery.

The first and all important matters to deal with in the bath room are the fixtures—which are seen; and the plumbing pipes, such as water supplies, wastes and vents—which are not seen.

When building a house it is important to specify that a water service of ample size is laid in from the street to the house—certainly not less than a 1 in. pipe to supply two bath rooms and the kitchen. The branch piping to the various fixtures, such as sinks, tubs, baths, basins and toilets, should not be less than three-quarter in. diameter and no faucet less than half in.

When renting a house be sure of a good water supply by turning on the bath and basin faucets and the toilet, at the same time, and if the pressure is steady and full, it will indicate that the supply pipes are of sufficient size.

It is a provoking waste of time waiting for your kitchen utensils, or the bath or basin to fill. This annoyance can be entirely done away with by installing proper size water mains. The same advice applies to the waste pipes. They should be large enough to carry off the waste water from all the fixtures quickly. The waste from the sink, tubs and bath should be 2 in., and from the lavatory 1½ in.; these sizes will be sufficient to give quick emptying facilities.

In considering the kind of fixtures to be installed in the bathroom, it will assist you greatly if you get illustrated catalogues of plumbing fixtures issued by the manufacturers. Choose a bath of the "built-in" type; that is, one made to set on the floors without legs, and that can be built into the walls. Porcelain is too expensive for the average house, and the cast iron enamelled bath—first quality—will last a life time.

If a shower is installed it will be necessary to provide a rubber curtain, which can be hung with rings and rod as shown in the illustration. A thermostat mixer control for the shower supply is more or less of a luxury, but will certainly obviate any chances of the water being dangerously hot.

The labatory should be of the pedestal pattern, now made in so many appropriate and simple designs; and the toilet of the best glazed earthenware syphon-action, wash-down type, with an enamelled iron flushing tank, and an enamelled hardwood seat. It is always well to see the fixtures in action, that you propose buying, and then you will not be disappointed when they are installed. To change a plumbing fixture after the piping has been "roughed in" to take a particular type, is an expensive item.

The walls of the bath room should be tiled to a height of 3 ft. 6 in. and 6 ft. high around the bath; or, if this costs too much, they can be lined with oil cloth, and then painted two coats of flat paint and one coat of enamel in white, or a very pale color.

The floors can be tiled, or covered with inlaid linoleum of small black and white design. A rubber or cork bath mat will be found of great service, both for comfort and wear.

Provide a good mirror near properly located lights, and a shelf to hold toilet articles when in service. Do not put the cupboard over the basin, it generally means removing everything off the shelf when you want to open the door. Towel racks in plenty, and recessed holders for tumblers and soap, should be conveniently placed, and also a wicker hamper for soiled towels. A medicine cabinet can be conveniently placed in this room, and a small cupboard for towels.

You owe this much to yourself and to your family—to ascertain that the plumbing has been put in your house by a reliable contractor. When buying or renting a house, have a plumbing test made by the local Sanitary authorities, who will issue a certificate stating that the drains and plumbing are in good sanitary condition. Question—How do you test a flue o see if it is spark proof?

Build a fire in the base of the flue of green wood or anything that will make a considerable amount of smoke. Stop the flue above the roof. Observe the chimney stack to see if smoke escapes.

SHORT STORY

UNDER AN AWNING
By Ruby Douglas

Nora had been caught in an early autumn shower, and the only shelter at hand was under an awning that shaded a corner shop. The rain had changed the drab stripes into a brilliant hue that was a cross between moonlight and sunlight. Certainly that old awning was at its best during a shower. It fairly gleamed in its lovely colors.

Standing close against the tapes tried brick of the building Nora was not unaware of the color scheme she helped to make. She was wearing a burnt orange sport silk frock with a soft French felt hat to match and as the light from the glorified canvas above her filtered through and framed her as if in a spotlight, she was a charming prisoner.

From his studio window opposite, Brooke Stammers saw the picture. Without wishing the young woman any ill luck, he hoped that the shower would keep her captive long enough for him to get a sketch of her on his easel. He was, because he was young and had been out of art school so short a time, a commercial artist. He made sketches for advertising house-furnishings, garden equipment, tailored garments, textile specialties and what not. He did not like to use his art this way but he had to keep the proverbial pot boiling.

Just now he did not know whether it would be for an awning firm or an umbrella manufacturer that he would make this lovely picture. He even went so far as to pull his binoculars from their case on the wall in order to get a better idea of the features of Nora as she stood, all unconscious of his gaze, waiting for the storm to abate.

By the time she had ventured forth, Brooke had a very creditable sketch on his easel and he had the colors firmly in his mind.

"It's funny—when you're at your wits' end for an idea how—out of the sky, as it were—one will come to you," he said to himself.

All that night he sat at his easel, his hair tousled, his hunger unappeased, his need of rest unheeded, painting the girl as he remembered her under the awning across the street. Somehow, he could not bring himself to make an advertisement of the work.

But he worked as he had never worked and the picture fairly lived before him at the end of a week.

When it was finished, he found leading from many another opportunity for creative work. So the pot bubbled nicely even without sacrificing his rainy-day girl. This work did not take all his time and he found himself with more time to study.

Several students pounced in upon him one evening as he sat looking alternately at his painting and out of the window, lest the original might pass again.

"Not too bad, Brooke, old man," said another.

"Getting ready for the Royal Academy or something like that?" twitted a third.

Brooke smiled and smoked and continued his watch.

"You know I believe I've seen that girl," announced Bob Selwyn.

Brooke looked at him sharply.

"Well, why not? Is she so mysterious?" asked one of them. "Probably you happened along when Brooke was painting her, nothing more likely."

"And probably he didn't" said Brooke, firmly. "I do not know her."

Bob Selwyn looked closely. "Yes—by the gods, it is the same girl. Dress and hat and all. I swear I saw her the day I got films for my camera."

"Where?" asked Brooke.

"She had just come in from lunch after having been caught in a shower. She works in an art shop over on Lexington."

"Funny," murmured Brooke.

But he was a distrait host the remainder of the evening and the boys, leaving early, agreed that his art was going to his head.

It did not take him long to brush his hat and start off in the direction of Lexington Avenue the following morning.

This distinction proved to be an obscure but apparently flourishing and exclusive little shop on the uptown side of the street.

It may have been Fate, it may have been coincidence—call it by any name—but just as he discovered Nora back in the shadows within, it began to rain, gently, softly, but surely. It had been cloudy but until the first drops fell, Brooke had not thought of the weather. Now, he fairly sang with joy. He could go inside to get out of the wet.

"Oh—a—just looking about until the shower is over—if you don't mind," he stammered as Nora, with grace and beauty of a queen, approached him.

"Certainly," she said, flashing a smile that dazzled his poor embarrassed, nervous self into a state that made him anything but proud of his behaviour.

Then they talked of this and that—which is permissible.

At last, he could contain his secret no longer and he told her the whole story.

"And you will bring it down?" she was asking when a client arrived, a very important person, apparently.

"Today—just before lunch," said Brooke.

The painting of the girl taking shelter from the shower proved to be the turning point in Brooke Stammers' career. The canvas was exhibited early that winter and won honorable mention.

MILK SHORTAGE IN THIS DISTRICT

DEMAND GREATER.

Reports from all over the Province go to show the serious shortage of milk. In almost every locality, due to weather conditions, the milk supply has been very appreciably shortened.

Peterborough County is no exception, and the production and supply is considerably below normal. This is regrettable as this district would have benefitted a very great deal by a large supply, due to the fact that the Peterborough Milk Products have contracts for condensed milk for export that would have used up any available surplus. As it is, the company is endeavoring to secure, from districts which it hitherto did not enter, a supply of milk to meet its demands, and even with every effort being put forth is unable to take care of the orders for condensed milk for export that are on hand.

It would seem that the dairy farmer, while he practically has his market the year round, is subject to an unusual condition this year, and finds himself unable to produce all the milk and cream that is demanded.

The demand for both milk and cream as years go by, is always in excess of the previous year, and the dairy farmer is looked upon as the prosperous farmer in these times. The Peterborough Milk Products are advertising to pay 42c per lb. butter-fat, which is an exceptionally good figure for milk.

CAMPOBELLO

Q. Were is Campobello?

A. Campobello Island lies between Passamaquoddy Bay and the Bay of Fundy just on the Canadian (New Brunswick) side of the International Boundary separating New Brunswick from the State of Maine. It is irregular in shape an its shores abound in picturesque cliffs chasms and beaches. From 1767 to 1880 the island belonged to William Owen and his descendants but in the latter year it was purchased by a syndicate of Boston and New York capitalists, who have spent a large sum on its development, and later it became a summer resort. The resident inhabitants number 1200, and the island forms a township of Charlotte County, New Brunswick.

A FLAT RATE FOR POWER.

The United Farmers of Ontario at their convention in Toronto last week declared in favour of a flat rate for Hydro-electric power.

This is a pet scheme of the U.F.O., and has been steadily advanced by the organization since it became active in public affairs.

Nobody will deny the desirability of extending the benefits of Hydro power to the rural sections of Ontario as widely and cheaply as possible.

Electric power is a great boon to the farmer and he should be given as favourable a chance as possible to use it.

The Ontario Government has recognized this fact by providing generous assistance toward the construction of rural power lines.

But beyond this it does not seem desirable nor feasible to go.

The theory of a flat rate for power is not any more practicable than to expect the railways to carry a consignment of freight as cheaply 500 miles as 15.

Nor does it take any consideration of the fact that the Hydro-electric scheme is a municipal as well as a Provincial organization.

A CALL TO SERVICE.

While the official nominations may disclose a wealth of unexpected aldermanic strength, the present outlook in regard to next year's Council is hardly reassuring to those who recognize that managing the affairs of Peterboro has developed into big business.

There are many citizens in Peterboro capable of good work on the Council board, men who have made good in their own line of endeavour and whose judgment and business training would be of great service to their fellow-citizens.

The ranks of such organizations as the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs could contribute two or three capable Councils and leave plenty of material over.

To such men, The Examiner would point out, there is a very real call to service at the present time.

There is work to be done at the City Hall, interesting work, helpful work, worth-while work.

Next year's Council will have many important problems to decide.

The manner in which they are decided will directly or indirectly affect everybody in the community, and have much to do with whether Peterboro is to go ahead or stagnate.

It is true that the only apparent reward for civic service is criticism, but to the man who can ignore the pin-prickings and look ahead to the satisfaction of knowing that he has contributed very materially to the advancement of the city he calls his home, the City Council offers a useful field of service.

The call is genuine; who will answer it?

ONTARIO'S FINANCIAL STRENGTH.

The growth of Ontario's debt from small proportions to 324 million dollars must be startling to old-timers who are not aware of the reasons for the increase, says The Toronto Star. Outsiders, too, cannot help being impressed by statements that the gross debt of the Province reaches $106 per capita. But figures giving the gross debt and the per capita debt completely misrepresent conditions unless they are accompanied by figures showing the revenue-producing assets, the cash on hand and accounts receivable. These items lop 200 million dollars off the gross debt of the Province and reduce the per capita net debt from $106 to $43.

At one time the Government of Ontario concerned itself mainly with the passing of laws, the administration of justice and the building of roads and with education of a rudimentary character. The people did not have much money and they used it sparingly. But gradually the idea developed that the Government should concern itself directly with the things that make for prosperity and happiness; that it should not only take better care of the sick, the aged, the orphaned and the underprivileged of all sorts, but also promote settlement, foster industry and make it possible, by advancing money to municipalities, for local communities to help themselves. That idea could be carried to dangerous extremes. But a survey of the Province today warrants the view that its application has been kept within bounds and has contributed greatly to Ontario's social welfare.

PROMOTION BY MERIT.

There is a storm in Hamilton over the appointment of a former member of the Legislature to a position which the majority of people in the Ambitious City think should have been filled by the promotion of a deputy who had had forty years' experience.

The case illustrates the soundness of having such appointments made by a Civil Service Commission, and stresses the desirability of defeating the effort that is being made by several Federal members to have the Federal commission abolished.

The commission plan is not perfect; it has disadvantages that are apparent, but at least it does away with the spectacle of trained and efficient civil servants being passed over in favor of men whose chief claim to appointments is their record of party service.

Such appointments, it can readily be realized, used to destroy all the ambition and zeal for service of members of the Civil Service.

If there was nothing to look forward to save the certainty that should a vacancy at the top occur it would be filled by a political worker and the trained deputy would remain where he was, it cannot be wondered at that many civil servants asked themselves whether or not the game was worth the candle and slumped in their work accordingly.

The Civil Service Commission represents promotion on merit, and the recognition of that principle has created a new spirit in the Civil Service.

It would be a pity indeed if that spirit were to be killed in favour of party patronage.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

The election of Roland Denne as a Director of the Little Lake Cemetery Board directs attention to the fact that the Denne family has been particularly generous in the time it has devoted to serving the public in connection with the Cemetery Board.

Mr. Denne's father, it will be remembered, was for a number of years a Director of the Little Lake Cemetery Company and served for some time as President of the board.

Mr. Denne's brother, T. H. G. Denne, followed his father's footsteps, first as a Director and afterwards as President of the organization.

Now the elder brother is succeeded by the younger, and the Denne service is maintained.

Not only upon the Cemetery Board but in many other capacities has the family done its part to further the interest of Peterboro.

In the realm of municipal affairs, the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, the Red Cross Society and other fields of activity the name has always been associated with good service and leadership.

The record of the family should be an example to citizens generally to devote some of their time and ability to assisting movements that have for their aim the betterment of Peterboro.

AN ALBERTA VIEW.

The Province of Ontario has gone back on its old liquor prohibition law and will now try something similar to the liquor control act in force in Algerta. Possibly you will not agree with me, but in the defeat of the Ontario prohibition act I read very hopeful indications for the future. In my judgment our prohibition friends throughout North America are attempting the impossible. They succeeded in foreing upon the Continent bone dry legislation at a time when not fifty per cent. of the population favored such law. The result has been that a new class of law breakers has been developed and a general feeling of contempt for law and order created where nothing of the sort existed before. The latest argument of the bone drys is that if only the prohibitory legislation can be continued long enough there will come a new generation which will have no knowledge of the liquor evil and no taste for the stuff. I am much afraid there is no justification for such an argument. To make that new generation perfectly safe it would be necessary to obliterate absolutely from the country any and all strong liquors. I am no prophet, but am willing to wager that this will never be accomplished. Far better to educate the rising generation to the dangers of the liquor traffic and develop its moral stamina to the point where it will be able to resist temptation, meanwhile controlling the traffic by such restrictions as will guarantee that the legitimate rights and privileges of the individual are safeguarded and the welfare of the community protected.

* * * *

Nowhere have I ever read that the Christ, who is the Christian world's great example, advocated the elimination of any of the world's temptations as a means whereby men might be made strong morally or spiritually. He lived His own life in the midst of these temptations and withstood their lure. His example is before the world today, and men and women who look at life seriously make honest effort to follow His example. How they are going to do it if we legislate all temptation out of their way is more than I can understand. We need the mental exercise that comes in the fight with temptations to develop that strength of character which ultimately will make us immune to temptation. Getting this thought firmly fixed in our minds will enable us to understand what was meant when it was recorded that His followers were "in the world but not of it." Remember that while hothouse bloom is very fair it will fade quickly if subjected to other than hothouse conditions. This world is no hothouse.—The Alberta Farmer.

ITALY AND THE ADRIATIC.

Italy has again aroused suspicion in the Balkans and some uneasiness among the greater European powers by a secret treaty with Albania, which, its is claimed, gives her cetrain privileges of protection over that country and by which, it is feared in Jugo-Slavia, she may pave the way for assuming a protectorate over Albania. According to the Italian Government the treaty will be registered with the League of Nations, but until the details of the treaty become known it will not be possible to determine how far these fears are justified.

There are, however, fairly substantial reasons for the hostile attitude displayed by Jugo-Slavia. The latter country, which includes the former Serbia has very limited access to the Adriatic Sea. Her hopes of obtaining possession of the seaport of Fiume with the post-war settlement of national boundaries were frustrated, largely through the filibustering expedition of the Italian poet, d'Annunzio, at a time when the tide of opinion among the peace statesmen was largely favorable to the Jugo-Slav cause. The final settlement making it an independent port was practically a victory for Italy and deprived Jugo-Slavia of the hoped-for possession of a valuable seaport. Good harbors on the east coast of the Adriatic are few and somewhat difficult of access and two of the more valuable of these are within Albania, which lies opposite southern Italy and separates a large part of Jugo-Slavia from the sea. The control of these by Italy would naturally be felt as a blow at the freedom of use by largely inland country such as Jugo-Slavia with few other important outlets.

In addition to these practical considerations of commerce, the Jugo-Slavs see in the new treaty the pursuit of imperial ambitions by Italy designed to give greater power in the Balkans and Mediterranean. These have ben voiced openly by Mussolini and received exprssion years before his advent to power by a fairly influential Nationalist party which failed to maintain its claims at the time of the peace settlement, however. Control of Albania by Italy would give teh latter country full supremacy as mistress of the Adriatic Whether this is the real purpose remains to be seen. Italy claims that the treaty's main purpose is to ensure stable conditions in Albania where there have been periodical revolutions injurious to trade and commerce.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The man who has done all his Christmas shopping would be able to enjoy watching others doing the last-minute scramble if he didn't have to realize how little money he has left.

It is said that the moon did some queer stunts in the colour line early Sunday morning. The demonstration was a disappointment, however, to several citizens who claimed that they could get better results any night from a drink or two of moonshine.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

THINKING AND RELIGION
By Dr. Frank Crane.

The Right Reverend Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, recently said in a sermon at St. John's Cathedral that Christianity demands thinking.

This seems to controvert a commonly believed notion that we only believe a thing because it is impossible.

The ordinary conception of prayer, for instance, is that of the Scotchman who prayed, "Lord, please have two and two make five."

It all depends on what you think religion is.

If it is a mere means of getting safely into heaven perhaps the best plan is to leave the whole matter in the hands of the church. Turn your thinking over to it and it will attend to the matter for you. It is your business only to believe and the church will take care of the consequences.

If, however, your opinion of religion is that it is one of the means of making the world a better place to live in, that opinion certainly requires all the intelligence you have. It takes brains to think of better economic conditions, and brains to erect the social structure in such a way as to give the unfortunate man a chance.

Altogether the modern conception of religion is that it takes a good deal of mentality to be a first-class Christian. It is really a struggle between medievalism and modernism.

It is unfortunate that the term "free thinking" was ever made the antithesis of religion. A good test of whether your particular brand of religion is wholesome or not is how it affects your thinking. If it stimulates it and encourages it, if it gives your thinking poise and stability and is helpful to you in forming intelligent opinions, it is a good religion. But if it stands at every crossway and raises a forbidding hand, saying you shall not go here or there, if its main effect is to limit and stop your thinking, it is hardly to be desired.

The Bible links up unthinking people with wicked people. It calls the wicked fools. This is because religion is the highest form of intelligence. It is intelligence carried to the nth degree.

Those who follow the moral laws and feel them are acting in accordance with the wisdom of the universe and of the ages. They very properly distrust their own conclusions, for they have confidence in the cosmic conclusions.

PAINTER OF KING HAS WITHDRAWN

Charles Sims Resigns Academy Posts Because Portrait Was Criticized.

NOW IN NEW YORK.

LONDON, Dec. 20. United News.—Charles Sims, whose painting of King George V., was withdrawn from the Royal Academy recently after a storm of criticism over the work, has withdrawn as trustee and keeper of that institution. Sims is now in New York.

It is believed that his action is the sequel to the withdrawal of his portrait of his prominent subject. The objection to the work was directly chiefly to the legs given the king.

Sims has been trustee and keeper of the Royal Academy since 1920. He is 53 years old, and has g ld medals taken at the expositions held in Amsterdam and in Pittsburgh. His works are noted among art connoisseurs throughout the world.

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE

QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO HEALTH & DIET WILL BE ANSWERED BY DR. McCOY WHO CAN BE ADDRESSED IN CARE OF THIS PAPER

THINKING OF HEALTH

It is impossible to become sick, unless one violates the laws of life, which include both the physical and mental. It is natural to be well, and sickness is the inevitable result of breaking the fixed rules of nature.

For personal comfort, it is unwise to live haphazardly, and also one's duty to society demands that the most efficient habits should be practiced. It does not seem to me an important point whether or not man came from monkey, but that man should not now make a monkey of himself.

Most people stagger through life imitating the actions of others and repeating parrot-like what they hear others say. Physical habits are copied, even though bad results are sure to follow. Likewise habits of thought are copied from others and one can easily get into the bad habit of reflecting the habits of others and not using enough original thought.

No one consciously has a desire to be sick, yet health is not as much talked about as illness. How few boast of how well they feel and how many complain of their symptoms!

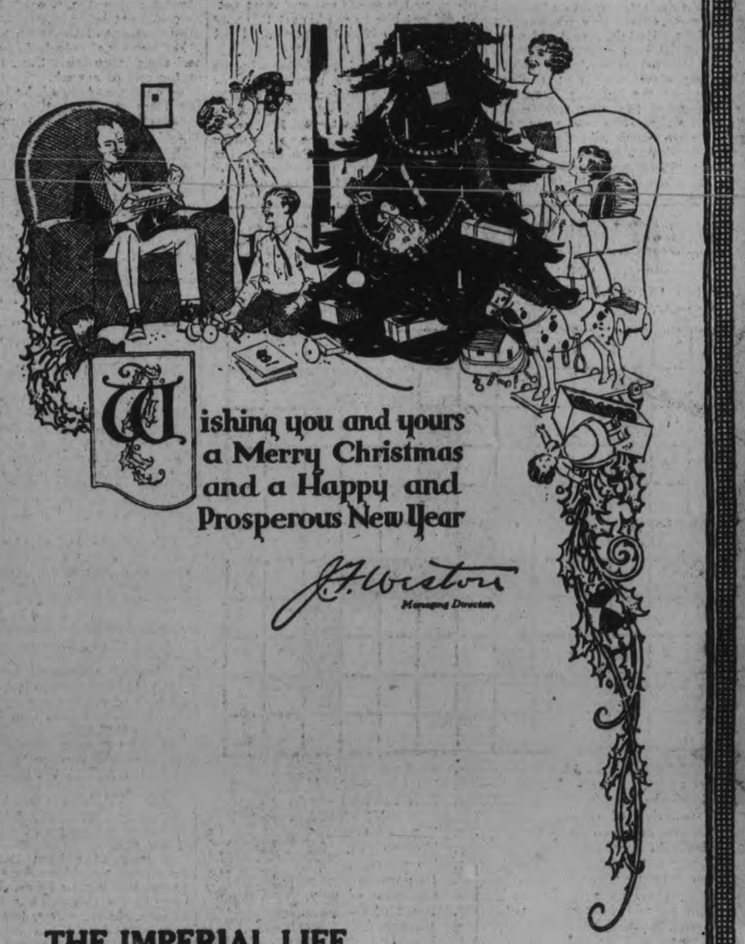
Of course, my profession compels me to listen to the most fantastic descriptions of ailments. This must necessarily be, as yet in crowded street cars, in social circles and everywhere, I hear sickness discussed. Fairy tales of difficult operations are heard, and one is forever forced to listen to unpleasant descriptions of real or imaginary diseases. In reality the physical disease may be only a minor one, but the practice of painting word pictures of it always leads to magnifying the trouble and every time the story is repeated a new adjective is added as with any other story so that after numerous repetitions a simple ailment becomes a horrible disease in the mind of the story teller. The unconscious mind, which retains memories of every thought and of every word spoken is soon full of only unwholesome thoughts and as like attracts like, a vicious mental complex is created which actually encourages and anticipates a real disease.

All the hygiene in the world cannot correct this unhealthy mental state and only a return to healthy thinking will allow a cure to be obtained. When everyone around you is thinking and talking in terms of sickness it is indeed difficult to use healthful words and think in terms of health, yet this very thing can be accomplished and must be done if one is to realize health more abundantly. If your vocabulary is full of words describing worry, anger, hatred, envy, gloom, discouragement, revenge or any other mental state of a similar nature, start now to think and talk in words of love, hope, joy, praise and begin to find all the good things you can speak of to your friends about themselves of any of the ordinary affairs of life.

If you will try this plan, and at the same time honestly strive to correct your physical habits, eat wisely, exercise well and build a clean body, you will soon see the results of such practice, and not only help yourself, but be a radiating example of health to your friends, who will want you to tell them the secret.

DOG IS CHURCH MEMBER.

WOODMAN'S MILLS, Me. Dec. 18.—Jennie, H. L. Jackson's dog, is getting famous for attending church here. When she hears the church bell ring she starts off, and if Jackson is not with her when the door is opened she goes in, looks around, and takes her place in one of the pews. One Sunday she attended without her master, and when it was time for Sunday school the dog went to the Jackson pew and lay down. When the school closed, she stretched and was ready for home.



Wishing you and yours a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year

ELEVATOR FIRE LOSS $250,000

WORKMEN ESCAPE.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 18. —Fire which destroyed the workhouse of the N. M. Paterson and Company elevator yesterday afternoon caused damage which is estimated at around a quarter of a million dollars. It is supposed that the fire started in the drier section of the warehouse, and the flames, which broke out about 2 o'clock, made remarkably rapid progress. Of the 28 men employed in the workhouse some were at the top of the building, which is 150 feet high, and they had to make their exit across the conveyor to the mammoth tanks section. All escaped unhurt.

It is stated that there was $75,000 worth of grain in the workhouse, and this is fully insured. The workhouse building and equipment was insured for $160,000. The blaze was an awesome spectacle when the lofty building was enveloped in flames. The fire department concentrated on keeping the fire away from the tanks section. In the tanks adjacent to the workhouse, grain may have been damaged by the the intense heat, but this is not known yet. The walls of the tanks are of solid concrete, and it is probable that any damage in these will be light.

The fire came at a particularly inopportune time, as the plant was working constantly at full capacity.

FIRE DESTROYS SUMMER RESORT

LOSS HEAVY.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 20. — A disastrous fire occurred at Healey Falls on Thursday evening about 7.30, when the home owned by Mr. W. Rylott and rented by Mr. and Mrs. A. Althouse, was burned to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Althouse had gone across the river to Mr. McDonald's and knew nothing of the fire until the alarm was sent along the neighbors' phones. It is presumed the fire was due to overheated pipes or chimney.

Mr. Charles Kellar was the first to notice the flames and immediately neighbors were on the scene, but nothing could be done to save the house. Some of the contents from downstairs was saved, but there was a heavy loss of furniture, bedding, fruit, etc. This loss is particularly heavy as Mrs. Althouse runs a summer resort and had huge quantities of fruit and bedding for summer use.

The loss is partially covered by insurance.

SEVERE QUAKES SHAKE LISBON

First Heavy Shock Felt on Saturday—Rivers Rise.

LISBON, Portugal, December 20. —Canadian Press. — Lisbon has experienced a severe earthquake. The first shock on Saturday lasted for 10 seconds. It was accompanied by subterranean noises, the waters of the Tagus river rose considerably and soon the surface was covered with thousansd of fish.

Cafes, theatres and business houses were hurriedly vacated; the facade of the central railway station was cracked from top to base. Trains were delayed for several hours while a thorough examination was made of the tunnels.

Another shock occurred at six o'clock yesterday morning, many buildings being badly shaken.

COLLEGE MEN TODAY BETTER THAN DADS

Freshmen Are Taller and Have Bigger Chests Than 25 Years Ago.

"A careful study of the college freshman of today shows that he is a better man physically than was his father when he entered college. The change, of course, has been small, but it has been in the right direction. I think that this improvement has been brought about by supervised athletics and physical training in preparatory schools."

Such is the statement of Dr. William G. Anderson, director of the Yale University gymnasium, in an interview reported by Arthur Grahame in the January issue of Popular Science Monthly.

Each freshman, shortly after he enters college, receives a thorough physical examination. The data obtained from these examinations has been tabulated and studied, and they reveal the following things about the average freshman of today, as compared with the average freshman of twenty-five years ago:

The freshman of the present is taller. He has gained, according to the figures, a full inch in height. This increase in height perhaps is more apparent than real, for possibly it is a result of better posture. The average young man of today stands up straighter than did the average young man of twenty-five years ago.

The freshman of the present has a better chest. He has gained an inch in chest measurement. He is a few months younger, and about a pound lighter. According to the latest available figures, he is a few months under nineteen years old. His height is 5 feet 9.9 inches; his chest measures 36.7 inches, and he weighs 144.2 pounds.

"While this improvement is encouraging," says Dr. Anderson, "it does not mean that most of the young men who come to college now are free from physical defects. In a recent freshman class 339 men were round-shouldered, 162 flat-chested 285 had kyphosis, or stooped shoulders, and most of them had lateral curvature of the spine. Nearly a hundred of them had flat feet and were threatened with fallen arches.

Far back in the days when Mr. Pickwick travelled by coach to spend Christmas with his friend the Squire at Wardle Manor—when the gay tra-la-la of the horn brought mine host out a-running at every stopping place to greet travellers—tables were loaded with rich foods and with sweetmeats galore for the joyous feasts of the season, for Christmas time called forth the best that one could provide.

And so to-day do we think and plan for the best at Christmas time. We choose Moirs—the finest of chocolates—to carry our greetings far and near, for in Moirs we may be sure of finding the individual gift that will make us remembered so pleasantly.

The variety offers a wonderful range of choice—smooth delicately flavored creams, crisp crunchy taffies, rich nut meats and blended confections that express the candy maker's art in marvellous fashion—all enclosed in chocolate that is at once a dream and a delight.

REGRET DEPARTURE OF J. C. STRICKLAND

County Roads Committee Passes Resolution of Regret.

At the meeting of the County Good Roads Committee yesterday at the Court-House the members expressed their regrets at losing Reeve J. C. Strickland of Lakefield and former Warden of the County of Peterboro in the following resolution:

Moved by Mr. Flood, seconded by Mr. Montgomery,

That the members here assembled give expression to their regrets at losing Mr. J. C. Strickland as a member of the County Council, and more particularly as a result of moving from the County and Village of Lakefield.

The village loses an able representative and valued citizen and the county loses one in whom the affairs of the county can ill afford to lose. We trust that the change may still bring greater fields for his untiring energy and splendid ability, and that he and his wife and family may enjoy the advantages they so richly deserve. Our community's loss is Toronto's gain, but we rejoice to know that wherever he may locate, he will be an acquisition to such community.

MUSIC AND INDUSTRY.

By Arthur Mason, in "Music."

Industrial trouble is admittedly one of the worst of these hindrances to progress which are always confronting a nation. It is a lion in the path — sometimes no more than an angrily growling lion, but trol. Any influence therefore which can do anything whatever to create even so, uttering threats of what may happen which quite effectually check the advances of those who hear them. And too often its threats are translated into deeds, with the result of catastrophes that retard in every direction the national growth.

Our own country recently has been conspicuously beset by industrial trouble. Not all of it, of course can be attributed to circumstances set up by the people themselves who make the trouble, for some of those circumstances obviously are forced upon them from without. A great deal of industrial trouble, nevertheless, expresses discontent which, if it does not arise from within, certainly is fed by passion, self-will, self-esteem, human failings, and, as such, capable of control. Any thing whatever to create or to develop a tendency to self-control and thus to minimize the tendency of the uncontrolled to leap at a touch into violent activity, must be a beneficial influence in respect of such of our industrial trouble as arises from that cause.

Music, without doubt, is such an influence. Over and over again it has proved its power to soothe the feelings, to lighten the heart, to "raze out the rooted troubles of the brain," and even to "minister to the mind diseased." It is quite reasonable, therefore, to urge that in the matter of industrial trouble, music by its capacity to alleviate some of the mental conditions which ultimately results in industrial trouble, is not without its value.

The use of music in factories and workshops is increasingly favored by employers. For what reason? Because it is known that music is enjoyed by workers, influences their outlook, adds to their conditions of work an attractiveness not otherwise there, and by means of all this stimulates their own working capacity. It is distinctly a pleasure to the workers. It makes for their contentment, and the more contented the worker is the less likely is he to be enamoured of industrial trouble.

Leisure Hours.

It is probable, further, that no small part of the industrial trouble, as of other kinds of trouble, is the result of unprofitable use of leisure hours. Nothing is more likely to develop discontent, to exaggerate grievances or generally to fan the flame of rebellion again things as they are, than the state of mind which is induced by ill-spent leisure hours. To fill the idle hours with healthy pursuits, to replace the time wasted in valueless frivolities or worse, with wholesome amusement—is the aim of numberless organizations which exist to combat a danger they know to be serious. And these organizations are among the keenest of the advocates of music as just the mind filling pleasure unoccupied people need. For they are well aware that music, more than most things else, can save the man with nothing in particular to do from that state of mental vacancy in which every folly has room to grow, and every quack remedy for the ills he knows has opportunity to tempt him towards the ills he knows not of. It is for this reason of the value of music as a mental influence that the business houses all over the country make provision for it in their welfare schemes; that house bands, or house choral societies, or opera societies are more and more regarded as repaying over and over again the time and money they cost, and that to provide music in some shape or form for the leisure hours of their employees is increasingly the concern of employers.

Music As Pleasure.

Industrial trouble is often fomented by a multitude of small and apparently unimported details in the dissatisfaction many people have in respect of the work in which they are engaged. For one reason or another it become a drudgery to them, and the less possible it is for them to escape from it, the more lively they are to rebel against the condition which have forced it upon them. The provision of music in working hours and in leisure hours, referred to above as an activity of employers and social organizations, is intended to ease this sense of dissatisfaction by means of a pleasure which at least prevents the dissatisfied mind from dwelling injuriously upon its grievance. But the individual concerned may do much to work out his own salvation in that regard.

Music for Cheerfulness

Let any man who is disgruntled by the monotony of a distasteful occupation turn to music for relief, and that relief will almost surely follow. There is recreation in it, there is refreshment in it, there is that in it which calms, or solaces, or invigorates, or inspires. The lilt of a tune dances into the brain, and far off and forgotten things take shape and live again; the heart is warmed, old memories stir, old pleasures are recalled—that is one of music's ways of dispelling the mark of discontent. It is a cheery presence. It enlivens, and it uplifts. The sunshine of it plays across the spirit, and the shadows upon the heart fade out and vanish. In the light of that power of music, what place is there for the gloom of an imaginary injury?

Music For the Elevation of Mind.

And that cheerfulness of music, that power of it to fill the mind with rememberance of things worth recall, is only one of its manifold ways of helping the music lover out of the rut of monotony, or anxiety, or depression. Music can do far more for a music lover than please him merely. It can lift him to new levels or outlook; it can suggest to him many subjects of thought far better worth his while than those which are habitually and inevitably encouraged by so many of the near at hand things of every day. And to be inspired to thought boro, and Rev. Harold Stainton, a is the first step towards action. The elevated, the pleasant, the cheery, the ennobling moods which music can inspire, are the very goods a man needs to lessen the weight of his worries and to ease his quarrel with misfortune. It is not conceivable, then, that the appeal of music may be of use in respect even of the industrial trouble, so much of which has its origin in men's personal anxieties and their desire to escape them?

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Mrs. Lane had given Faith a thorough old-fashioned training in housekeeping in all its manifold branches. Mrs. Lane's mother and her grandmother before her had dedicated Saturday to baking, silver-polishing, mirror-polishing, floor waxing and marketing, so that the whole house from kitchen pantry to parlor should be spick and span for Sunday.

Faith followed the tradition slavishly, though she sometimes rebelled at baking innumerable loaves of bread for an insatiable family, when baker's bread actually cost less and its purchase would have given her many precious hours of freedom.

On the Saturday following Mr. Cluny's ceremonious visit for the purpose of asking Cherry's parents for her hand in marriage, Faith went doggedly on with the traditional Saturday's work, though her heart was heavy with foreboding. Every nook and cranny of the shabby little Myrtle Street house was fragrant with the spicy odors of new-baked yeast bread, ham roasted with cloves and cinnamon bark, "marble" cake, chocolate layer cake, raisin-nut cookies, mince pies and vegetable soup.

For the last named, all the left-over vegetables of the week, kept sweet and fresh in covered mason jars in the ice box, were thrown into the big iron kettle, to be used as the main meal for Saturday night supper, as an important part of every meal during the coming week, or as long as it lasted. There was precious little waste in the Lane kitchen.

Faith was rubbing evaporated milk over the rich crust of the last mince pie, just before popping it into the oven—the film of cream to be transformed in the baking into a rich, crackly glaze over the entire crust of the lordly pie—when the door bell rang.

"You answer it, Joy," Faith spoke to her little sister, who was "licking" the bowl in which the marble cake had been mixed. "Here, wipe your face! You've got cake batter on the tip of your nose and under your left eye. Piggy! If it's a canvasser, tell him the lady of the house isn't in, and won't be."

The mince pie had joined its twin in the oven, and Faith was just turning the beautifully brown spice cake out of its round pan upon a folded tea towel, when Joy returned.

"Oh, Lordy! Guess who it is!" Joy whispered, her sharp little gray eyes protruding with a queer mixture of horror and self-importance. "The school principal—Miss Peabody!"

"Show her in here," Faith's heat-flushed face darkened with annoyance. "Mother's special custard is in the double boiler, and I have to watch it every minute." As Joy seemed to be on the point of frightened flight out of the back door, Faith whirled upon her. "Do as I tell you, Joy Lane! And if you've been up to any devilment at school, I'll spank you! I'll bet you know why she's come!"

"Honest, I don't!" Joy turned slowly back toward the dining room. "Gee, she's an old hell-cat! Well, gosh, that's not cussin'! And that's just what she is."

When Joy returned to the kitchen, she was leading the way for a very tall and very large and very imposing woman of middle age, a woman who looked as if she seldom smiled, but whose cold blue eyes were now beaming cordially behind thick-lensed glasses.

"Surely you're not Mrs. Lane, Joy's mother? You look so very young," she extended a large, firm hand, which Faith clasped after wiping her own hands free of flour.

"I'm Faith Lane, Joy's sister," she explained. "I'm sorry to have to receive you in here, but you've caught me in the midst of my Saturday baking. Joy, bring Miss Peabody a chair from the dining room."

"What marvelous loaves of bread!" Miss Peabody's active eyes were darting greedily over the kitchen table, every inch of which was covered with great brown loaves, crisp Parker House rolls and fat raisin buns. "I'm so sorry you were not able to come to the Parent-Teachers' meeting yesterday, Miss Lane. This is my first year here you know. I've been principal of the Upton school in Marlboro for fifteen years."

"Marlboro!" Faith repeated, at a loss for words.

"Yes, I'm a first cousin of Mr. Seymour—Mr. Ralph Cluny's son-in-law, you know. I made my home with the Allbrights. Joy—what a dear child she is!—tells us some rather astonishing news, Miss Lane. Or maybe it was just a child's imagination running riot. We all know how children are! It really isn't lying, you know—just a vivid, creative imagination seeking expression. You are familiar with the new child psychology, I presume?"

Miss Peabody was talking very fast, and very brightly, but there was a hard edge of curiosity and a determination to have it satisfied that made her voice not half so pleasant in Faith's ears as its owner imagined it.

"Do you mind telling me just what Joy has been saying?" Faith was glad of the necessity to stir the cornstarch pudding in the double boiler, for it gave her an opportunity to turn her flushing face away from Miss Peabody's sharp eyes.

"Why—er—she says, or so the children told me, that her sister, or your sister, too, of course, is engaged to be married to Mrs. Allbright's father. It sounds quite ridiculous when put into words, doesn't it? But I thought it would be best to talk with her mother—or you—before disciplining her.

"Joy, you may take a couple of those raisin cookies and run out to play." Faith gave the red-faced, frightened child her release, with a long, level look that boded ill for Joy's future of the next few hours, then turned to face her inquisitor.

"I am afraid my little sister has been very indiscreet, Miss Peabody, but I can't let you think she was—lying—or whatever the new child psychology calls it.

"Mr. Cluny has asked my sister, Cherry, to marry him, and has asked my mother and father to sanction the engagement. My father has refused his permission." She said it proudly with head held high, and brown eyes burning with a steady, angry fire, but she did not see fit to add that neither Cherry nor Mr. Cluny had for a moment conceded the importance of Mr. Lane's opposition.

"I am both immensely astonished and immensely relieved," Miss Peabody rose, the smile still beaming in her cold blue eyes. "I am spending Sunday with the Allbrights in Marlboro, and I shall certainly tell them of your father's sensible stand in the matter."

"You will of course use your own judgment, Miss Peabody, but I wish you would not mention the matter in any way. I do not believe Mr. Cluny has had time to inform his relatives of his intentions in regard to Cherry and I think the news should come to them through him."

Miss Peabody's lips set in a line calculated to strike horror to the hearts of prankish school children. "I shall indeed use my own judgmnt, Miss indeed use my own judgment, Miss Lane."

TIME TO SHARE

"Don't you want to play Santa Claus to me?" this wistful specimen of young Canada is saying. He's typical of a lot of youngsters who will have empty stockings on Christmas morning unless folks who have plenty thoughtfully share with him.

SAYS NOT SURE WHETHER GIRL WILL RECOVER

Doctor's Opinion of Injury To Marion Hopcroft in Motor Fatality.

INTELLIGENCE TESTS.

Similar Cases Known To Have Recovered in Five Years.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—It is impossible to state whether Marion Hopcroft will ever recover from the injuries she sustained when a merry party of youthful motorists was wrecked in a collision on the Highway, the young man, who sat beside her, being killed. Such was the testimony of Dr. Goldwin W. Harland, associate professor of medicine in Toronto University, who was on the witness stand yesterday at the trial of the $20,000 damages' action brought by Miss Hopcroft against John Bouer, owner of the ill-starred automobile and father of the youth who was killed.

Dr. Howland said that the girl was evidently suffering from defective memory, inability to work, and also had pains in head and other symptoms. It is a long time now since the accident, although recoveries have been known in such cases after five years.

Replying to Mr. Justice Grant, the doctor stated that emotional effects observed in this case are due to the direct injury.

X-Ray Plates Deceptive

The doctor was subjected to a vigorous examination by George Wilkie, K.C., counsel for the defence.

"What injury did you find to the head?" "I found no injury myself simply the marks, and the X-Ray plates. I came to my opinion before I examined the plates."

"Since you examined the plates have you found a fracture?" "X-Ray plates are so deceptive, it is impossible to say."

"Did you know that prior to your examination she had had tonsils taken out?" "Yes."

"Did it make any difference to your opinion?" "No."

Tonsils and Adenoids

Mr. Wilkie and the witness argued about adenoids and tonsils, from which it emerged that the doctor did not consider this factor affected the girl's symptoms at all during his examination for memory, etc.

Judge: "Not having known the girl before, how could you judge as to her memory?" "From her statements and her record, and as to normal memory powers."

"Did you consider at all why two apparently reputable doctors should take out her tonsils and adenoids?" asked Mr. Wilkie. "No, I consider that a minor point."

Testing Her Intelligence

Intelligence tests to which the young woman had been subjected by him were described in detail by the doctor. He found her varying in her answers. In the system set for such cases the questions differ according to the age of the patient. She could not count some money correctly.

"Simply mis-addition," remarked Mr. Wilkie. "Well, that is one instance. What next?" "I asked her other questions set."

"What?" "You leave the town and go to your country home; all the way is uphill, and you come back uphill all the way."

"That is the question, eh?" "Yes, she said that was all right."

"And what did you conclude?" "The conclusion was that she was not intelligent enough to see that you can't both climb to your home and climb away from it."

"That is one of the set intelligence questions?" "Yes."

"Now, I noticed also only yesterday that the plaintiff in the box was very confused, hesitant and uncertain in replying to questions.'

Replying to the judge the doctor stated that when a person has not had so long an educational learning at school it would not be expected that an educational test alone would be so fair as one including general intelligence also.

"In order to satisfy yourself you would have to go back to data obtaining elsewhere as to conditions relating to her life prior to the accident," remarked his lordship. "And isn't there a danger of your conclusions being effected—doubtless subconsciously—or differing in some degree through you knowing there had been an accident?"

"It might affect a view, perhaps, but not the discovered facts," the doctor replied.

All Right Before Accident

To Mr. Agar for the plaintiff Dr. Husband said that he could agree with the doctors who had said the girl was all right before the accident.

"Now, doctor," said his lordship, "in case the circumstances—the death of the boy, and the position the plaintiff is in by bringing this action against her young friend's father—do you think all this might cause her present emotional condition?" "No," replied the doctor.

Marion Davis, who was one of the passengners in the wrecked car, stated that it was going fast when the collision occurred.

No Signs of Liquor

County Constable Wm. Myers, who was at the scene soon after the smash, noted no signs of drink.

Constable George Stewart also told that he saw no signs of liquor.

Constable Robert Wing, and as was the case with the other officers he was put through an examination regarding skid marks, but none of them enlightened the court to any appreciable extent.

Henry G. Tyler of Long Branch saw the car turn over, but he could not estimate its speed.

POPE APPOINTS TWO CARDINALS, BOTH ITALIANS

CONSISTORY HELD.

The Pontiff offered prayer and delivered his allocution; then, after receiving the consent of the members of the Sacred College, he appointed two new Italian Cardinals, Giuseppe Gamba, Archbishop of Turin and Lorenzo Laurie, Nuncio of Poland.

He ended the ceremony by preconising various bishops, including Raymond E. M. Rouleau, Archbishop of Quebec, and Alfred Langlois, Bishop of Valleyfield, Quebec.

The Pontiff's allocution lasted fifty minutes. In it he again strongly denounced the "persecution" of the Roman Catholic Church in Mexico, urged the French Catholics to unite in the religious field although feeling free to follow the various political parties, and regretted the excesses against Roman Catholic organizations which occurred in Italy after the last attempt on the life of Mussolini.

Pope Pius enumerated events of rejoicing which occurred during the year, contrasting them with the sad and painful things which had occurred in various countries.

"We cannot help denouncing once more the persecution which for many months has raged in Mexico with inhuman ferocity," the Pontiff said. "In piety especially, according to news received at the last moment, it has become even more cruel."

The Pontiff added that the Mexican Government had even presecuted and crucified Christ not only in the Sacrament, but even in his image, the persecution extending inside private schools despite the protests of young students.

Miss Clysdale, the Superintendent, and her capable staff of teachers then served tea to over one hundred children, after which Santa Claus bounded in gladdening the heart of each boy and girl with a faily decorated box of nuts and candy.

Many of the mothers were also present and were entertained to afternoon tea.

It was pointed out in a recent magazine article that radio announcers are often chosen not only because they possess good voices, and enough education to pronounce all sorts of words and names correctly, but because they have some sort of "parlor tricks" that may be turned to account in case of the delay or absence of the announced performer. They may be able to tell funny stories, or play a violin or sing or crack jokes. And they must be able to turn their talents to account on a moment's notice.

Even if you aren't a radio announcer there are times when it is very helpful to be able to do some sort of entertaining trick or other. It is surprising how men and women—really clever ones, too—couldn't do a bit of entertaining if they had to. And surprising too how many there are who might be able to but would feel too shy to attempt.

Really, you owe it to your sons and daughters to see that each one of them is able to do something in the way of entertaining. If a girl has any sort of voice—she should know some really spirited songs well enough to sing them at short notice. The boy with an ear for music should play a banjo, mandolin or other stringed instrument. They can be encouraged even in childhood to tell a good story in an amusing way. Even the ability to clog dance or dance a jig is worth encouraging. Courses in first aid to the injured are considered necessary to the educational curriculum of up-to-date young people—first aid to boredom ought to be considered as rather important also.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

A Substitute Santa

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

In Six Parts—Part I

HOW IT ALL HAPPENED

IT was with immense surprise that I learned, as a child, that not all countries have a Santa like ours. It was a little hard to believe one could possibly have a Merry Christmas without hanging up stockings and waiting for Santa, but I learned that Santa is only the personification of the spirit of giving and that this spirit is the same the world over, even though its personal representation may assume a different shape. It is with the purpose of giving the children some idea of the customs attending Christmas Eve in different lands that the following rhyme is written.

THE reindeer were harnessed at Santa Claus' door
While a stable boy elf-man stood holding each head.
For 'twas time for old Santa to start with his toys,
But there he was, wrapped up in flannel instead!
He had caught a bad cold getting hot in the shop
And packing the toys mountain high in his sleigh;
So he sat by his fire, too ashy to shave,
And there it was Christmas the very next day!
He had taken much calomel, quinine and pills
And drunk fifteen quarts of hot, strong catnip tea,
He'd had a hot foot bath of mustard and salt
And still he was wobbly and weak as could be.
With a shiver he moaned, "It just never will do
To disappoint children because of sore throat,
Especially those who have been very good;
So staggering weakly he pulled on his coat.
Just then Mrs. Santa came hurrying in
And cried, "Now see here, you're just sick with the grippe,
You take off that coat and get right into bed,
And I'll dress in your clothes and be Santa this trip.
I'll carry your costumes to wear in each land,
And take Brumble Bok, the head elf-man, along
To lift out the toys and to drive the reindeer
And lend me a hand if a thing should go wrong.
I always have wanted to go on this trip,
And now is the first chance that's come to my hand;
To watch all the children enjoying their toys
And see Christmas Evening in civilized lands."
She dressed in a wink and bade Santa good-bye,
Then away o'er the tops of the glaciers she whirled
In the sleigh that is drawn by the magic reindeer
To play Santa Claus to all lands of the world.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

BRIDGE FIENDS

By Alma Whitaker.

I have just met a couple that interest me mightily. They are expert professional Bridge players. Bridge is their whole life. They earn a most prosperous living thereby.

And of course, now that Bridge is enjoying such a fashionable revival, after being slightly submerged by Mah Jhong, this couple are having a profitable time of it.

They travel around from town to town and organize Bridge clubs, and tournaments. They form classes for teaching Bridge, lessons for which are quite expensive. They have published a book on Bridge which sells rapidly under their clever salesmanship methods.

And they always play for money. Indeed, they assured me that the main thrill of the game was playing for money. Being experts they win with comfortable frequency.

To hear these people talk, one would imagine there was no interest in life outside of Bridge. Their idea of people who don't know Bridge, or knowing it, don't care to play it, is very much what the pastor feels about a person without any religion.

If by any remote chance someone does start another topic of conversation in their presence, they immediately draw Bridge parallels to point their ideas, and within a few seconds Bridge again holds the floor.

They can talk for hours about the rules of the game, explaining at copious lengths the subtleties of prescribed bids and methods of play. They can hold endless postmortems of games played, and remember back with frightful exactitude just what cards they held in a certain game in a certain city some months before.

These people breathe, eat, walk, talk bridge day in, day out, year after year. One might suppose they were intolerable bores, but in every town they can find a coterie of people who Bridge as they breathe too. To me they are a queer abnormal species that is hardly human. One simply cannot imagine such a couple having any babies or maintaining any sort of a home. It would have to be furnished almost exclusively with card tables.

Their clothes, their meals, all their affairs have to be chosen and conducted with a view to their Bridge interests, their Bridge engagements, their Bridge comforts. Their Bridge accounts are kept with the exactitude of bank statements. Bridge score cards form the most superior type of Art in which they are interested.

Their most supreme ideals appertain to some new intricate rule for more scientific Bridge. Their literature consists solely of books on Bridge, written by every expert since the game was metomorphasized from old-fashioned Whist. The history of their times is to them encompassed exclusively in the progress made in Bridge. Their aristocracy consists of clever Bridge players: their sense of evil, wrong-doing, falsity of any kind is restricted exclusively to the conditions under which people play Bridge. For them and their kind Bridge is the be-all and end-all of existence.

Of course it is wicked to play Poker for money. It is criminal to buy lottery tickets or gamble in China town.

But being a Bridge expert is something entirely different and very, very superior.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Again we find the day especially presided over by Venus, bearing the ruby for its natal stone. It is a stimulant to the emotions.

New friends are promised those who wear the aquamarine, today's natal stone. According to ancient superstition, these will be acquired through frequent change of scene.

Aside from the pleasures of friendship, the aquamarine promises its wearer great profits through the kind offices of social acquaintances. Green is today's color. Though symbolic of joy and hope, it is believed to be destructive to friendship.

To-day's flower is the orange blossom, symbolic of chasity and pure love.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The fur that trims this beige cloth coat is dyed to match exactly the color of the cloth.

Formerly the idea in dyeing fur seemed to be either to intensify and bring out the natural tone of the fur or to make a fairly common fur look like a more expensive sort. In the few instances where the dyeing did not come under one of these two heads some definite convention was followed.

Thus white fox, which sometimes turned yellowish or an unattractive slate blue, was dyed to imitate the more expensive sort of fox. It still is, for that matter. Skins of timber wolf and coyote were dyed to make them look like more expensive fox pelts. The grayish yellow skin of the marmot was dyed brown to resemble mink. Muskrat was and is often dyed and otherwise treated to resemble seal. Persian and other lambs used in imitation were always dyed black in order to bring out the luster of the fur. This was the accepted convention. Rabbit was variously dyed but always in imitation of something else—ermine, chinchilla, seal or mole. Raccoon was dyed to imitate skunk. Nutria was conventionally dyed to imitate beaver or seal. Sealskin for years was dyed only according to certain well-established usage.

Now we wear dyed fur as we wear paste and glass jewelry, without the slightest idea of deceiving anyone. At least that is the new idea. To be sure, the furriers go on with their work of transforming marmots into minks, muskrat into seal and rabbit into ermine. But the newer idea is to dye fur just for the sake of making it interesting or amusing or becoming or the exact shade of the fabric with which it is worn. A tailored coat recently seen had facing bands of navy blue muskrat and an evening wrap of colorful brocade had collar and cuffs of hare dyed a lovely light blue. Moleskin was one of the first of the furs to be dyed and a soft shade of purple was the color usually chosen. Now we have all sorts of rabbit, cony and hare as well as a variety of lamb pelts dyed any color you choose, mauve, violet, yellow, green or bright red.

These brightly dyed furs are used for the most part on evening wraps or the more fussy sort of afternoon ensembles. For street wear the fur is more often dyed to match the fabric of the coat or suit. Sometimes a long-haired fur such as fox or wolf or hare is used to make collars and cuffs on a wrap on one of the shorter-haired furs, and for sake of novelty it is dyed exactly to match the fur it trims—so that the contrast exists only in the texture and thickenss of the fur.

FOOD AND HEALTH

THE HOUSE WIFE AND THE FOOD LAWS

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs
Food Specialist.

Ask the average housewife how much she knows about food legislation and the chances are that she will reply: "O, yes, I know about pure food!"

The words "pure food" seem to constitute a phrase with which to conjure, and this is good so far as it goes. But in this year of grace, the year that marks the twentieth anniversary of the passage of the food and drugs act, it is rather up to the progressive woman of today to have a fairly clear idea as to what is involved.

Nor is it merely to be informed as to past history that the house wife of 1926 should inform herself. We have become somewhat complacent about this subject, congratulating ourselves at frequent intervals on the fact that we need no longer be troubled about impurities in our food. While it is true that high grade food products put out by reputable manufacturers have passed tests as to purity, this is not the only aspect of food legislation in which the housekeeper should evince an intelligent interest.

In looking back to Theodore Roosevelt's administration we find him in 1906 signing the act which made the Federal Food and Drugs Law a part of our national legislation. By the passage of this act a new legal principle was established, that the consumer has not only a moral but a legal right to know what he buys, and the seller has a moral obligation in the matter of making it possible for the purchaser to use his own discretion in selecting his purchases.

So from that day to this housewives, and in fact all consumers were gradually led to the point where they demanded from their food sellers that the products upon their tables should fulfill all standards as set forth by the law. One of the most encouraging things about the whole matter is the fact that all progressive food manufacturers not only fell in with the demands of the law but in many cases actually did better than the law demanded.

And now comes a new responsibility for the women of the nation. Not satisfied to help in keeping the foods law in its present state of efficient operation, certain individuals and organizations have worked for the enactment of amendments to the law. These amendments have already passed both houses of Congress and the reason for this is, in plain words, because the public failed to rise in protest.

Because of the enactment of these amendments to the law it can hardly fail to be curtailed in its usefulness. Those who know best are of the opinion that of such "nibbling" as one well known man calls it, at the law is permitted to continue, eventually it will become useless.

Housewives need not enter upon a period of laborious study. They need only unite to demand that no further tampering with the food law be allowed and that immediate steps be taken to undo the harm already done.

The united woman power of the nation can do pretty much anything it likes. Let it make such a stand part of its civic and national duties.

No wide-awake woman needs to have pointed out to her the connection between all this and the health of her own particular family. Nutrition will be impaired if the food supply is allowed to deteriorate and every woman knows what impaired nutrition may do the health of children and adults alike.

OLD MASTERS

The more we live, more brief appear
Our life's succeeding stages;
A day to childhood seems a year,
And years like passing ages.

The gladsome current of our youth,
Ere passion yet disorders,
Steals lingering like a river smooth
Along its grassy borders.

But as the careworn cheek grows wan
And sorrow's shafts fly thicker,
Ye stars, that measure life to man,
Why seem your courses quicker?

When joys have lost their bloom and breath
And life itself is vapid,
Why, as we reach the falls of death,
Feel we its tide more rapid?

It may be strange—yet who would change
Time's course to slower speeding,
When one by one our friends have gone
And left our bosoms bleeding?

Heaven gives our years of fading strength
Indemnifying fleetness;
And those of youth, a seemin glength,
Proportion'd to their sweetness.

—T. Campbell: The River of Life.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

WHERE SHALL I LOOK FOR WEALTH?

Where shall I look for wealth today?
For gold, I'll mingle in the mart,
But now and then along the way
I'll gather riches for my heart.
I'll make a profit if I can,
I'll work so well I earn my wage,
And yet I'll gather, when I can,
Some other riches for old age.

I'll strive as hard as others do;
But, while with business I contend,
I'll try to make a friend or two,
For what is age without a friend?
I'll need some gold to buy my bread
When I'm too old to tread the mill,
Yet not by that, as God has said,

A man can live, and no man will.

In quiet age I want to know
I did a kindness when I could;
I do not want so great to grow
I do not serve the common good.
Where shall I look for riches, then?—
In earthly things for earthly gold,
But in the love of other men
I would be rich when I grow old.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PIECE OF CAKE

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed the Bob Cat, jumping around and trying to get a look at his silly little tail. But it was so short, or bobbed, that he couldn't.

"What's the joke?" asked the Fox, who was standing in the doorway of the Bob Cat's den, trying to keep warm, for it was cold and the snow was coming down. "Why are you laughing?"

"I'm laughing at the joke I played on Uncle Wiggily!" snickered the Bob Cat.

"You mean the time he gave you a piece of pie and it turned out to be filled with cotton?" asked the Fox. "I call that joke on you instead of on Uncle Wiggily."

"No, I don't mean that," went on the Bob Cat. "That joke was on me all right. Pah! I can taste that cotton yet!" and he rubbed his tongue on his teeth. "No, this is another joke. Listen! I made a piece of cake out of a brown stone that looked exactly like chocolate. You would say, surely it was a piece of chocolate cake, but it is only a stone."

"Where is it? Are you going to throw it at the rabbit and try to catch him that way?" asked the Fox.

"No," snarled the Bob Cat. "I took the piece of stone that looks like cake and put it in Uncle Wiggily's bungalow pantry. You know the old rabbit gentleman goes in the pantry every day to get a piece of cake or pie before starting out on his adventure hunt."

"So I have heard," remarked the Fox.

"Well," went on the Bob Cat, "this time when Uncle Wiggily goes in the pantry to get a piece of cake he'll pick up the brown stone I laid on the shelf when the window was open. Uncle Wiggily will put the stone in his pocket thinking it is cake. And when he comes here to the woods adventuring and starts to eat the cake he will break his teeth on the stone. That will give him such a pain that his eyes will fill with tears and he can't see us."

"Oh! you mean then we can catch him?" asked the Fox.

"That's it" mewed the Bob Cat.

"Not a bad trick—if it works," chuckled the Fox.

"Oh, it will work all right!" snarled the Bob Cat. "I'll fix him for giving me cotton pie—an old April Fool joke it was. But let's hide now. Uncle Wiggily ought to come hopping along pretty soon. He will have my stone cake in his pocket. He will sit down on a log to have his lunch. His teeth will break off. Tears will come into his eyes—and——"

"Yes, you said all that before," interrupted the Fox. "Let's see how much of it happens."

The two bad chaps hid themselves in the woods to wait for the rabbit gentleman to come along, and, pretty soon, surely enough, Uncle Wiggily appeared. There was a lump in one coat pocket.

"That's my make believe stone chocolate cake!" whispered the Bob Cat to the Fox.

Mr. Longears sat down on a log, and, just as the Bob Cat had remarked, the rabbit gentleman put his paw in his pocket, took something out and said:

"I will now eat my lunch cake!"

Uncle Wiggily took out a piece of chocolate cake, he opened his mouth, he took a large, though not impolite bit, and then began chewing away as nicely as you please.

"Look! Look at that!" gasped the Bob Cat. "His teeth are so strong that he can bite stone! Oh, if he should take a notion to bite us! Think of it! Chewing stone!"

And as the bad chaps ran away Uncle Wiggily finished eating the large, soft piece of chocolate cake and he took from his other pocket a brown stone, that looked like a piece of cake, and the bunny laughed as he said to himself,

"Somebody tried to play a joke on me, leaving this stone thzt looked like a piece of chocolate cake on the pantry shelf. I guess it was Jingle or Jangle or Tumble or Bumble. Well, I don't eat stones; throw them away!" Then the bunny tossed the stone and it hit the running away Bob Cat on his silly little tail and made him howl.

The rabbit was too wise for the bad chaps.

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

THAT the business of advertising has grown tremendously in the past few years. It is necessary to the small business as well as to big business.

Next to merit of the article or product, advertising is relied upon to successfully market every product from chewing gum to automobiles.

In politics, advertising has taken the place of public speaking to a large extent, and even the churches have come to realize the necessity for its use.

Bond issues, community chest and other drives are rarely put over without the aid of advertising.

Railroads, public service companies and states and cities resort to it, and the advertising of the big concerns, scientifically prepared by advertising experts and artists, are often as interesting as the reading matter in our newspapers and magazines.

THIS IS AN ADVERTISING AGE.

SIDEWALK COST $1.22 PER FOOT

City Engineer Takes Exception To Guelph Despatch.

DRAIN COMPLETED.

A despatch from Guelph the other day appearing in one of the Toronto papers gave the price of concrete paving in this city for last year as $2.12 per square yard and the cost of building concrete sidewalks $2.49 per lineal foot. City Engineer Parsons this morning took exception to the figures for the cost of building sidewalks. The actual cost last year was $1.22 per lineal foot for a sidewalk five feet wide. These figures include all costs, such as engineering, making up assessment rolls, and doing the work. In the case of pavement no concrete was laid last year, and the pavement which was laid was contract work and cost $2.12 per square yard. In Guelph, where the figures were $1.94 per square yard for concrete pavement and 71 cents per lineal foot for building sidewalks, the work was all done by day labor.

This year the engineer's department completed the two connecting links of the Park Street drain, which was built in 1923, when ex-Alderman Stocker was head of the Board of Works. The work was done then by day labor and cost $29,139.47. This year the cost to complete the drain was $1,967.12, making a total cost of $31,106.60, or $194.81 below the engineer's estimated cost. The lowest contractor's figures were $32,000 higher than the actual amount it cost to build the drain.

He is the First Vice-President of the Toronto Men's Liberal Association. Mr. McGuire is a Roman Catholic, a member of the Knights of Columbus, and is a first cousin of the late Archbishop McEvoy of the Archdiocese of Toronto. He married Anna McNevin, daughter of James McNevin of Ottawa.

To Sit Back and Listen

TORONTO, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—"I expect to sit back and listen for a while and get my bearings," William M. McGuire, whose appointment to the Senate was announced today, replied when asked if he had any legislative programme mapped out.

Mr. McGuire has been president of the Ontario Club here for two years. He is a member of a local legal firm, and has always been active in affairs of the Liberal party in Toronto. The particular Senatorship that Mr. McGuire has been called upon to fill became vacant with the death of Senator McHugh and has been generally looked upon as an Irish Catholic appointment.

27 DROWNED IN SUNKEN BOAT

Fifteen Bodies Recovered From Launch Accident This Morning.

MANY IN HOSPITALS.

NEW YORK, December 20, Canadian Press. — Twenty seven persons were drowned in the icy waters of the Hudon river to-day when a 60-foot launch carrying an unestimated number of employees to a New Jersey manufacturing plant from Manhattan, was crushed by floating ice.

Twenty four others were in hospitals, and the estimated number of missing was ten.

The launch left the 95th street pier for the Spencer Kellogg and Sons' plant at Edgewater, N. J., with about 100 men on board. Off 254th street, the Bronx, it was caught between between great cakes of ice and crushed. Water poured in, and within a few minutes the boat had sunk.

All available river craft speeded to the rescue of the men struggling in the icy waters, many of whom were suffering severely from a submersion of almost half an hour.

The police believe that the death list might be much higher when a complete check up of those in hospital had been made.

Three bodies were picked up floating in the river and 12 others were taken from the partially submerged launch after it had floated up-stream to 254th street, where it grounded.

Several of the survivors reported that before the tugs came to their assistance an oil tanker passed within 200 feet of them, going downstream, and paid no attention to their cries. Reports as to the cause of the accident also varied. While most blamed the ice entirely others asserted that the launch capsized because it was crowded "like a subway jam" and that when it tipped to one side everyone rushed to the other side in an attempt to right it, and it upset.

Six hours afer the accident, police announced that besides the 15 known dead, 24 men were in hospitals and the number of missing was believed to be about 10, although it was acknowledged that it might prove to be considerably higher.

FISHERMAN ATE FLESH OF MATE

LOST 11 DAYS.

AVALON, Santa Catalina Island, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press). — The startling admission that he had eaten the flesh of his dead companion whom he survived when the two were cast adrift at sea in an open boat, was made here last night by Eli B. Kelly, 60, Redondo fisherman.

Kelly was picked up on the beach near here yesterday and brought to hospital after drifting for eleven days.

Kelly said he had been without food or water for eight days. His shipmate, crazed by hunger and thirst when supplies ran out, died from exhaustion after having jumped overboard three times. Kelly said he rescued his companion each time.

Turkey Famine Reported Where Turkeys Abound

SARNIA, Dec. 20.—Residents of Lambton County, which produces more turkeys than most counties in this Province, may have to be content with the homely goose or a brace of ducks for Christmas dinner if the inroads of American buyers along the back concessions of this territory continue. The last big pre-Christmas market Saturday was almost shorn of the popular Christmas bird, and what few were available were bringing the high price of 55 cents a pound. Trucks by the score from Detroit have thoroughly combed the rural districts in the last few weeks, taking all the live birds that could be bought.

Above are shown, left to right, Misses Rose Stewart, Helen Guthrie and Christina Stewart, who attended the Cinderella dance at Rideau Hall in honor of Prince George. The Misses Stewart are daughters of the Hon. Charles Stewart. Miss Guthrie is the daughter of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, present Conservative leader.

FIRE IN CHIMNEY OF GREENHOUSE

Jordon Brothers' Christmas Stock Saved By Firemen's Efforts.

EARLY ON SUNDAY.

At three minutes to four on Sunday morning the chimney at the Jordan green houses on Argyle street caught fire and the sparks ignited the roof. The firemen received the call and made a very speedy trip to the greenhouse. They soon had the fire under control.

Mr. Jordan this morning expressed himself as very thankful to the firemen for the way in which they handled the fire. Only for their timely assistance his entire Christmas stock in trade would have been ruined as he had all his flowers and plants moved to the upper floor ready to take to his retail stores this morning. The damage done was slight.

D. W. DUMBLE, K.C.

dren are: Harold Frederick, Francis Havelock, Mary Eliza (Mrs. Johnston), Elizabeth (Mrs. Reid), Clarence and William.

Mr. Dumble was a member of the Town Council for one year, a member of the Board of Education for over twenty-five years, including one continuous term of eleven years beginning in 1878. In 1874 he contested the West Riding of Peterborough in the Provincial Election and was defeated by W. H. Scott by a majority of two votes.

Among his other activities may be listed his interest in the Horticultural Society and his work in promoting improvement and adornment in the city. For many years he worked energetically in the interests of the Trent Canal and was one of those the citizens have to thank for bringing into the Town railroads and extensions of facilities of communication. He was an earnest advocate of good roads, taking part in platform and printed campaigns in this regard; in fact there was no object of local importance or of interest to the citizens that had not his earnest advocacy and hearty support.

Mr. Dumble was particularly conspicuous in Church work and in fostering and furthering the several objectives, sought by the Sunday School Associations of the Province and City and Country. He gave outstanding assistance in early temperance work and in the passage of the remedial liquor acts, but this work passed when he was appointed Police Magistrate. He was always an advocate of social work in its effort to better the condition of the people and in this he worked quietly but gained results that will cause him to live in the memory of those he was instrumental in helping.

Peterborough has lost in the death of Mr. Dumble, a citizen who never spared himself in service for the community and especially assisting in the several propositions to further the industrial activities of the Town. He was a critic in many things pertaining to Municipal Government and in the analysis of such questions, it was generally shown that Mr. Dumble was on the right side. He was well able to maintain his views and contentions and was the storm centre of many a wordy battle.

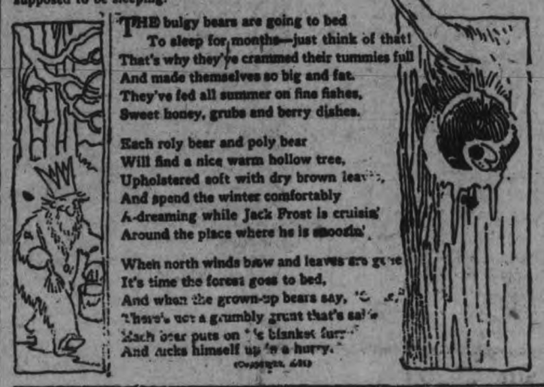
Castor Oil As Massage Won "Whiskerino" Title

TIMMINS, Ont., Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—A tip to would-be moustache raisers comes from Pat O'Gorman, champion whiskerino of this town. Castor oil is an excellent fertilizer and coaxer for hair on the face, he says. Discussing his winning of the whiskerino title here last week when he produced a whisker of almost one inch and a half in length, with 29 hairs to the square inch after two months of cultivation, the burly prospector revealed his secret today. He said that castor oil, freely used and sturdily massaged, "turned the trick" that won him $50 in cash, a gold watch, a ton of anthracite coal, a rocking chair and a safety razor. He added that the latter prize had been the most used so far.

Forest Bedtime

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

WINTER is a problem for bird, insect and animal life. The great majority of insects die leaving larvae to revive in the spring. Most of our birds flee southward, the rest managing to eke out an existence, although many do perish from hunger and cold. Many fur bearing animals solve the winter feeding problem by sleeping more or less soundly till spring comes. They accumulate much fat in summer and fall when nature's bounty is greatest and exist on this while hibernating. The bear is commonly considered a fine example of hibernating animal, but in reality he wakes up often on warm days and even crawls out for a little exercise, so that Mr. Bruin may sometimes be met in winter even though he's supposed to be sleeping.



THE bulgy bears are going to bed
To sleep for months—just think of that!
That's why they've crammed their tummies full
And made themselves so big and fat.
They've fed all summer on fine fishes,
Sweet honey, grubs and berry dishes.

Each roly bear and poly bear
Will find a nice warm hollow tree,
Upholstered soft with dry brown leaves,
And spend the winter comfortably
A-dreaming while Jack Frost is cruising
Around the place where he is snoozing.

When north winds blow and leaves are gone
It's time the forest goes to bed,
And when the grown-up bears say, "Good night!
There's not a grumbly grunt that's said
Each bear puts on his blanket fur
And tucks himself up for a hurr.

CHARITY BOARD

pointment has not been made for the past number of years.

While in former years contributions were received from many sources thus enabling the members of the Board to cover a wider field, the only funds that have been provided for some considerable time have come from the City Council.

The council, at the beginning of each year, makes an appropriation for charitable purposes which is given into the hands of the Central Charity Board to be administered by them.

Their method of procedure is to have their relief officer, F. W. Miller, investigate the cases and then report to the members who act on is advice. This prevents overlapping as all cases went through the hands of the one officer. At the end of the year Mr. Miller concludes his term of service with the Board after having served them during the entire time since organization. His place will be taken by A. G. Metheral.

The Board meets monthly, when the applications are received. Emergency cases, the circumstances of which will not permit their being held over to the regular meeting are dealt with by the Chairman and the relief officer who report any action they have taken at the next regular meeting.

While not essentially an organization for the dispensation of relief at Christmas it is apparent that the Board by reason of its year round activities is perhaps better equipped with regard to this work than perhaps any other organization.

The present officers of the Board are: President, R. C. Braund; Vice-president, J. D. Collins; treasurer, H. C. Stabler; Secretary, S. R. Armstrong.

POWERS FACE CRISIS IN CHINA

Britain Urges Immediate Consideration and Granting of Surtaxes.

GREAT RETICENCE.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— The foreign powers are face to face with a rising tide of Nationalism in China and the whole situation necessitates most careful and immediate consideration with the granting of the so-called Washington surtaxes as soon as possible, in view of the British government which delivered important proposals to the Peking diplomatic corps last February.

Considerable reticence was maintained at the foreign office with regard to details of the proposals, but it was stated that the real problems of the Chinese crisis have become obscure recently and that Great Britain, desirous of emphasizing her benevolent attitude toward China, had undertaken the initiative to clarify the situation.

The recent annulment of the Marlborough-Vanderbilt marriage by the Rota in Rome, was severely criticized in a sermon by Bishop William T. Manning, on RIGHT, of the Episcopal diocese in which the marriage took place. The statement resolved itself into a frank attack on the "impertinence of a foreign ecclesiastical court's assumption of jurisdiction." Bishop Dunn on LEFT, a Catholic, upheld the action of the Rota, saying that the decree was quite in keeping with the policy of the Roman Catholic church in opposing "the buying and selling of women in marriage."

Wheat Prices Move Up Follow Liverpool Lead

CHICAGO, Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.)—Wheat prices tended upward early to-day, influenced by the firmness of quotations at Liverpool and by the lightness of offerings here. An announcement that world shipments of wheat were small as compared with a week ago construed as a bullish factor. Opening unchanged to 1-4 cent advance, Chicago wheat values soon averaged higher all around. Corn, oats and provisions were likewise firm, corn starting unchanged to 1-8 cent better and subsequently scoring a slight general upturn.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 139 1-8; May 139 3-4; corn, December 74, May 81 3-4. Oats, December unquoted, May 50 3-4.

Stock Prices Go Up Despite Profit Taking

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press)—Stock prices surged forward today despite a rather heavy volume of profit taking in several of the standard rails and industrials. With call money unchanged at five per cent and hundred of millions of dollars being distributed in dividend and interest payments this year end. Speculators for an advance renewed their efforts to attract an outside following particularly in stocks which hold promise of special dividend or merger developments. Publication of an optimistic 1927 forecast by Gerard Swope, president of General Electric Co., helped to maintain bullish enthusiasm. A sharp increase reported in "odd lot" business of 10 to 50 shares was construed as an indication of expanding public interest in the market. Atcheson, which had sold down two points in early trading, made up its loss and touched a new high record for all time at 170. A heavy buying movement also developed in the Baldwin Locomotive towards the close of the session.

B. C. Fishing and G. & W. Feature Toronto Market

TORONTO, Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.) — British Columbia Fishing and Gooderham & Worts were again the outstanding feature of interest during this morning's session of the Toronto stock exchange, when several stocks gained substantially in very heavy trading. British Columbia Fishing, which had a turnover of more than 5,000 shares, climbed up four points to 198 1-2, then eased back to 103 1-2 at the close, a net loss of a point. G. & W. advanced to a high of 46 1-2 and closed at 45 1-4, a gain of 1 1-4. Noranda reached a new high at 23.50, a fifty cent gain, and Industrial Alcohol, after softening to 30 1-2, recovered to 31 1-2, an eighth firmer. British American Oil eased an eighth at 34 3-4 and Brazilian a full point at 105. The active Seagrams finished a point stronger at 17 1-2 at the noon close.

Mine Trading Passes Million Mark To-day

TORONTO, Dec. 20.— (Canadian Press.)—Trading passed the million share mark on the standard mining exchange this morning when in the most active session for many months, stocks generally were marked up. Duprat, in which a fifth of the morning's trade was centred, advanced 3 1-2 at 33 1-2 and Noranda climbed 70 to 23.45. Laval, Quebec, an active leader, gained 2 at 35 and Area, also heavily traded in, climbed 5 1-2 to 89 1-2. Teck Hughes advanced five at 5.10 and Amulet six at 188. Tough Oakes was a soft spot, losing 1 1-2 at 55. Quebec mining stocks were again responsible for heavy trading.

Competent to judge

There is no better way for you to learn the true value of commodities in general use than to read the advertisements day by day—regardless of whether or not you have any immediate intention of buying.

Those young housekeepers whose first experiences in marketing began in war-time have a fixed idea of high prices. Those of an older generation have an equally strong conviction that prices should be lower.

With the shifting changes of a rapidly moving world both prices and values are bound to fluctuate. A financier studies these trends with scrupulous care in published financial reports compiled by experts.

An intelligent housewife may similarly make herself a competent judge of values by studying each day's advertisements of the things she needs—just as the broker studies his stock list.

Then as she comes to buy she may do so with full confidence in her knowledge.

Canadiens Play Impressive Game In Victory Over St. Pat's

LES CANADIENS DEFEAT "IRISH" IN FAST GAME

Luckless St. Patricks Handed Washout at Arena on Saturday.

ROACH STARS.

"Flying Frenchmen" Display More Finished Hockey in Enemy's Territory.

Montreal Canadiens playing in impressive fashion defeated the luckless Toronto St. Patrick's at Arena Gardens Saturday night by a score of two goals to nothing, in a National Hockey League fixture.

The "Flying Frenchmen" making their first local appearance of the present season attracted one of the largest crowds that has patronized the N.H.L. games here since the league commenced this year, and they rewarded the enthusiasts with one of their flashiest exhibitions of the winter pastime. The Canadiens presented a rejuvenated lineup. The addition of Gardiner on the defence and Gagne at right-wing, with the cool, clever Hainsworth guarding their cage moulds the team into a very formidable aggregation. However, the "Irish" though weakened through sickness to the veteran defence-man Corbeau, and an injury suffered by Corbett Denneny in a previous game forced the visitors to their utmost brilliancy in gaining victory.

There was no scoring in the initial period. Play was fast and furious and both citadels experienced narrow escapes from goals, with Roach in St. Pat's cage having the more difficult shots to handle, not because Canadiens had any more of the play, but because the visiting team displayed more finished hockey when in the vicinity of the goal-cage. A Morenz-Lepine thrust was about the closest the teams came to scoring in this session. Morenz carried the rubber down the ice circled the "Irish" net and passed out to Lepine who stood unmarked directly in front of Roach. Lepine snapped the rubber goalwards, but Roach saved in almost miraculous fashion.

The fans had scarcely settled in their seats for the beginning of the middle frame when the red light flashed behind Roach for a Canadiens score. "Howie" Morenz, speediest of all centre-ice performers, carried the rubber down from the face-off, he worked close in towards Roach and shot. It was a hot drive to handle and though the St. Pats' net-minder blocked the shot he was unable to hold it, and Joliat swooping in with startling suddenness caught the "Irish" guard completely unawares to bat the loose puck into the cage. The scoring of this counter was the signal for some of the greatest hockey witnessed here in some time to be uncorked. The local Greenshirts although suffering from lack of substitutes carried the play to their opponents throughout the greater part of the period. That the score was not tied at least, can be attributed to over eagerness on the part of St. Pats, and to the sterling defence presented by Canadiens.

Eighteen minutes of the final session had elapsed before victory for the visitors was a certainty. A Morenz-Gardiner attack putting the game beyond doubt within two minutes of the end. The latter player was the successful marksman beating Roach from close-in. The "Irish" at this stage were practicaly exhausted, they having been forced to break through a three and four-man barricade throughout the major portion of the period as the Habitants zealously fought to hold the slim margin.

The game although presenting a strenuous appearance at times, was fairly clean. Two officials handled the contest and kept it well in hand. Twelve penalties were issued all for minor infractions of the playing rules.

OSHAWA PLAYS HERE TO-NIGHT

EXHIBITION MATCH.

The curtain will go up upon the local 1926-27 hockey season to-night when the fast Oshawa team will clash with Eddie Wright's Senior O. H. A. champs at the Brock street rink in an exhibition fixture that promises to be full of interest.

The Oshawa team are already heralded as the intermediate champs of the new season.

They were just nosed out of the honors last winter by the crack New Hamburg outfit, woo gave the Petes a tough tussle in the Allan Cup elimination series.

This year they are reported stronger than ever and their 5-5 win over the North Toronto seniors, who by the way, open the O.H.A. season here on Thursday, indicates that the report is well founded.

The motor town crew are in good shape, having been practising since early in the month, and they will provide all the opposition the Petes want to-night.

Manager Wright expects to toss all his athletes into the battle before he night is over, and the game besides being a rattling good tussle on its own account, will give the local fans a chance to get a line on the senior champs.

The ice is in good shape and everything points to a fine start to what should prove a memorable season.

MAROONS AND SENATORS TIED OVERTIME PLAY

Both Teams Wage Bitter Fight For Tally Throughout Game.

BOTH SCORELESS.

Maroons Stage Fierce Onslaught Against Ottawa in Second Period.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 20—(Canadian Press)— Montreal Maroons and Ottawa Senators see no novelty in overtime games in the National Hockey League race. Scoreless draws are a fetish whenever these two rival sextettes meet and Saturday night's smashing, rugged battle at the Forum was no exception for the two teams waged a bitter fight through 20 minutes of overtime play without either scoring.

There are many of the 11,000 fans who sat spell-bound and gasping throughout the crashing, bruising contest who have to be convinced yet that the Maroons did not tally one counter in the second period. The Maroons after a session of wearing down the Ottawa players opened up a powerful attack in the second period and, in a whirlwind rush around the Ottawa goal in which Dutton, Stewart and Siebert took part, Siebert ended the assault by lifting the puckat the Ottawa goal from a scramble. To many in the rink it appeared that the puck had found the mesh and come out again. Goal umpire Riley Hern, however, did not flash the goal signal. The Montreal bench objected, claiming a goal. The goal umpire and referees ruled otherwise, claiming that the puck had struck Connell's chest when Stewart shot first and that it had hit Connell on the chest again when Siebert rushed in and lifted the rebound.

Dame fortune was against the Maroons. The champions demonstrated that they are back to their pace of last season. They set a vicious clip in the first period and administered their weight with telling effect on the Ottawa players. When the Senators started to show signs of slowing up in the middle session, the Maroons opened up a furious attack and had a distinct edge in the play in this period, but they could not get the puck behind Connell in the Ottawa net. They met Ottawa tiring but playing a determined defensive game. The sweeping poke checks of Nighbor and Hooley Smith took the first brunt of the onslaught; Clancy and George Boucher stemmed the rushes further back and when these bulwarks failed, the imperturbable Alex Connell was there.

When the Maroons' attack in the second period went without material result in the scoring, the team's chance was gone. Not that they did not have other dangerous threats but the local players were fading towards the end and had not enough left to drive through the stonewall Ottawa guard.

The Ottawa players withstood gruelling courageously and were able to hang on long enough to stem the Maroon thrusts and finally exhaust the local club. It was a battered Senator machine which quit the ice after the extra session. The dashing King Clancy had been forced to retire with an injured right leg in the overtime period after he had displayed yet another of his indomitable fighting games. Clancy, with Hooley Smith, was the spear-head of the Ottawa attack. The Ottawa defence played went through a terrific gruelling as he was bodied heavily by Munro, Stewart and Noble and on one occasion was wracked by a cross check by Benedict as he tore in to take a rebound off the boards near the Maroons net—a check for which Benedict was reprimanded.

Checking was heavy throughout the tussle. The players started in early and penalties flew fast and thick, though towards the end of the game the infringements became less pronounced. Tripping, hooking chopping, and cross-checks in the best lacrosse manner dotted the contest. George Boucher took violent exception to the Maroon's play and frequently appealed to the referees for what he claimed were slashes across the arm as he carried the puck.

The contest demonstrated two points clearly. One that the Maroons are back to their form of last season and the other that Ottawa's defeat at the hands of the Detroit Cougars did not mark the start of a slump, but was merely an off-game for the Senators.

The line-up:

Montreal		Ottawa
Benedict	goal	Connell
Noble	defence	Boucher
Munro		Clancy

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Campbellford, Dec. 20.

The President Town Hockey League

Dear Mr. President:

I bin up to that there place, Walt. Covert calls his Arena, a few nights watchin' these teams, what has entered your league, gittin' in shape to win all their games; and while I am a pretty fair judge of applesauce, I can't for the life of me, tell you which one is goin' to be crowned champions.

Those Hydro fellars what won last year look pretty good. If they lan I that big fellar they cull "Bull," but I heerd Meenie was countin' on him to patch up their defence. I hope you Give 'im to the side what needs him worst.

Those Menie fellars have a lot of natural ability, but I think they must sit around the stove too much; they don't seem to have no stayin' power. If I was you I'd just tip 'em off, "A little more practise wouldn't hurt much."

Then there's those clerks; they've got lots of hockey in their make up; but they're too darned stuck up; when one of those red sl... gits hold of that puck he thinks he is the only man out on the ice, and he jus' hangs on to it as long as he can—which sometimes ain't very long. If this fellar Kerr decides to get his mail here regular he'll be a big h'p to the merchandise p'dlers.

I don't know how to figure out that Mill gang; there's a lot of hockey there, if you can only bring it out; perhaps that old fellar y'u have between the posts can instill a little more pep in some of those Cuys on your team. They don't all need it, Mr. President; some of 'em got plenty now.

Now, I've told you all I know at present, Mr. President, and if you know any more than I do, tell me, and I'll know as much as you do. I'm very anxious to know which team is going to land on top. Soon as I find out I'll let you know through these columns, but for the present I'll say, see you later. Critically yours,

Faultfinder.

GENE DECLARES HE'D BE K.O.'D

One Sock Would Be Enough Thinks Heavyweight Champion.

AIR HIS VIEWS.

NEWARK, N.J., Dec. 20 (Associated Press).—All Jack Dempsey has to do is to hit Jack Delaney once, if the former heavyweight champion and the present light heavyweight title-holder ever meet in the ring, and Delaney will be ready for addition to the Manassa Mauler's knockout list, Gene Tunney believes.

"Dempsey would hit him once and—I wonder if Delaney's press agent ever read the list of knockouts compiled by that fellow Dempsey," Tunney asked. "Boy and man, that Dempsey can hit."

Tunney told the Newark Evening New that he would drop Dempsey if they ever fought again.

"Dempsey never had the sturdy jaws he was credited with," said Tunney. "Jack can hit if he gets to you. He did not get to Tommy Gibbons and he did not get to me. But a man with a punch who gets to Jack right can knock him down. If I ever get in the ring with him again I believe I'll prove that theory."

The heavyweight champion said he would certainly beat Delaney if they were ever matched. The Bridgeport, Conn., warrior had been reported on the trail of a Dempsey match as a step deeper into the heavyweight ranks if he should overcome Bud Gorman, Wisconsin heavyweight, in their Christmas fund battle in Jersey City Monday night.

SEVEN DEATHS INVESTIGATED

Toronto Coroner's Order Inquest on Man Killed By Street Car.

THREE ACCIDENTS.

TORONTO, Dec. 20. — Seven deaths—four sudden, and three of persons injured in accidents—were investigated Sunday by City Coroners. In six of the deaths inquests will not be held. A Coroner's inquest will be held into the death of a man who died yesterday of injuries caused by being struck Saturday morning by a one-man street car.

Hit By One-Man Car.

Frederick B. Montague, aged 70 years, 465 Dundas Street East, died in St. Michael's Hospital yesterday of injuries caused by being struck by a one-man car at Parliament and Dundas Streets, Saturday morning. Mr. Montague was trying to cross the street when he was run into and hurled a considerable distance by a car operated by James Goodhead. Montague's skull was fractured. Coroner J. H. McConnell will conduct the inquest.

The death occurred Sunday in the Western Hospital of George Wynne, aged 67 years, of 102 Margueretta Street. Mr. Wynne had his hand cut by a piece of wire two weeks ago while at work. The cut became infected, and he was removed to the hospital. He died yesterday from blood-poisoning.

Collapsing at his home, 174 Hiawatha Road, yesterday, Alexander Smith, aged 64, died before medical aid could be summoned. Death was from heart trouble. Coroner J. H. McConnell investigated.

Anthony Knox, aged 74, of 504 Concord Avenue, died Sunday morning in the Western Hospital. Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford learned death was from apoplexy.

Baby Carrington Dies.

Baby Carrington, aged 2 months, died suddenly yesterday morning in the home of its parents, 53 Marborough Avenue. Death was from natural causes.

Dies in Hospital.

Malcolm Martin, aged 75 years, was found by his wife in an upstairs room at 73 Pembroke Street early Sunday morning. Constable White of Dundas Street East Station was called to the house. An ambulance was summoned and the man was taken to St. Michael's Hospital, where he died last night.

Harry Bradley, aged 59 years, was found dead lying on the cellar floor of his home, 313 Brock Avenue, early Sunday morning. Bradley had tripped on the cellar stairs and fallen to the floor below, breaking his neck.

Police were notified, and on instruction of Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford the body was removed to the Morgue. An inquest is not likely to be held. Bradley was a car checker for the C.P.R.

THIRD PETERBOROUGH TROOP, "VIMY."

Well, the strain is over for the present. The great competition is finished. Who won? The Wolves. What was the final standing? Wolves 265 1-2, Hawks 246, Hounds 200, Chickadees 193 1-2.

Friday night there was a total of over 50 points to be won, so three patrols were in the running. The Hounds had bad attendance, only one Scout being present. This eliminated them. The Hawks and Wolves ran a close and exciting race all evening and each won 40 points. The Chickadees made a great finish, pulling up within 6 1-2 points of third place. The prize—a spinning rope—was awarded to Patrol Leader Roper of the Wolves at the Council Circle. A further prize of a half pound box of chocolates is to be awarded to the first Wolf who can spin the rope. Scout Doug. Fraser says he can spin it now, so is sure to win the prize. Well we shall see at the next meeting.

But we are putting the cart before the horse, so as to speak, and have not said a word about the meeting.

There were four observation tests (1) Time on programme was wrong; (2) A.S.M.'s belt was upside down; (3) A.S.M.'s neckerchief was reversed; (4) A.S.M. was wearing wrong shoulder knot. These were all noticed but the time on the programme.

The following message was read at the beginning of the meeting: "Run to the nearest drug store and get a roll of adhesive tape, 1-2 in. width, a package of picric acid gauze, a small bottle of iodine, and some sterile gauze. Hurry." This was written out by each Scout at the close of the meeting and was well remembered by most.

A memory game, in which Scouts of the Wolves and Hounds were given names of animals. The Chickadees and Hawks had a few seconds to memorize the names, then were sent out of the room. The Wolves and Hounds changed positions and the Chickadees and Hawks were brought singly into the room and named each "animal." The Patrols changed places and tried again.

Then the Scouts were given numbers, instead of names of animals, and this proved a much more difficult task to remember which was which. All but two of the boys proved that their memories were good and didn't make a slip.

Troop committeeman W. H. Dickin was present during the meeting and assisted in many ways. He presented the Scouts with a bag of apples which was immensely appreciated.

Scoutmaster G. H. Roper dropped in to see how things were going and left a bag of candy. The Third is grateful for such evidences of good feeling towards the Troop.

It was decided at the Court of Honour to hold a meeting between Christmas and New Year's and Wednesday, Dec. 29th was chosen as the most suitable day. All Scouts please note the day and be on hand at 7.30. Subjects to be discussed are "Hike on New Year's Day" and the "Big Feed" to be held at the first of the year.

Get ready for a great start after New Year's. See that your patrol is in the running for the shield.

The Scouts of "Vimy" Troop wish their brothers in all troops a most merry Christmas.

MANY INJURED IN STREET CARS

Two Windsor Trolley Cars Crash, Due To Split Switch.

ONE IN HOSPITAL.

WINDSOR, Dec. 20.—More than a score of persons, including several children, were injured when two Windsor street cars crashed head-on on London Street, between Elm and Wellington Avenues, at 8 o'clock last night. The cause of the accident is believed due to a "split switch."

The most seriously injured is Miss Edna McNeill, 206 McEwan Avenue. She is at Grace Hospital with a broken arm and cuts and bruises.

All the injured suffered from cuts, bruises and shock, and, after being treated by Dr. R. E. Holmes of Sandwich, were taken to their homes.

According to the information gathered by A. P. McGill, superintendent of the Windsor Hydro Radial System, a westbound Sandwich can ran past the Wellington Avenue switch, colliding with an eastbound car. The forward ends of both cars were wrecked. William Boyer, 529 Bloomfield Road, Sandwich, was in charge of the westbound and Irving Cochrane, 233 McKay Avenue, Windsor, of the eastbound.

Street railway officials, pending a full inquiry to be held to-day, are not inclined to place responsibility for the crash on either of the motormen.

MAN CONFESSES SLAYING CHILD TO HIDE ACTIONS

Harold Croarkin Tells Motive For Self-Confessed Murder.

PANIC OF FRIGHT.

Feared Boy Might Tell of Attempts To Mistreat Him.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20 (Canadian Press).—Harold Croarkin today confessed he slew six-year-old Walter Schmith in a north side barn loft in a panic of fright after he had attempted to mistreat the boy, fearing his victim would tell of his actions.

The admissions of motive came at the end of long questioning following the youth's voluntary surrender on Sunday. Previously he had maintained that he did not know why he killed the youth who was found dying Friday night in the loft where the attack occurred.

"If this is not a hanging case you might as well abolish the penalty," State's Attorney Crowe said, early today, after he and his aides had gone over the entire act of the tragedy with the 26-year-old son of a wealthy flour dealer.

"In the murder of a six-year-old boy by a depraved man there can be no extenuating circumstances. Of course I can't say what will be done in this case, but I do know what I did in the Fitzgerald case."

The prosecutor was referring to the time when he, as a judge, sentenced a man to death in connection with a similar slaying.

REAL NEWSPAPER SPIRIT IN DRAMA

"Headlines" Story of Fourth Estate, is Vivid, Colorful, and True to Life—Alice Joyce in Fine Cast

It is doubtful if any newspaper story has ever been brought to the screen with such a vivid and true-to-life background as that which enhances "Headlines," the new Encore drama with Alice Joyce, Malcolmn McGregor and Virginia Lee Corbin playing the leading role. It is said that newspaper men with long training in this profession saw to it that the brackgrounds and characters really represented the great newspaper profession.

E. H. Griffith, the director, was a former newspaper man. Mr. Griffith went to the offices of The New York World for many big scenes. Bayard Swope, managing editor of The World, gave him much assistance. Raymond Harris, a former San Francisco newspaper man wrote the titles and was assisted by Herbert Roemer, another newspaper man. Peter Milne and Arthur Hoerl, who wrote the scenario, were both newspaper men at one time. Some of the players have also had newspaper experience.

In this sizzling story, the cub reporter does not dash hither and yon and finally scoop the world and win the daughter of the managing editor; the reporters do not tote huge notebooks around and write like madfire when some one talks; the city editor isn't quite as hard as nails and the sob writer has some of the weaknesses that befall the people about whom she writes.

Alice Joyce has the leading role in this drama and she is capably assisted by Virginia Lee Corbin and Malcolm McGregor, as well as other leading players.

COUGARS FORCE RANGERS TO TIE

HARD STRUGGLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Detroit's Cougars, the giant killers who stopped the wild dash of the Ottawa Senators in the National Hockey League's Canada section, kept the New York Rangers from going into the lead in the American section in a sternly battled game at the new Madison Square Garden Rink last night. The teams battled to a draw after New York had led all the way and the Rangers are tied with the Chicago Black Hawks.

It was a tough defeat for the Rangers, for the Cougars snatched a tie game from defeat with only two minutes to go of the third period, and then the teams went through two extra periods of ten minutes without result. There were twelve thousand fans, one of the biggest crowds of the year in alternate spasms for fear and hope.

The first period was slow; the second faster — in it the Rangers scored a goal. Murdock being producer, and the third was brilliant, especially the play on which the Cougars tied things up. But the "sudden death" onsets were thrilling, every minute of them. The play whirled from one end of the ice to the other so fast the fans were dizzy following the puck and at the end no man could say which team was the better. Teams:

Detroit—Goal, Holmes; defence, Halderson and Loughlin; centre, Frederickson; wings, Arbour and Gordon; subs., Oatman, Sheppard, Foyston and Kitchen.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

Golf By Moonlight On Florida Course

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 20.—(United Press.) — Midnight moonlight golf made its debut on the bay shore course at Miami Beach during the early hours to-day, when Dan Mahoney, publisher, of Dayton, Ohio and Miami, and John J. Brophy, Bashire, professional, defeated Gene Sarazen, former open champion, and Roddy Burdine, Florida amateur, two up in nine holes.

Brophy shot a medal score of 42, with a birdie three on the fourth hole. Gene made a 280 yard drive on the long sixth.

Not a ball was lost in the novel match which is expected to become popular while the moon is full.

BABYLONIAN DOCTORS OPERATED RELUCTANTLY IN THE TIME OF HAMMURABI. IF THE OPERATION FAILED AND THE PATIENT DIED THE LAW REQUIRED THAT THE SURGEON'S HANDS SHOULD BE CUT OFF.

AND STRICT REGULATIONS GOVERNED THE CHARGES FOR AN OPERATION. THE SURGEON WAS ALLOWED TO CHARGE TEN SHEKELS FOR A MAJOR OPERATION ON A PROPERTY OWNER.

BUT IF A SLAVE REQUIRED TREATMENT THE CHARGE WAS LESS AND THE SLAVE-MASTER HAD TO PAY THE SURGEON. SLAVERY HAD ITS ADVANTAGES AS WELL AS DISADVANTAGES.

VETERINARIES' FEES ALSO WERE FIXED BY LAW. IF ANY ANIMAL FAILED TO RECOVER AFTER THE OPERATION THE DOCTOR HAD TO PAY FOR ITS LOSS. © McClure Newspaper Syndicate

SANTA CLAUS IS VISITOR TO-DAY TO ROTARIANS

Christmas Tree Yields a Wealth of Unexpected Gifts.

FINE PROGRAMME.

Rotarians Enjoy One of the Best Luncheons in Club's History.

The Spirit of Christmas was strongly in evidence at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Empress today, when Christmas crackers, a Christmas menu, a Christmas tree, Christmas songs and reading and a Christmas address all testified to the fact, that the greatest festival of the year is at hand.

All but three members of the club were in attendance as well as a number of visitors, including Dr. J. J. Craig, past president of the Kiwanis Club.

The Christmas touch was early gained through the popping of crackers containing gay colored paper headgear, the donning of which imparted a somewhat bizarre appearance to the gathering of well-known citizens.

Over in the corner of the room stood a gaily decorated Christmas tree, and the holiday fare of turkey and plum pudding had scarcely been done justice to when Santa Claus arrived on the scene. A jollier or wittier Santa never appeared anywhere than the bewhiskered individual who proceeded to distribute most appropriate Christmas gifts to the Rotarians. It is suspected that Rotarian Chris. Graham knew something about this part of the programme which was responsible for a constant roar of laughter.

Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland contributed a reading "Just Before Christmas" in her usual inimitable fashion, and had to respond to an encore.

Mrs. Douglas Fletcher sang a Christmas carol and followed with "Charity," her splendid voice being displayed to great advantage in both numbers.

The ladies were presented with boxes of bon-bons by Rotarian Chris Graham on behalf of the club.

A brief address on "The Christmas Spirit" was given by Rev. J. E. Todd of George Street United Church, who based his remarks on Dickens' "Christmas Carol." Rev. Mr. Todd, referring to Scrooge's conversion, remarked that to him a tragedy was suggested in this story, the tragedy that Scrooge must have for the rest of his life regretted bitterly the years that he had wasted, the friends he had lost, the many Tiny Tims he might have helped. The lesson Scrooge had learned was that the best things in life are those right around us, not the things he had seized and gripped all his life, and in conclusion Mr. Todd recited Edgar Guest's poem about friends.

President C. H. Rogers announced the appointment of a committee composed of Rotarians Chris. Graham, Gerald McClelland, Jack Primeau, Gordon Matthews, Bob. Abbott and Jack Gillespie to arrange for the annual Rotary Ice Carnival, and of a committee consisting of Rotarians Andrew Brown, Dr. Morrison and G. A. Gillespie to arrange for transportation of old people in connection with the Canitol theatre party.

Adjutant Ham suggested that Rotary's Christmas giving this year might take the form of a gift of gymnasium equipment for the Salvation Army Temple, where a large number of young people were looked after.

Rotarian Chris Graham's efforts were acknowledged by three rousing cheers and the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," before the luncheon adjourned.

KIDDIES GUESTS OF ODDFELLOWS

400 PRESENT.

It was a most pleasant sight that greeted anyone visiting the Oddfellows' Hall Saturday afternoon when about 400 children of Oddfellows of the city were entertained by the members of Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges and the Rebecca Lodge of Peterborough.

The children were entertained throughout the whole of the afternoon. The first part of the programme was a moving picture entertainment with an orchestra providing the music. Each child was given a stocking of candies and nuts, after which they all sat down in the large dining-room, and enjoyed a most sumptuous supper.

The committee from the men's lodges did very active work, but, as is usual, the great bulk of what had to be done was taken care of by the ladies of the Rebecca Lodge.

This has been the form of entertainment for the children of the Oddfellows of the city for some years back, and the pleased expression of the kiddies and their good behavior would go to show that it was very pleasing to them.

OXYGEN SUPPLIED.

Sunday morning at 9.15 the firemen received a pulmotor call to 196 Rubidge Street, where the chimney had become plugged with soot and the gas from the coal which was being burnt was unable to escape outside. The rooms in the house became filled with carbon monoxide gas, and Mrs. A. Butcher, who was in the house, soon became suffocated. The attending physician summoned the pulmotor and oxygen was supplied. In a short time the firemen had the patient breathing freely again, and she soon regained consciousness.

REDUCE SERVICE.

Troops With Colors Will Number 500,000 Instead of 600,000.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Before Parliament adjourned early yesterday morning, the Chamber voted a resolution calling on the Government to begin to put into effect the changes in army recruiting which would lead to placing the military system of France on a one-year basis by May, 1929.

This would be done by starting in 1927 calling men to the colors several months after the age of 20 years with the result that in May, 1929, they would all be called at the age of 21 instead of 20, and for one year instead of eighteen months.

The effect of reducing military service from eighteen months to twelve months would be to cut the army by 125,000 men, each year's class numbering about 250,000. The present plan would make a cut of about 80,000 in 1927, about 110,000 in 1928 and 125,000 in 1929, calculated on a rather complicated scale.

However, this does not mean a flat reduction of 125,000 men in the strength of the French army, for it is part of the Government's plan to increase the professional army from 160,000 to 200,000 men. It is also probable that there will not be a reduction in the number of officers corresponding with the cut of 125,000 men. Changes in organization will be effected by reducing the effectives of units while retaining largely their skeleton formation.

At the present time the French army is made up of 450,000 metropolitan troops, or troops stationed in France, plus 150,000 troops stationed outside of France. Putting into effect the proposed reform would mean leaving France an army of approximately 500,000 instead of 600,000 now with the colors.

In a speech attending passage of the resolution War Minister Painleve made plain that while the motion would be carried out by the Government the Cabinet retained the right to use discretion as to the dates for the changes in order not to cripple the arm unduly. He promised that the Government would begin on May 1 institution of the new regime. In an interview published yesterday M. Painleve said that while it might be regarded as unfortunate it was nevertheless true that France must keep a strong army for some years to come and that he would devote himself to obtaining more attractive conditions for officers, whose pay, he said, was too low now.

However, it remains plain that the new step is a move toward reduction of the French military strength, at least in numbers. Before the war France had military service of three years. Since the war this has been progressively reduced until now Parliamentary measures have been taken for service of twelve months. While it is true that the Socialists are asking for nine months' service, there appears little chance of this proposal being adopted in the near future.

French Urged To Educate Americans On Good Wines

PARIS, Dec. 21 (Associated Press).—The taste for wines of the American traveller in Europe has degenerated alarmingly in the last few years, says the newspaper "The Good Wine of France" (Le Bon Vin de France), which appeals to waiters and restaurant proprietors to help their foreign guests to a better understanding of the French vintages.

The question is serious, the newspaper continues, for wealthy foreigners, especially Americans, insist upon buying famous vintages and "drinking them like water," while the pained Frenchman who cannot afford the price sits by with sadness in his heart.

"Drink the good, sound, ordinary wines if your palate is not educated to the marvellous distinctions of the finer ones," says the newspaper.

CANADA IS NOT PART OF LEAGUE

IS TOO APATHETIC.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Canada is too apathetic to the work of the League of Nations, in the opinion of Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., of Toronto, who was a delegate from Canada to the first assembly of the League. Mr. Rowell, who is counsel for the Royal Commission investigating the Customs Department, is on his way home from Vancouver, where the Commission suspended sittings over the holiday season.

Canada, Mr. Rowell maintained in an interview, suffers from "a sense of aloofness from the affairs of other nations and consequently we take less interest in the League than our real interests justify." The relations between nations, Mr. Rowell added, have become so intimate that one cannot suffer but that it affects all the others to a greater or less degree.

Mr. Rowell would not discuss the customs probe, beyond stating that an unexpected volume of matter had been found to deal with at the coast. He estimated that the Commission would probably reach Winnipeg in February after completing its investigations in the West.

Kansas City Councillors Place Tax On Cigarettes

KANSAS CITY, Mo., December 21. United Press. — Kansas City smokers will be forced to pay a 20 per cent. tax on all cigarettes bought within the city limits. The city council last night issued a much debated ordinance to levy the tax, the measure to take effect December 30th.

DISCUSS RAISING OF VOTING AGE FOR BOTH SEXES

British Scheme To Fix the Standard at the age of 25.

EQUAL RIGHTS CRY.

Reduction of Age Would Add Five Million Women To Lists.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A proposal that the voting age for men and women alike should be fixed at 25 is being seriously discussed by a committee of the Cabinet, which is considering the problem of carrying out Premier Baldwin's pledge for equal voting rights to women and men. This proposal has been suggested as a compromise.

Under present conditions men are entitled to vote as they reach the adult age of 21, but women are not given the franchise until they reach the age of 30. The Government is pledged to introduce the system of electional equality for the sexes. In conference with representatives of the other parliamentary groups, however, the fear has been expressed that the reduction of the voting age for women from 30 to 21 immediately add five million to the voting lists and give them a dominating hold upon British politics. It was also argued that the average woman at the age of 21 knows nothing about politics and would be a most dangerous person to entrust with the vote.

The present suggestion that the age of 25 should be fixed for both sexes would not mean the disfranchisement of men under 25 now on the list, but that no more men's names will be added until they reach the age of 25.

TORONTO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Two armed burglars held up Mr. and Mrs. A. Press in their home on Lauder Avenue, just outside the city limits, early to-day, and while one held a revolver over the couple, his companion ransacked the house. The two left with jewellery and other valuables and escaped in a motor car.

EMPEROR WAGES STUBBORN FIGHT

Latest Bulletins Report Condition of Yoshihito Remains Unchanged.

THOUSANDS CALL.

HAYAMA, Japan, Dec. 21 (United Press)—The condition of Emperor Yoshihito was unchanged at 4 o'clock this morning, a bulletin of attending physicians said. The emperor, an invalid, and, according to Japanese legends, a direct descendant of the sun goddess, has been near death for almost two weeks with pneumonia.

Thousands of commoners daily visit the royal villa here to make personal inquiry concerning his condition. A booth has been erected at which the information is given out.

The deep concern of all loyal Japanese over the welfare of their ruler also is manifest by numerous inquiries which have poured in steadily from persons living in the farthest possessions of the Japanese empire.

Some Improvement

TOKIO, Dec. 21 — The tense hopes of a nation which has devoutly prayed for the life of its monarch since Emperor Yoshihito became critically ill, was cheered yesterday by the optimistic words of Premier Wakatsuki.

The premier told the hundreds of newspapermen who have besieged Hayama, where the royal patient is hovering between life and death, that there is some sign of improvement in his condition.

NEW DIRECTORS OF CEMETERY CO.

At a meeting of the directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company two directors were elected to fill vacancies on the board. T. H. G. Denne, who has been a member of the board since 1912, tendered his resignation as he is now living in Toronto and therefore unable to attend the meetings.

The resignation was accepted and Roland Denne was elected to fill the vacancy caused by his brother's resignation.

At the same meeting Robert John Kidd, manager of the Robert Neill Shoe Stores, was elected a director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Henry Rush, who had been a member of the board since 1917.

ONLY TWO LOST LIVES IN RIVER

Child Was Not in Cutter Which Broke Through Ice.

BODIES RECOVERED.

PEMBROKE, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—The tragedy which occurred on the Ottawa River here some time last Friday night, when the cutter of John McGuire, of Demerscenter, crashed through the ice of the river, was responsible for two deaths, it has been revealed. The body of Mr. McGuire was found frozen in the ice soon after the tragedy, and further search brought the remains of Mrs. McGuire to the surface of the icy water a few hours later. The report that their six-year-old child had been riding with them at the time and had met a similar fate, was proven false when the child was found safe at home.

It is believed that the heavy snow, driving into the eyes of Mr. McGuire, resulted in his failing to see a large hole in the ice on the trail, and he drove straight into it. A buffalo robe, lying on the ice at the edge of the hole, was the only visible indication of the tragedy when searchers first set out.

A family of seven children survives.

PEONY ROOT PLANTS ARE NOT POISONOUS

Not Responsible For Death By Poison of Ottawa Gardener.

OTTAWA, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—A report that a scratch on the wrist from a dead peony plant was responsible for the death this morning by poisoning of James Wheeler, 65, of this city, was proved inaccurate by Dominion Experimental Farm officials here. Investigations disclosed that intermingled with the peony roots carried by Mr. Wheeler, were a number of leaves of a species of poison ivy. These leaves were examined by Experimental Farm officials, who declared them to be poisonous. They claimed that peony plants were not poisonous.

Mr. Wheeler made gardening a hobby. About six weeks ago he was carrying an armful of the plant. He accidentally scratched his arm above the wrist. Infection spread, resulting in heart trouble, which caused his death after a month confined to his bed.

Mr. Wheeler was born at Highbridge, Somerset, England, but came to Canada in 1911.

Academy Wary On Ghosts Immortals Define 'Medium'

PARIS, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Forty Immortals of the French Academy are cautious in their attitude toward the claims of spiritism in the interests of another form of immortality.

They have admitted the word "medium (plural mediums)" to their famous dictionary but with this definition, worthy of the great Dr. Johnson:

"Person supposed to have the power of establishing communication between living beings and what is called the spirit world."

POPE CRITICIZES RELIGIOUS STATE THROUGH ITALY

Says Work of Education For Christian Youth is Endangered.

PRAISES "DUCE."

Delays Hopes For Speedy Settlement Between Church and State.

ROME, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Hopes for a speedy settlement of the question between Church and State in Italy were dealt a severe blow yesterday morning when Pope Pius, in allocation before a secret consistory, criticized religious conditions in Italy. Although praising Premier Mussolini personally with unusual warmth, the pontiff in the course of a fifty-minute address in which he analyzed religious affairs in Mexico and France, as well as Italy, condemned the conception of the State shown by certain Fascist elements.

"We declare pointedly," the Pope said, "that so far as religious interests, which are the supreme interests of the people, are concerned, the faith in the force of right, in the vigor of laws, in the efficacious good will of the authorities is not yet complete or secure.

"It seems that an obscure menace—confirmed by clouds of suspicion, interferences and difficulties—hovers over the activities of the 'Catholic action organization' which is the apple of our eye. It seems the task of the education of Christian youth, which is an important part of our divine mission, is endangered. It seems there is a conception of the State which cannot be Catholic, which absorbs and monopolizes everything, which makes citizens believe the State end is again being emphasized.

"It seems the ministers of religion are treated in a fashion unworthy of their high calling. It seems that the laws and provisions, in themselves good, are being enforced and interpreted in many cases by men who, under new names and new banners, remain enemies to society and religion.

"We are hopeful and confident," the Pope concluded, "that it will soon be unnecessary to describe such conditions and conceive such fears and that with the removal of these things and the restoration of assurance and confidence among all honest people, complete, peaceful co-operation for the common good and prosperity may be achieved."

"We cannot help denouncing once more the persecution which for many months has raged in Mexico with inhuman ferocity. Impiety especially, according to news received at the last moment, has become even more cruel. We

OIL MEN TO HOLD CONFERENCE WITH MORONES FOR AGREEMENT ON ENFORCEMENT OF ALIEN LAWS

Begin Parley at Mexico's Invitation Looking For Settlement.

LAW IS FAVORABLE.

Calles Government Charges Move Is Afoot To Stir Up Hostility.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 21 (Associated Press).—Representatives of the various American and other foreign oil companies will begin today informal discussions with Luis Moroness, Secretary of Industry, Commerce and Labor, at his invitation, looking to an agreement on details of the enforcement of the petroleum and alien land laws, which are under his department.

The regulations governing oil concessions will go into effect on January 1. While some companies have acted in conformity with some, at least, the Government's requirements, there are others which have not yet applied for concessions.

The hope is expressed by the department that a mutually satisfactory understanding will be reached.

Mexico Offends Regulations.

The law regulating the petroleum industry again is defended in a statement which the department has issued.

The statement declares that because the time limit granted the oil companies (January 1) is expiring, a campaign against the Mexican Government has been started, "the purpose of which is to create a hostile situation among two peoples, whose interests cannot be those of a small group who attempt to disown the laws issued by a sovereign country."

The statement adds that the oil law is not one of despoliation, but one of revindication, containing nothing that is not just and moral. Previously acquired rights, it says, are fully recognized.

The department goes on to say that Mexico's oil legislation establishes respect for the right created by other laws and that only through malice and bad faith, can the law be considered retroactive. The Government has not applied the law retroactively and does not intend to do so. Besides, the Mexican courts would not sanction such action, it says.

The Mexican Government has given proofs of its desire to apply the law in a broad-minded and liberal spirit, it is stated. This is established by the fact that some of the most important oil companies are complying with the law and have applied for the necessary concessions confirming their rights, the statement adds.

Law Favorable, It Asserts.

Declaring that applications for ratification of their rights have been received from El Aguila Oil Com-

Boy Ruins Table Top But Receives Half Dollar

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(Special).—He had ruined a mahogany table top before he called attention to what he was doing by asking the clerk for season's greetings enelopes to match the decorative tops of the Canadian Pacific Telegraph forms which he had separated from a dozen blanks with an old jackknife. He wanted to send one to teacher and one to each of his particular friends. They were red and blue and green and looked for all the world like real Christmas cards The telegraph agent looked at the table top and looked at the kid. The boy won. His feet were wet, his hands blue his overcoat a reach-me-down and his age eight or ten. He left the office fifty cents to the good and next year Canadian Pacific accounts will carry an item "to repairing one table top". Such is the Christmas spirit.

SEVERAL NAMES ARE MENTIONED FOR CITY OFFICES

Mayor Holloway Likely To Get Acclamation—Four For Utilities.

MANY ALDERMEN.

Women of City To Seek Representation on School Board.

Little has been heard on the street, as yet, as to who will be possible candidates in the coming municipal elections.

On Thursday at ten o'clock, nominations for Mayor, Utilities Commission and Board of Education, will take place in the council chambers, and at 7.30 nominations for aldermen.

Mayor Holloway is likely to get a second term by acclamation, as it has been the custom in this city to give the chief magistrate two terms, and everyone seems to be thoroughly satisfied with the way the Mayor has handled the business of the city in the past year.

On the Board of Education there are four members to be elected. The retiring ones are J. A. McKone, W. R. Turner, Jr., J. F. Strickland and E. F. Reid, who were elected by acclamation in 1924, and who have served the citizens well in the past two years. There is quite a demand amongst the women of the city that they be represented on this board and Mrs. W. R. Morris, who was defeated last year when seeking re-election, is being spoken of again.

The retiring aldermen are N. E. Phelan, Roland Denne, J. M. Greene, J. O. Fife and J. W. Myers.

In addition to the five aldermen whose terms have expired, Alder-

Robb, Thornton, Rinfret, St. Jacques and Cahan Speak Glowingly of Future.

DINNER IN MONTREAL.

C.N.R. President Raps Critics and Robb Says Budget Will Help.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press). — Two Ministers of the Crown, the head of the National Railways system, a member of the Federal House and a member of the Quebec Legislature joined last night in attesting to the brightness of the outlook for Canada's future. Hon. James A. Robb, Minister of Finance; Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State; Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways; Charles H. Cahan, K.C., M.P. for St. Lawrence-St. George, and J. Leonard St. Jacques, M.P.P. for Argenteuil, made the prophecies in addressing the annual banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association.

Promises of Budget.

Mr. Robb held out the promise that the next budget brought down in the House of Commons would contain a number of good things which would indicate the manner in which Canada was progressing.

"If I have a message to young Canadians who have left the country, it is this: 'Come back now before it is too late'."

Hon. Fernand Rinfret felt the true criterion of Canada's progress was to be found in the condition of the two largest railways. The one privately owned was making marked progress alongside that owned by the State.

Mr. Cahan referred to the progress of the last sixty years. Wealth, he added, would not create a great Canadian nation; a nation must be built up on the things of the spirit and in the spirit of conciliation and liberty of thought and ideals. One great need, he added, was the establishment of harmony between the East and the West. He referred to the fact that in the Province of Quebec, where the Government had the legal right to restrict or forbid the teaching of English, that language was taught in every French school. It would be well, he thought, if the people of other provinces would permit the French-Canadians who settle there to learn their own language in the proper way.

Canadian "Old Home Year."

Sir Henry Thornton suggested that next year, when the Dominion would celebrate its sixtieth anniversary of Confederation, the year be made a Canadian 'Old Home Year,' and that Canadians, instead of travelling abroad, travel in Canada.

Recalling the pessimism of four years ago, the President of the Canadian National Railways declared there was to-day the spectacle of every banker in the country rushing to "get aboard the band wagon which leads to opulence."

SAYS SON HAD TAKEN MOTHER TO THE MOVIES

John Bouey on Stand in Accident Suit For $20,000.

HAD PAID DAMAGES.

No Evidence in X-Ray Plates To Show Fractured Skull.

TORONTO, Dec. 21 — That his son had taken his mother in the family car to a moving picture show the night he was killed in a collision while driving a number of other young men and young girls on the Hamilton highway, was the evidence given by John Bouey yesterday when the trial was resumed of the $20,000 damage suit brought by Marion Hopcroft, one of the girls in the car, for injuries sustained. The hearing of the case has been under way since last week before Mr. Justice Grant.

Mr. Bouey was questioned yesterday about his son's use of the car. He said his son had permission to use the car in his absence only to take out members of the family. His instructions to his sons were that they were not to take out people who were not members of the family.

Asked why he had paid for damage to Mr. Richardson's car in the collision, he said it was on advice of his counsel. He did not remember the amount but said it wasn't $1,000. Mr. Agar said Mr. Bouey did not recall telling a Mr. Thompson he would not pay Miss Hopcroft's medical expenses.

Called by the defense, Dr. Frank Scott, surgeon at the Western hospital, said he could see no evidence in X-ray plates taken, to indicate a fracture of Miss Hopcroft's skull. She had told him she had headaches before the accident but worse afterwards.

Dr. Scott said the girl's nerves and muscular power were normal and that she had told him that the scars resulting from the accident were healed and that she had had her tonsils and adenoids removed with a view to improving her voice She had said that she was bothered by occasional deafness but had seemed able to hear conversational tones without difficulty. He said he had seen no evidence that alleged sleeplessness or any of her symptoms were the result of a blow. Asked about the St. Joseph's hospital report which showed the girl's admission at 2.30 a.m. June 7 after the accident, "unconscious; recovered consciousness 4 a.m.," Dr. Scott said the record did not show any lapse into unconsciousness.

Replying to defense counsel's statement that one of the medical witnesses for the defense had suggested "that this patient was sent home from hospital earlier than she would have been had she had funds," Dr. Scott said:

"Well, there are such cases, and we usually get in touch with the city when the cases are deserving and arrange to keep them in on the free list."

Witness admitted that the evidence of Dr. Evans as to the prolonged unconsciousness of the patient in the hospital ought to be accepted and that the hospital record might not show all the fluctuations between consciousness, semi-consciousness and unconsciousness."

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You should stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits its germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OIL MEN TO HOLD CONFERENCE

pany, the Mexican-Dutch Company, La Corona, the Transcontinental Petroleum Company, the Texas Company of Mexico, the East Coast Company, Briggs and Luft, the Compania Mexicana de Combustibles (which is a subsidiary of the Pierce Oil Corporation), International Petroleum and Mexican City Services, of which H. L. Hoherty is president, the statement says:

"These companies know that our legislation not only does not attack their rights but is favorable to their interests."

The statement continues that it is necessary to rectify important misstatements contained in the message recently sent from New York to the Secretary of Industry, Commerce and Labor by the Association of Producers of Petroleum in Mexico, because the latter cannot pretend to be unacquainted with the oil law, as its members were in close contact with the Department of Industry and Commerce throughout the discussion of the measure.

In conclusion the declaration is made that the Mexican Government has maintained an attitude of serenity in the face of the campaign against its rights and principles, convinced that truth will win and hoping that the reluctant oil producers may follow the example of the companies named.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

WARKWORTH PRESBYTERIAN S.S.

NORHAM, Dec. 21.—Old Saint Nick made his first visit in this district on Friday evening, when at the close of a splendid Christmas concert given under the auspices of the Presyterian Sunday school in the basement of the church, in Warkworth, a mile from here, he apepared with his bells and suit of red trimmed with white, and red toque to match His long white bear and kindly eyes won the affection of the large crowd of boys and girls who waited patiently and finally were well rewarded with candy and toys, for after the charming old man had disposed of the bagfull which he carried or his back he searched the Christmas tree, which was not only beautifully decorated but heavily laden with just the things that he knows well are so suitable to the tastes of those he meets but once a year.

The programme which gave much evidence of splendid work in training was in charge of Robert Walker, superintendent of the school and was as follows:

A chorus, 'In December' by about forty juveniles; speech by the chairman, "Merry Christmas," exercise by small children; recitation by Ross Greenly; duet, Heather and Maisie Grant; recitation, Clara Richards; dialogue, "A Christmas Lesson"; recitation, Willie Greenly; play, 'A Case of Suspension" by several young people; speech, Rev. J. F. Everson; chorus, "The Candy Song," by the Sunday school. A visit from Santa Claus followed by God Save the King. The proceeds amounted to $37.

AT MILLBROOK.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 20.—The "Christmas Party" held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McKee Bingham on Thursday evening, was an innovation locally in the way of a social gathering, the large number present giving evidence of the interest and enjoyment which the occasion afforded.

Festoons of fragrant cedar, wreaths of evergreen tied with huge red bows, and red shades on such lights as were in use, carried out a decorative scheme in keeping with the Christmas season.

The programme featured the reading of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" with suitable music interspersed, Rev. Canon Allen being the chairman. Candles in brass sconces on the walls, in holders on the piano, the tables, and everywhere they could be placed furnished the lighting, creating an atmosphere appropriate to the day when Dickens wrote his inimitable Yuletide story.

Introducing the readers in his usual happy manner, the rector referred to the Christmas Carol as "the story of how a grouchy individual was transformed by the visits of ghosts past, present and future, into what a Christian man ought to be," and added the hope "that all the grouchy individuals in Millbrook will be dead and buried forever after the lesson of tonight."

Mr. A. A. Smith was the first reader ,introducing rich, avaricious, selfish, old Scrooge, repulsing the Christmas spirit no matter in what form it presented itself, visited by the ghost of his former partner, Jacob Marley, and warned of the fate in store unless a speedy change in his habits of life and thought ensued.

To the sound of wierd chords harshly struck upon the piano the "Ghost of Christmas Past", (Mrs. Allen) entered slowly, draped in the white sheet which every real 'ghost' adopts for its habiliments. This spirit recalled to Scrooge his boyhood and early manhood, old Fezziwig's party on Christmas Eve, and the growing passion for gold which gradually blotted out the other affection.

"The Old English Christmas" (Sir Walter Scott), was given by Mrs. McKee Bingham before the "Ghost of Christmas Present" (Miss Rose MacNamara) entered in her white drapery and read the story of Christmas at Bob Cratchitt's, the illpaid clerk of Scrooge himself, and pictured Tiny Tim with his crutch and the happiness here, as well as at the home of Scrooge's nephew, in spite of poverty. Other homes and parties were visited before the clock struck twelve and the ghost was gone.

Singing in the distance announced the coming of "The Waits", (Mrs. A. H. Barnes, George and Henry Gray, Ernest Lamb, George Harkness, Buster Raper, and Burton Russell) costumed as they are always depicted in an English picture, and after their carol was finished the "Ghost of Christmas Yet to Be" (Miss M. B. Turner), took the reader's place.

The sorrow in Bob Cratchitt's home through the death of Tiny Tim which might have been prevented had means been available; his own death unloved, untended, with the charwoman, the laundress, and the undertaker's man robbing his rooms of the last thing of any possible value, and with the business men on 'Change laughing carelessly over his demise, and finally his burial in a neglected cemetery, wrought the final change in Scrooge's soul before this spirit returned to its abode.

A solo, "Christmas is Here" by Mrs. (Rev.) P. C. Howard, was followed by the reading of the final Stave which pictures Scrooge's delight at finding himself alive on Christmas Day, and his complete conversion from his former mode of life. Rev. Mr. Howard read this section.

"O Come Ye To Bethlehem" was sung by all present as a fitting close to the programme presented.

The dancing of "Sir Roger De Coverley" seemed to follow as a matter of course while the atmosphere of the story still lingered, and afterward refreshments were passed—sandwiches, big, sugared doughnuts, coffee, candy and nuts —the choir girls serving the guests.

Mrs. (Canon) Allen and Mrs. C. M. Westmacott poured coffee at either end of the dining table which was a picture of Christmas cheer, centred with a large brass bowl of poinsettias, and with runners of bright red leading from the lace centrepiece to the four corners, and the intersecting points of the table. Big bowls of candy, and nuts with other good things, were placed upon the table from which service was made.

Rev. Canon Allen voiced the appreciation of the guests to Mr. and Mrs. McKee Bingham for the very pleasant evening provided, the hearty clapping of hands showing the unanimity of the feeling.

The proceeds were in aid of the choir funds of St. Thomas' church.

THIS CANADA OF OURS

COAL PRODUCTION IN CANADA.

Q. What was Canada's coal production in 1925?

A. Canada's coal output in 1925 dropped below the total reported in the preceding year, due largely to losses sustained through labor troubles in the eastern maritime provinces in the earlier part of the year. Production amounted to 13,134,968 tons, as compared with 13,638,197 tons mined in 1924. Nova Scotia mines, in which the output losses were the greatest, produced only 3,842,978 tons of coal in 1925, as compared with a total of 5,557,441 tons in 1924, and yielded first place among the coal-producing provinces to Alberta, it western rival.

By four o'clock that Saturday, Faith realized the thoroughness with which Joy had played town crier. Neighbors for blocks up and down Myrtle street—neighbors who had long since grown weary of Mrs. Lane's recital of her symptoms and ailments and had ceased to call—came singly and in groups of two and three, ostensibly to pay a neighborly visit, but in reality to confirm the amazing report that the Myrtle street flapper beauty was engaged to be married to a rich old man, nearly four times her age.

The austere Miss Peabody, principal of Joy's school, had been but the vanguard of the curious. Old Mrs Talbot who lived next door on the left, and who had been nursing a grudge against Mrs. Lane for more than two years, arrived first, rustling and amiable in the black silk she reserved for weddings, funerals and church services.

"How's your Ma, Faith? I declare, time does fly! I been tryin' to get over for a month o' Sundays, but something always comes up to keep me home. I brought her a jar o' my new picalilli that I put up Wednesday. I always think of your Ma when I put up picalilli. Poorthing! She taught me how to make it, but I guess she won't put up any more herself."

Mrs. Asbell and Mrs. Purdy arrived before Mrs. Talbot had finished her greetings. Faith accepted their gifts of grape jelly and blueberry jam for the invalid with embarrassed thanks, then hurried away to tell her mother the astonishing news. It seemed a shame to arouse her from her deep afternoon sleep.

"Joy's been tattling at school and all up and down the street," Faith whispered breathlessly, as her mother stared at her in bewilderment. "How in the world am I going to get all my Sunday work done? Do you feel like tackling them, Mother? They're all swelled up with curiosity—"

"Well, Cherry's been raised on Myrtle street, and I don't see nothin' out of the way in our old neighbors takin' an interest in her bein' engaged to get married. Are they all dressed up? My land! I ain't got a thing to wear I guess I'll put on that blue dotted foulard. Just hand me my new shoes, Faith. They pinch my feet something terrible, but—oh, Lord! There's a runner in the only decent pair of black silk stockings I got to my name! Just catch it up for me, Faith. There's a needle and black thread stuck in the end of that dresser scarf."

Ten minutes later, when Mrs. Lane, puffing from her exertions but her broad red face abeam with pleasure and welcome, waddled her slow way into the living room, she found five neighbors instead of three, Mrs. Parsons and Mrs. Blivens having arrived while Faith was assisting her mother to dress.

"Just thought we'd drop in and see how you are, Martha," Mrs. Asbell spoke for herself and Mrs. Purdy. "I'd been figgerin' up and thought this must be your birthday—remember that surprise party we gave you when you first moved to Myrtle Street? Let's see—that must be ten—no, eleven years ago! Lordy, but time does fly!"

"My birthday ain't till the first of November, but I must say you come pretty close to it," Mrs. Lane was deeply gratified. "And here Faith thought all you girls had come to ask about Cherry. Eleven years! It don't seem possible we been here that long. But I guess you're right. We bought this house in the fall of '10, and here it is 1926 already. Cherry was just a baby, about as old as Joy is now. And now she's goin' on nineteen and all grown up—in her own estimation, and thinkin' about gettin' married."

"Married!" Mrs. Purdy exclaimed with an admirable affectation of surprise. "Well, I can't hardly say as I'm surprised. The belle of Myrtle Street, that's what we call her. And boys as thick as flies about her since she was fourteen years old. Who's the lucky young fellow, Martha?"

The five visiting neighbors exchanged glances of sly amusement, which made Faith, hesitating awkwardly in the doorway, flush with anger.

"I guess Cherry's kind fed up on boys, as the sayin' is now," Mrs. Lane smoothed the lace nchu on her vast bosom with hands that trembled slightly. "She's doin' real well for herself, and I guess all us older girls—" her troubled eyes shifted from one sharp-eyed, middle-aged face to another, as if praying for understanding, "know what it means to carry poor men that talk big and mean well, but tie us to the wash tub and kitchen stove—"

"'I married for love, and if I had it to do all over again, I'd marry Hoe Asbell, money or no money," Mrs. Asbell interrupted tartly. "But it's real nice for Cherry if she's managed to fall in love with a rich young man. Seems like I've seen that Pruitt boy hangin' around considerable lately. Well, the Lincoln Pruitts have certainly got the dough—"

"Faith," Mrs. Lane looked over her shoulder at her daughter, with desperate, hunted eyes. "Supposin' you fix up a little snack for the ladies. Some of your raisin rocks, and some homemade bread sandwiches, and some hot tea. You can use some of that Chinese tea George Pruitt brought me — Oh, no, girls, it won't be a mite o' trouble! Faith always bakes up a big batch o' bread and cakes and cookies and pies on Saturdays."

She waited until Faith had gone, reluctantly, rebelliously, to the kitchen, then she made her difficult confession. "I guess maybe it won't be such a surprise to some of you, seein' as how Joy's been spreadin' the news at school, but Cherry's goin' to marry Mr. Cluny—you know, Mr. Ralph Cluny, the biggest criminal lawyer in the state."

When Faith brought in the "little snack" on an enormous painted tin tray, she found her mother the center of a close-drawn circle of hypocritically congratulating neighbors, who now numbered seven.

"Are you goin' to make him call you 'Mama,' Martha?" old Mrs. Talbot cackled out suddenly in the midst of the polite babble.

"When's the wedding going to be, Martha?" Alma Purdy demanded, her small black eyes greedy with interest.

"Thanksgiving Day," Mrs. Lane's voice trembled, as if she sensed for the first time the enormity of the thing to which she had given her consent. The eyes of seven women betrayed their scorn of her, the unholy glee with which they tasted the delicious thought of the popular and beautiful girl, who had scorned Myrtle Street, yoked to decaying old age.

"It's for you, Mother," she returned in a few moments. "Some woman insists on speaking to you. She wouldn't give me the message."

When Mrs. Lane left, seven women drew together in a tight, cruel circle and in the center of the circle the reputation of Cherry Lane was tossed and bandied and snatched at and torn until it burst like an over-inflated, glittering toy balloon.

POPE CRITICIZES RELIGIOUS STATE

have been informed that venerable bishops have been torn from their sees, the government concentrating, incarcerating and even killing pious ecclesiastics and slaughtering the unarmed faithful praying before the venerated sanctuary of the Most Holy Virgin."

"Despite the protests of our young students," he added, "the persecution has been extended inside private schools."

The pontiff admonished French Catholics not to remain divided in their religion because of politics, but to unite in the field of the Church, its divine right, and of Christian marriage, Christian family, Christian schools and Christian teaching.

He deplored the outbreaks which had taken place in Italy after the attempts on the life of Mussolini, "who with such energy governs the fate of the country."

All the members of the Sacred College residing in Rome took part in the consistory. Soon after they had gathered, the pontiff offered praver and delivered his allocution. With the consent of the Sacred College, Pope Pius then announced the appointment of two new Italian cardinals, Giuseppe Gamba, Archbishop of Turin, and Lorenzo Lauri, nuncio to Poland. A number of bishops, many of whom had already been appointed by brief, were precognized and the solemn ceremony was brought to a close.

OSWALD MOSLEY LIKELY TO WIN

AID UNWELCOME.

SMETHWICK, Staffordshire, Dec. 21—Oswald Mosley's Socialist campaign for parliament, which has been marked by rough-and-tumble tactics and vitriolic personal attacks came to an end yesterday, with the polling set for today.

The wealthy and debonair husband of Lady Cynthia Mosley is confident of winning, and it will be surprising if he doesn't, in view of the political complexion of the constituency.

Smethwick is Laborite and returned the Labor candidate, J. E. Davison, by a 1,200 majority over the Conservative standard-bearer in the last election.

The communists have entered the present fight at the eleventh hour, broadcasting leaflets urging the electors to vote for Mosley, and sending Messrs. Gallagher and McManus to speak in his behalf. These emissaries, however, are not welcomed by the regular Laborites. Mosley himself disavows connection with them, and seems inclined to cry "save me from my friends."

ONLY FIVE TO BE ELECTED.

This column was in error when it said the other night that the resignation of Ald. Turner meant the election of another Alderman at the municipal election to complete his term.

As a matter of fact, the responsibility of appointing a successor to Ald. Turner will fall upon the shoulders of next year's Council, and only five Aldermen, as usual, will be elected by the people.

There are not a few citizens who think that the law in this regard might well be revised to provide that when a vacancy in the Council occurs just before the date of the municipal election the electors should be given a chance to say by whom they want the gap filled, through their ballots.

TO AVOID OVERLAPPING.

In connection with the dispensing of Christmas cheer The Examiner would like to suggest once more that the services of the Central Charity Board should be utilized.

Organizations whose members would like to feel satisfied that their donations were being used to the best advantage and in relieving genuine cases of distress can get that assurance by consulting the members of the Central Charity Board or the Relief Officer.

Necessarily the board is in touch with the situation generally throughout the city and is in a position to supply reliable information as to cases of distress and as to families whose circumstances justify assistance.

The haphazard distribution of Christmas cheer by a large number of organizations, acting independently of each other and with no connecting link, often leads to results that are far from satisfactory, and in many cases overlapping could be easily avoided if the services of the Central Charity Board were called upon by organizations which have relief to give and which are anxious that the utmost benefit should be obtained from their efforts.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

With municipal matters coming into their own with the rapid approach of the annual election, a bulletin issued by the Citizens' Research Institute dealing with the cost of municipal government in Canada should be of interest, even although Peterboro is not among the cities considered by the Institute in preparing its report.

The figures quoted indicate that Ontario and Western cities are becoming more and more alike in costs, with Quebec and Eastern cities increasing yearly but still below the level of Ontario and Western cities, although in this connection it should be remembered that the services given in Ontario and Western cities are probably more closely alike than the services demanded of the municipal governments in Quebec and Eastern cities.

Educational costs still overshadow the costs of other individual services rendered by municipal governments.

Nine of the cities in the list show per capita increases in 1925 over 1924 for this service, while eight show decreases.

In Ontario the trend, with the exception of Windsor, is to increase, while Western cities show decreases, with the exception of Vancouver and Regina.

It is interesting to note that the highest per capita tax for education purposes is in Saskatoon with $21.27, while the lowest quoted by the Institute is Charlottetown's $3 per head of population.

A BUILDER PASSES.

Few men in the history of Peterboro have contributed so materially toward the upbuilding of this city, and none have been more active in so many lines of public service as ex-Magistrate D. W. Dumble, who passed away yesterday.

Younger citizens remember Mr. Dumble more particularly in his capacity as chief magistrate; older residents look further back into Peterboro's history and recall the public-spirited citizen whose keen mind and sound judgment were to be found at work in every activity that promised to make this a better and more progressive centre.

They are recalling the D. W. Dumble whose firm advocacy of the Trent Canal kept that project always before the members of the Government; the D. W. Dumble whose efforts were successfully devoted toward providing his home town with railway accommodation; the D. W. Dumble whose interest in beautifying Peterboro was proven by his services on behalf of the Horticultural Society; the D. W. Dumble who gave lavishly of his time and ability in the interest of the Board of Trade; the D. W. Dumble who for over twenty-five years served as a member of the School Board, and found time also to serve for a term as a member of the City Council.

Of his services as a Police Magistrate the fact that for forty years he presided in the local Police Court is sufficient evidence of his fitness for the position, and of the general soundness of his decisions and judgments. As a magistrate he displayed a sound knowledge of human nature ,the faculty of tempering justice with mercy and yet giving punishment where punishment was due, and a ready Irish wit that brightened even the dark precincts of the Police Court.

For many years he has been a director of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, and one of it Solicitors.

Few laymen devoted themselves so thoroughly to church work as Mr. Dumble, who for twenty-five years was Recording Steward of George Street Church, forty years a member of the Trustee Board, for a long period Superintendent of the Sunday School, and was active in other capacities.

Although ill-health in late years had caused him to disassociate himself from his many public activities, the record of what he had done on behalf of his fellow-citizens and of the city he loved so well should ensure Mr. Dumble a permanent place in public memory as one who over a long life-time had devoted himself to public service.

A great citizen has gone in his passing.

THE MARITIMES AND THE WEST.

A revealing illustration of the temper of many people in the West in dealing with national problems is afforded by the comment of The Manitoba Free Press upon the report of the Maritime Commission. After a few insipid introductory paragraphs evidently designed to pretend that it views the question in a broad national way, The Free Press discloses its real attitude in this paragraph:

"There are a number of recommendations in the report of no particular gravity; but the major proposal—that of a statutory railway rate, with the Dominion treasury paying the freight rate covered by the reduction in place of the shippers—is one which is not lightly to be accepted. It is a principle capable of extensive application; and if it is accepted and blessed by Parliament, we shall not be surprised if attempts are made in the future to apply it extensively."

Yet this is the same Manitoba Free Press which in 1917 fought tooth and nail against suspension of the Crow's Nest rates, notwithstanding that at the time those rates were losing the railways millions which, ultimately, in the case of the Canadian National, had to be put up by the rest of us. It is the same Free Press that, day in and day out, clamors for the destruction of the Railway Commission so that Parliament, with its ear to the ground for Western votes, may give the West statutory low rates, regardless of the East. The same Manitoba Free Press that because of some hoped for benefit for the West, wants Canada to throw tens of millions of dollars into the Hudson Bay Railway. It is right and proper, according to the logic and the Canadianism of The Free Press, to tax the people of Canada 60 or 70 millions of dollars for a project that is fantastic, simply because some deluded people in the West want it as an outlet for their wheat. It is gravely improper to have the Maritimes ask for a railway rate to bring their coal and other products to the markets of Central Canada!

The Journal has never much sympathized with the Maritime claim of being the victim of Confederation. We are glad to note that Sir Andrew Duncan exposes it as a fallacy. But what the people of Canada are faced with now is not a controversy about the past, but a reality of the present: the reality as to whether or not they are prepared to make a financial sacrifice to maintain content and prosperous a part of this Dominion.

The suggested solution of a statutory railway rate undoubtedly has its defects; but until somebody can propose something likely to be more valuable, it is not to be lightly rejected. It certainly ought not to be rejected because of the clamor of those who have been the apostles of paternalism in this country, and who during the past fifteen years have taken up half the time of Parliament clamoring for sectional policies fraught with peril to the rest of us.

Much loose talk is sometimes heard about the Maritime Provinces feeding at the trough of the treasury. Such talk would be less rare, we think, if those who indulge it would take the trouble to go back over the public accounts of this country and study the per capita expenditures in the various Provinces during the past 20 years. It is true that a lot of money has been thrown to the wolves in wharves and breakwaters in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; true also that the old Intercolonial was a sink-hole for millions. But we here in the other Provinces should not forget that the Maritimes have been taxed, and taxed heavily, for outlays of hundreds of millions upon railways and canals from which they derived little benefit. Since Confederation Canada has spent $143,000,000 on canals; has put half a billion of capital expenditure in Government railways; has put tens of millions in harbors on the St. Lawrence, at the head of the Lakes, and on the Pacific; has put $35,000,000 in the Hudson Bay Railway. The Maritimes helped pay for these things.

When the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways were taken over by the Dominion Government, there were guarantees outstanding on these railways by the Provinces, as follows:

Province.	Total Guarantee.
British Columbia	$40,157,523.86
Alberta	22,539,957.97
Saskatchewan	28,567,723.97
Manitoba	25,662,545.51
Ontario	7,859,997.59
Nova Scotia	4,447,000.00

These have been assumed by the Federal Government. The principal and interest are now a charge against the Federal treasury. In the case of two Provinces, through default of payment by the company of bond interest, the Government of Canada was required to redeem the coupons which these Provinces would otherwise have been called upon to pay, and has since done so, interest date by interest date.

These things being true—and they are but the surface of the story—it is a little unjust, we think, to treat a Maritime claim for consideration as the plea of a mendicant. Certainly it does not lie in the mouth of Western Canada, living in the most fragile of glass houses, to cast stones.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Citizens of Peterboro shouldn't forget that one of the duties of the present week is to nominate at least enough candidates to ensure the Council being brought up to strength.

Apparently no one has told this St. Patrick's hockey team that it is not against the rules to slip the puck into the net once in a while.

The usual just-before-Christmas epidemic is beginning to make itself felt. The doctors, however, expect that the disease will disappear after this festival season.

One subject has been found upon which all the groups in Canada's Federal Parliament could readily agree, i.e., the desirability of adjourning in plenty of time for the Christmas festivities.

The appointment of a politician to a lucrative berth over the head of a deputy of many years' service is the kind of thing that could be expected where there is no Civil Service Commission.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again quiet, the only sales being a few loads of No. 2 Northern wheat at 8 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f. Bay ports. The tone of the spot market for oats was stronger owing to the renewed strength that has prevailed in the West and prices were advanced 1 1-2c to 2c per bushel.

The demand for Spring wheat grades of flour was confined to small lots and business on the whole was quiet. Prices were firm.

The market for Winter wheat flour was without any new feature to note, the demand being limited and the undertone was steady.

A moderate amount of business was worked in all lines of millfeed and values were well maintained. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was fairly active and firm.

A feature of the local eggs trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market for storage eggs and prices were advanced one to two cents per dozen. This was attributed to the small supplies and the good demand. Prices for all grades of strictly fresh eggs were well maintained under a good demand. The receipts of all grades were 347 cases.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for potatoes and prices were reduced 10 cents per bag, which was due to the indifferent demand. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.70 to $1.75 per bag of 90 pounds, New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.55 and Quebec White stock at $1.40 per bag in bulk of 90 pounds, ex-track.

The undertone to the butter market continues strong and prices are steadily tending towards a higher level, which is attributed to the buying power. No. 1 pasteurized was quoted at 40 1-4c to 40 3-4c per pound.

The export trade in cheese continued inactive, but the local demand was fair and prices were steady. Western grades were offered at 18 3-4c per pound.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Grain values see-sawed yesterday within a narrow range, traders being generally disposed to await the United States Government crop report, due yesterday afternoon. A reduction of about 7,000,000 bushels from the preliminary estimate of Spring wheat production was unforeseen, and in some quarters a moderate increase of the Winter wheat total was erroneously expected. Toward the last, the wheat market eased down after being somewhat firmer, most of the time earlier. Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, 3-8 net lower to 1-4c advance; with corn 3-8 to 5-8c off; oats 3-8 to 5-8c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 45 cents.

Corn weakened on account of an increase of the visible supply total and because of favorable weather for the crop movement. Oats touched a new high price record for the season. The Government report as to oats, and corn was expected to prove bullish, but the opposite turned out to be the case.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

VETERANS AND CIVIL SERVICE

The Editor, Examiner:

Sir.—With reference to the employment of returned soldiers in the Civil Service, the following figures showing the number of ex-service men employed by the British Government at 1st October, 1926, should be of interest:

Total number of male employees 226,975

Ex-Service men, 63 per cent.... 143,576

Out of which number there are 44,560 disabled.

—From the Overseas Daily Mail.

It would be interesting to know how these numbers compare with the number of ex-service men employed in the Civil Service of Canada.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

"THE MAN WHO COULD NOT BE DULL"

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Scribner's has gotten out a complete set of the works of Theodore Roosevelt. It is advertised in a pamphlet entitled, "The Man Who Could Not Be Dull." This is a good characterization of Theodore Roosevelt.

He was a dramatic personality and had a way of doing things characteristic of masters of men.

He was a born leader and had a facility for uttering what was in the hearts of everybody.

His career is illuminating.

The advertising pamphlet about him quotes from a writer who said, very justly: "He was frail; he made himself a tower of strength. He was timid; he made himself a lion of courage. He was a dreamer; he became one of the great doers of all time. Men put their trust in him, women found a champion in him, kings stood in awe of him, but children made him their playmate."

Altogether he was a figure the like of which only a young people like America could produce.

He hated injustice and tyranny. He was patient in sorrow and affliction. He loved nature and craved adventure.

He was always good newspaper copy and is probably better known abroad than any American, unless it be Abraham Lincoln.

Many of us did not agree with him in his ideals, but all of us admired him, and admired his pluck in standing up for his convictions.

One of his characteristic sentences is:

"I wish to preach not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life, the life of toil and effort, of labor and strife; to preach that highest form of success which comes not to the man who desires mere easy peace, but to the man who does not shrink from danger, from hardship or from bitter toil, and who out of these wins splendid, ultimate triumph."

He was a great inspiration to American youth and represented the American spirit.

He exemplified the teaching of Nietzsche:

"Build your house on the side of a volcano. Live dangerously."

WISE AND OTHERWISE

One out of five saw the Sesquicentennial free, says a headline. So four people did pay to get in!

Why all the worry about the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony? It doesn't seem to bother the ladies in the least.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

JAUNDICE NOT A DISEASE

If your skin turns yellow and you suffer from excessive sweating, you are probably having the symptoms of janndice, which in itself is a symptom of a stoppage of the normal flow of bile; the liver is not able to properly pour its contents out through the common duct, or through the gall bladder. The bile backs up in the system and shows itself by discoloring the skin and mucous membranes and even the finger nails. The stools are usually light colored, being a chalky gray color, while the urine becomes very dark as the blood throws off the excessive bile through the kidneys.

The cause is always the stoppage of bile.

Gall stones block the cystic duct, or this duct may be closed by a catarrhal inflammation of its membrane. The stoppage may be caused by the pressure of a tumor against the gall bladder or liver—or even pregnancy may cause it.

Persistent constipation may also be responsible, if the hepatic flexture of the colon is sufficiently high, so that the packed feces interferes with the normal functioning of the liver.

The cure consists in removing the cause, and this can usually be accomplished by dietetical measures alone.

Fasting with fruit juices such as citric acid fruits, will always stimulate the liver and gall bladder to increased function.

If the jaundice does not disappear after two or three weeks of the fast, it is then advisable to take a buttermilk fast for several weeks, as the lactic acid of the buttermilk is also helpful in ridding the system of the accumulated bile.

In some rare cases where the gall stones are blocking the bile passages, that only can be removed by surgical means. These cases, however, are quite rare and surgery should never be resorted to until the most radical fasting and dietary measures have been used.

TOLEDO CLUBBER BELIEVED TAKEN

Man Arrested at Detroit Answers Description Given.

HAD LOCKET.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Police last night arrested a man here, apparently demented, who, they said, answered the description of the man sought as the Toledo "clubber."

Police found a heavy piece of iron and a pair of steel pliers in his clothing. They also found a locket with a woman's picture in it. Police circulars sent out from Toledo described such a locket as having been taken from the body on one of the clubber's victims.

When arrested, the man was unable to give him name and only babbled incoherently about Toledo and women.

OBITUARY.

MRS. WILLIAM A. FALLIS.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 21. — The death of Mrs. William A. Fallis, which took place on Saturday, Dec. 18, followed some weeks of illness, removes another of the oldest residents of the community.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Kinsman, was born eighty years ago on the family homestead about one mile west of the village, where Mr. E. Armstrong now resides. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kinsman, predeceased her by several years, and of their family of eight children, two sons and six daughters, only two, Mrs. George Thorne, of Carmel, and Mr. Harry Kinsman, of Vasey (north of Orillia), now survive. Those previously deceased were Mrs. William Staples, Mrs. Alonza Fee, Mrs. Robert Barker, Mrs. John Thexton and Mr. John Kinsman.

The marriage of Miss Kinsman and Mr. W. A. Fallis took place about sixty years ago, and their home on the Fallis Line was always noted for its open hearted hospitality. The death of Mr. Fallis occurred twenty-four years ago, and of their family of four boys and four girls, the eldest, Mrs. Wesley Larmer (Victoria), and one son, Walter, who died in early life, predeceased their parents.

Besides the sister and brother already mentioned, the immediate surviving relatives are three daughters, Mrs. William Leith (Rose), Mrs. James McMillan (Minnie) of Millbrook, Mrs. Charles Devitt (Mabel) of Orillia, and three sons: Henry A., on the homestead; Edgar, living on the Hutchison homestead north of the village, and George, of Millbrook, survive. There are 13 grandchildren.

Previous to coming to Millbrook to make her home, ten years since, Mrs. Fallis had moved from the homestead at the time of her eldest son's marriage, and lived on the farm now belonging to her son, George, on the Fallis Line.

Though belonging to an Anglican family, deceased after her marriage joined her husband in membership in the former Methodist Church, the late Mr. Fallis donating the land for the site when the present church was built.

Rev. F. H. Howard and Rev. Joseph Wilks had charge of the funeral service at the family residence, King Street, on Monday, December 20, the large number of friends and relatives who gathered at the house being an evidence of the esteem in which deceased was held. Among the many beautiful floral tribes laid upon the casket was a spray from Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge No. 176, of which Mr. H. A. Fallis is a member.

The pall-bearers were three nephews, Messrs. Joseph, Arthur, and Austin Thorne, A. J. Fallis, ex-M.P.P., Reeve Stuart Fallis, and ex-Warden A. J. Henderson.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: Mrs. and Miss Graham of Orillia, Miss M. Kinsman and Mrs. Potter of Vasey, Mrs. William Thorne and Mr. and Mrs. R. Thorne and son of Reaboro, Messrs. John McMillan and Russell Hannah of Cobourg.

D. W. DUMBLE

The funeral of the late David W. Dumble will be held on Wednesday morning, at 10 o'clock, in George Street United Church. Interment to Cobourg at 2 p.m.

WOLF TOTEM POLE AT PRINCE RUPERT

This totem pole, which now stands at Prince Rupert, B.C., formerly belonged to a Nishga Chief, named Dauk, and stood in the front of his lodge, at Gitlakdamix, on the Upper Naas River, in Northern British Columbia.

The carved figures seen on the top of the pole represent the principal actors in legends describing the origin of the family crests. The owner of the totem pole belonged to the "Wolf Clan."

The principal legend which explains how the wolf was adopted for the family crest is as follows:

One day, long years ago, a great lava eruption took place, at Gitwunsilkqu, on the Upper Naas River. The molten mass pushed the waters of the river back across the valley to the mountain-side and formed a great lava plain, which extended from the head waters of the Kshluich to the canyon, at Gwinaha. The fiery flow overwhelmed villages and fishing hamlets in its path, and the people fled to the surrounding hills. Among these fugitives was an Indian chief named Gum-lu-gidis, the ancestor of the owner of the pole. Gum-lu-gidis fled, with his family, to the highlands of the Shkamal River where they camped. Night after night they had no rest, but were disturbed by weird sounds and voices accompanied by the beating of tomtoms. At length the Chief and some of his braves determined to set out and discover where the sounds came from. The legend describes how they found themselves in the abode of "Luluks". Spirits of the Dead, where they beheld many strange things. Escaping from these haunted regions, Gum-lu-gidis, overcome by fear, again took up his flight, this time across the Grease Trail to the Skeena River, leaving the Naas, with its terrors, far behind. When the winter snows had melted and the ice had left the river, Gum-lu-gidis and his companions travelled down the Skeena River, in dugouts made from cottonwood trees, until they reached the island of Khern, now known as Kaien Island, on which Prince Rupert is situated. Not very long after they had settled at Khern, Gum-lu-gidis' rest was once more disturbed, this time by the nightly howls of wolves which seemed to be calling Gum-lu-gidis by his name. The old fear overcame him once more, for he thought the spirits of the lava had again found him out. After the howling had continued for two nights, the old Chief determined to meet his fate. Dressed in his ceremonial dancing robes, with face painted and his long hair tied in a knot, after the manner of the warriors of his tribe, he set out alone from the camp armed with his Chief's tomahawk, set with abalone shell. Following the direction from which the sounds proceeded, Gum-lu-gidis came face to face with a large white wolf. Raising his tomahawk prepared to defend himself he noticed the animal was in great pain and unaware of his approach, as it was trying in vain to dislodge a sharp piece of deer's bone which had pierced its jaw. Gun-lu-gidis said to the wolf "Brother, do me no harm and I will remove the bone which otherwise will cause your death." After Gum-lu-gidis had removed the bone, the wolf became very friendly, and each time the Chief went out hunting, the white wolf killed a deer for him; thus supplying him and his family with food.

So, the legend states, Gum-lu-gidis adopted the white wolf for his "Ayouks" (crest) and in his ceremonial dances always wore a white wolf skin robe.

After some years of peace, Gum-lu-gidis became homesick, and he returned to the Naas, for he longed to fish once more in the waters of the Kshlich, where the "hanginwezuch" (white salmon) spawn.

PERCY FARMERS TO TAKE COURSE

Will Have Series of Lectures By Agricultural Experts.

FOR FOUR WEEKS.

WARKWORTH, Dec. 20.—At a meeting held here on Thursday evening, presided over by Walter H. Smith, agricultural representative for Northumberland, a resolution favoring the organization of a short agricultural course for boys, was moved by James Armstrong and seconded by Wilbur Nelson and carried unanimously. The following committee was appointed to meet on Thursday, January 6th, in the Council Chamber to complete arrangements: Walter Honey, Dartford; Arthur Workman, Warkworth; Willard Pollick, Morganston; Gorden McCubbin, Reginald McCann, and Donald Knight, Norham; Douglas Woof, Codrington; Thomas Duff, Edwin McClary, George Poole, and Bernard Lonergan, Warkworth; C. H. Curtis, Norham, and Harry Carr, Morganston.

The course is to continue for four weeks, with lectures from experienced leaders five days a week beginning on January 18th and closing on February 11th. Classes will commence at 9.30 a.m. and close at 4.00 p.m. with one and one half-hours at noon.

In outlining the course, Mr. Smith stated that the Department expected the Municipality as an expression of interest, to furnish a room heated and lighted free of charge.

The students are to be given lectures on different breeds and types of cattle illustrated by motion pictures where it is not possible to visit herds and make practical demonstration. Mr. Smith stated that he believed there was a future for agriculture as well as any other business if the former was followed with the same interest and earnestness that other vocations are pursued. There would be special days devoted to sheep, swine, fruit growing, bees, veterinary science, soil cultivation and rotation of crops. Bacteriology, marketing and farm accounting as well as public speaking.

It was hoped that a junior farmers' association would be formed and that a number of young men would have the opportunity of visiting stockyards at Guelph, Toronto and other places, and receiving instruction from the most capable of experts along different lines of farm industry, also that special grain cleaners might be available by means of which farmers could secure the choicest seed for sowing, both in coarse grains and fine seeds.

Young men should receive the most benefit from the course, but none are excluded. Twelve should be a sufficient number to warrant a class but it was probable that the class in Warkworth would include thirty or more.

C. H. Curtis, W. Herbert Nelson, and George Poole spoke briefly, stating that they were in favor of the class and promising it their loyal support. It is anticipated that a class for girls will be held at the same time. Arrangements for this are being made.

POPE'S CHARGES UNCALLED FOR, SAY FASCISTS

STILL FRIENDLY.

ROME, December 21. Canadian Press. — The Italian government considers "strange, surprising and uncalled for," the Popes pointed criticism of Fascism's religious policies contained in yesterday's allocution, the Associated Press was informed by a government spokesman.

The papal declaraiton which is felt to have eliminated any hope of speedy reconciliation between church and state in Italy, came as such a shock to political circles generally, that the greatest reticence is being observed while the newspapers have not printed a single word of comment.

Incidents of violence against Catholic individuals and organizations upon which the Pontiff based his criticisms, it was declared, are definitely things of the past, having occurred as a spontaneous and momentary reaction lasting for only a few days after the most recent attempt on Mussolini's life.

Since then, it is asserted, nothing has occurred to occasion the Pope's remarks, while the government in addition has maintained, and intends to continue maintaining, its policy of friendliness to religion.

BIG SAW MILL WILL BE BUILT

TO COST $6,000,000.

TORONTO, Dec. 21. Canadian Press. — Construction will commence next July at Blind River, Ont., of what is declared will be the finest saw mill on the continent, with a capacity of a hundred million feet of lumber a year. The mill's establishment which will represent an investment of approximately $6,000,000, is the result of an agreement between the J. J. McFadden Lumber Company of Sprague, and the Shevlin-Clarke Lumber Company of Rainey River, which has been approved by the Ontario Government.

Under the terms of the agreement, the Shevlin-Clarke Company is obligated to spend at least a million and a quarter dollars in wages yearly and to keep a staff of 1500 men during seven months of the year in the woods.

In addition 950 men are to be employed for eight months of the year in and around the mills and 300 to be employed permanently.

The company is also obligated to purchase annually feed, hay and supplies to the value of half a million dollars.

Police and Firemen Grappling in Hudson River For Bodies.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press). — Police and firemen today continued grappling along the ice foes of the Hudson River for the bodies of ten men believed to have lost their lives when the launch Linseed capsized yesterday. Thirty bodies of the workmen who were proceeding to new jobs have been recovered, but relatives of at least ten others who visited the morgue failed to find the bodies they sought.

Twenty-seven others of the more than sixty men who crowded the 42-foot craft in its perilous trip across the river from 95th Street, New York, to Edgewater, N.J., were rescued after clinging to ice cakes and the side of the ship for almost an hour.

Capt. John Rosweider, the 29-year-old skipper of the craft, who swam more than a mile towards the Jersey shore before he was picked up, was under police guard at the Knickerbocker Hospital today suffering from shock and exposure and threatened with pneumonia. He faces technical charges of negligence and homicide.

Wheat Advances To-day On Receipt Of Crop Report

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)— Wheat scored a substantial early advance in prices as a result of buying based for the most part on the United States' Government crop report. Official figures both on shipping and winter wheat were regarded in general as bullish. Opening at 1-8c. decline to 1 3-8 cents gain, the wheat market soon showed a decided upturn all around. Corn, oats and provisions were easy, corn starting at 5-8 cent to 3-4 to 7-8 cent lower, with subsequent rallies transient.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 139 3-8, May 139 5-8. Corn, December 53 7-8, May 81 5-8. Oats, December unquoted, May 50 5-8.

Mine Trade Slackens Weak Spots Common

TORONTO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Although trading slackened off slightly on the Standard Mining Exchange today, the volume of shares changing hands in the first session was very close to a million. Some losses were shown, although the market was not wholly weak. Teck Hughes touched 5.14 and then sold down to 5.00, ten cents lower than yesterday, while Area sold down 8 1-2 to 83. Duprat, still active, lost two at 31 1-2, and Noranda eased 35 at 23.40. Amulet sold up to 183, and Laval Quebec one at 39. Argonaut firmed three at 55.

Toronto Upward Move Breaks Sharply To-day

TORONTO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—The upward movement of the past few days on the Toronto Stock Exchange, broke this morning and British Columbia Fishing was leader in the decline. Fishing sold down to a low of 97 1-8 this morning, recovering to 99 1-4 for a net loss of 2 3-8 points. Industrial Alcohol, another leader in the generally less active session, eased down 1 1-4 at 30 1-4, and Gooderham and Worts receded a point to 44 1-2. Abitibi on a few sales was marked down 1 3-4 at 88 1-2, Brazilian sold down 1 5-8 at 103 1-8, and British American Oil lost half at 83 1-2. Canadian Canners Common was a firm spot, reaching a new high at 21, a half higher. Canadian Pacific firmed two at 168 1-2.

Smaller Turnover To-day With Prices Fluctuating

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—With business contracting due to the higher carrying charges for call money and the approach of the holiday season, the stock market today shifted back and forth under the pressure of profit-taking and short selling on one side and the revival of pool operations on the other. Despite this retarding influence, bullish activities were not entirely suspended. Speculative cliques brought new issues into the limelight, lifting the prices of Davison Chemical and Mallinson Silk 2 1-2 to 4 1-2 points. General Motors was leading an advance in the automobile and accessory stocks in the early afternoon. Buying interest in the railroad group was confined mainly to the Van Sweringen issues, which responded to indications that an announcement would soon be made regarding the Nickel Plate merger.

Toronto Conservative Will Ask Premier To Introduce Legislation.

TORONTO, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—T. A. Murphy, Toronto Conservative member of the legislature, will discuss with Premier G. H. Mr. Murphy contends that Provincial finances will bear the extra cost involved.

TINY CHILDREN FOUND IN HOUSE, WITH LITTLE FOOD OR CLOTHING

Four Little Ones Discovered In Deplorable Condition in North End.

HOUSE VERY COLD.

Doors and Windows Plugged With Cloth To Keep Out Draught.

Four little children, the eldest of whom is a girl five years of age, and the youngest a baby only a few months old, are happier to-day as a result of a visit by J. Edgar, Inspector for the Children's Aid Society, to a north-end home last night.

When Mr. Edgar entered the home he found the boy, aged three, lying huddled in the corner on a filthy mattress covered by an equally disreputable quilt that was the only covering. The remainder of the family, consisting of two little girls and the baby, were in a deplorable state. The eldest girl was standing on the door of the oven, in her bare feet, in a vain attempt to keep warm. The other little girl was standing on a chair placed in front of the stove. The baby was lying in a much battered carriage with just a little cotton dress covering its body.

The children and the mother were removed to the Children's Shelter by Mr. Edgar, some kind neighbors providing blankets to protect the kiddies from the cold.

It was a forlorn sight that greeted The Examiner at the house, on investigation today.

The door of the kitchen had no handle or a latch and upon being opened revealed a sight almost beyond description. In one corner, near the stove was an old mattress, worn that it could hardly be termed a mattress, and a bundle of rags that did service for blankets. On this make-shift bed the mother and the four children apparently slept, as an inspection of the two upstairs rooms failed to reveal any other clothing. In an attempt to keep out the chill winds the vents under the doors and the cracks in the windows had been plugged with rags. The cooking utensils consisted of a frying pan and a kettle. Three plates and two cups without handles completed the list of utensils. On the table sat a small lard pail containing a little milk, which had evidently been brought in by some of the neighbors, on whom the family seem to have depended on for their subsistence.

The two rooms upstairs, which the mother said they were not using on account of the cold, were equally bad. Two broken down beds, with no coverings and a rickety dresser, were the only furniture the rooms contained.

Mr. Edgar told The Examiner that he had interviewed the Mayor and the Relief Officer in connection with the case, but they claimed that they were helpless to deal with the matter, as the woman cannot be admitted to the House of Refuge unless she is sixty years of age, and cannot receive anything from the Charity Board on account of the husband being at work. The law states that the woman should be given forty-eight hours to vacate the premises but makes no provision after that.

The woman told Mr. Edgar that all she had last week was a dollar from the husband, who is working in the woods, and ninety-five cents which she obtained by making artificial roses which a young brother sold for her.

The mother is now at the Children's Aid Shelter with the children, pending some disposition of the case.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

Y.W.C.A. CHILDREN'S PARTY.

Two hundred and fifty wee tots, including the children from the Shelter and the Saturday afternoon classes, passed the beautiful Christmas tree which towered away up to to the ceiling with the branches laden down with 300 presents. Icicles, snow and gleaming balls decorated the tree, and a big star crowned the very tip to many 'Oh's' and 'Ah's' issued from the lips of the kiddies on seeing the tree.

A Christmas story was told by Miss Jean Anderson. Suddenly loud knocking was heard, and amidst a great jingle of bells, Santa Claus appeared with a huge pack of oranges and toys. The children took keen delight in performing before Santa. Many gym and dance numbers were given, including a Christmas dance and song by the babies' class, Ruth McNeeley and Evelyn Hill taking special part. The junior dancing class gave an interpretive dance, Pierot and Columbine. The junior gym class did the spinning dance and the intermediate class sang the carol, "Away in a Manger." Three girls of the class, dressed as the Three Wise Men, appeared during the carol. Santa Claus was awfully generous. Every child carried a present, oranges, and a candy cane, tucked under her arm on the homeward way.

Committee assisting: Mrs. R. M. Waddell, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. G. Wood. Santa Claus, Miss M. V. Jory.

The Duke of Marlborough, right, and his first duchess the former Consuelo Vanderbilt are in the public eye following the nullification of their marriage by the Roman Catholic church. Originally Episcopalian, they have, since their divorce, both married aCtholics. The Roman Catholic church does not recognize divorce and no Catholic may marry a divorced person. But in this case Rome holds there was no original marriage because Consuelo gave no willing consent. By this reasoning there was no divorce and the couple were in the eyes of the Roman Catholic church free to marry. This decision has caused a storm in Episcopalian and society circles where the Roman Catholic decision is denounced. The former duchess is shown at the left with her new husband, Colonel Socque Balsan.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

ST. ANDREW'S, CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 21.—St. Andrew's Sunday School held their annual Christmas concert on Friday evening in the Sunday School room. There was a good attendance and the children excelled in their programme and enjoyed the arrival of Santa Claus with his large bundles of treats for them.

Mr. Grier spoke a few words of welcome to the audience and as chairman for evening presided over the following programme:

Chorus by Members of the School.
Recitation by Marion Ryden.
Duet—Helen Cochrane and Mildred Easton.
Recitation — "The Reason Why," by Ethel Easton.
Comic Songs by Owen Hendry and Keith Bailey.
Christmas Dialogue—"The Christmas Lesson"—Father and Mother (Hector McMillan and Marion McArthur) decide to have no Christmas this year. The children (Muriel and Mildred Dalgleish) rebel, and declare they will have a Christmas. The Christmas Fairy (Jecquelyn McEachern) hears this, and waves her wand, and Wreath of Greeting, Christmas Stocking, Christmas Pudding, Striped Candies, and Spirit of Christmas, all fairies, appear in a dream to father and mother, and when they awaken, they decide after all to have Christmas as usual.

A very pretty "Rose Drill" was given by a number of small girls and was very pretty and well given. The girls were Marion Ryder, Muriel, Mabel, and Mildred Dalgleish, Jacquelyn Mcachern, Mildred Easton, Helen Cochrane, Evelyn Todd, and Ethel Easton.

The next number was entitled, "Jolly Boys," and the following, Owen Hendy, Keith Bailey, Douglas Watson, Lionel Dalgleish, Don Watters, Hugh J. Adams, Bill Fox, W. Carter, Bruce Grills and Arnold Phillips, gave several choruses and a clever imitation of a boys band with mouthorgans, saws, etc.

Recitation—Mildred Easton.
Recitation—Stanley Easton.
Duet—"The Chimes Across the Snow," by Elsie Connor and Jerrine Barnum.

Mr. Grier then told an entertaining story for the children. Two little boys, Pedro and his brother, lived in a far-away land. In that land there was a large church with a huge spire, and in that spire a set of wonderful chimes which would only play when some wonderful gift was placed on the altar. Pedro and his brother took their small gifts and walked to this church. At the gates of the city, a poor old lady had fallen in the snow. Pedro sent his brother on with the gifts while he stayed to help the poor woman. Inside the church, many rich brought beautiful gifts, among them the King, but still the bells refused to ring. When Pedro's brother placed his gifts on the altar, suddenly on the air were the most beautiful sounds, the bells had begun to ring. This was because their gifts were the gifts of love and kindness.

A Star Drill was then given and was very pretty, the girls being all in white with large stars and wands with tinsel. The following took part, Ella Cook, Leah Blue, Mary McGregor, Bessie Campbell, Jerrine Barnum, Willamine Allan, Marion McArthur, Susan Kerr, Rose Clarke, Mary Blakely, Reta Hucheon, Ruby Townsend, and Flora Covert.

Piano Selection—Miss Jean Anderson.

Solo—Miss Bertha Blue; Chorus by School—Queen, Jean Hendry, and other songs and recitations.

Santa at last arrives and is greeted by the Snow Queen, Alice McKelvie. A duet by Margaret and Frances Anderson, and a recitation by F. Anderson, "The Night Before Christmas." The Queen, little Jean Hendy, presented a handsome bouquet to Rev. and Mrs. Grier, after which Santa cleared the Christmas tree and all the children got their packages.

Mr. Grier announced that $35 had been collected at the door and also expressed his pleasure for the good attendance, and indebtedness to the following: Mrs. H. T. Scott, Miss Freda Nelson, Miss Katie MacArthur, Mrs. William Hume, Miss Connor, and Miss Ivey, who formed a committee and had charge of the drilling for the evening's programme.

WEDDING BELLS.

SCOTT—McCONNELL.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 21.—A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, December 14 at 11 a.m., when Josephine Victoria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McConnell of Hastings was united in marriage to Mr. Robert John Scott of Campbellford. The Rev. M. L. Hinton of Hastings, was officiating clergyman.

The bride was given away by her father and looked charming in her bridal gown of white crepe satin and veil with orange blossom wreath. She carried a handsome shower bouquet of ophelia roses and wore the bridegroom's gift, a necklace of pearls.

Miss Bertha McConnell, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and looked lovely in a gown of orchid crepe romaine, beaded in silver, and wore a large picture hat. She carried a large boquet of ophelia roses. Mr. Robert Fox of Campbellford acted as groomsman.

Little Ruth Carscadden of Port Hope, niece of the bride, was flower girl and was prettily gowned in pale green silk crepe and carried a basket of carnations. Miss Ina McConnell of Norwood played the wedding march and sang "All For You," during the signing of the register.

The house was prettily decorated with 'mums' and yellow candles, and a dainty luncheon was served to the immediate relatives of the bride and groom after the ceremony.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a silver mesh bag, to the groomsman green gold cuff links, to the flower girl a gold bracelet, and to the soloist a gold bar pin set with pearls.

The bride travelled in a brown suedine coat trimmed with fox fur and wore a gold metal fabric hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott will spend a short honeymoon in Toronto, after which they will reside at their home in Campbellford.

In Peterborough Churches

ST PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The gladsome spirit of Christmas pervaded both services in St. Paul's Presbyterian church Sunday. The choir assisted, with specially selected and appropriate Christmas music, and the sermons were in harmony with the general thought of the day. The attendance at both services was large, especially in the evening, when it was so great it is doubtful if the church ever accommodated a larger number. By shortly after seven o'clock every seat was occupied and people were sitting on the steps in the gallery, and many extra chairs were also being brought in and placed wherever room could be found for them. As late as twenty minutes after seven the ushers were still carrying in chairs and before that many people had been turned away. The knowledge that Mr. M. B. Chenhall, the organist, was to give a special organ recital before the evening service, helped to attract many, while others who had not heard the new organ during special recitals given last week, attended yesterday in order to hear it for the first time. Mr. Chenhall's handling of this splendid new instrument, including the echo organ and chimes, pleased everybody, the view being expressed by many that they enjoyed his playing even better than that of the noted organists who presided at the organ last Monday and Friday the explanation being that Mr Chenhall did not seek to play as difficult music, and, therefore, gave a larger proportion of people, other than musical experts, what they wanted, and had come to hear.

The Sermon.

The evening sermon was based on the text "And it came to pass in those days that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed" Luke 2:1. At the time this decree was issued, said Rev. Wm. Allan, the whole inhabited world, was subject to the decrees of Caesar as it will ultimately be to those of Christ. The suggestive part of the text lies in words, "And it came to pass." It means that what came to pass took place at the time foretold. How little the world knew what was happening. The fact is all things, then as now, were on the move. We cannot stand still. What then took place was part of the eternal decrees of God, who before the beginning of the world, had determined the things that should come to pass, including the fact that Jesus Christ should be the perfect lamb slain from before the foundation of the world. The little Babe that lay in the manger, was the complete fulfilment of all the types that were such an outstanding feature of the Hebrew religion and which had foretold his advent for centuries.

Ever since the Garden of Eden, Satan has been at enmity with God. Satan was in the Garden of Eden when God's curse, following Adam and Eve's sin, was pronounced, and when God announced that the seed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent, and that the serpent would in turn bruise his heel. Those not conspicuous for Biblical knowledge, or for evangelical zeal, seek to get rid of the first three chapters of Genesis. Yet here is where we have the first intimation of the Virgin birth. God was careful to specify that it was to be the seed of a woman that was destined for the fulfillment of His great purpose. From that time on the hope of every Hebrew mother's heart was that she might be he mother of the promised Messiah. And the purpose of Satan was to destroy the promised seed. Continuing Mr Allan claimed that Satan was behind the act of Cain in slaying his brother Abel, hoping in this way to possibly destroy the promised seed. In the same way Satan was behind the act of Pharoh in decreeing at the time of Moses, that all the Hebrew male children should be slain at the time of birth. Then again at the time of Christ Satan sought again, through Herod, and the issuing of a similar decree to bring about the death of the promised seed.

The decree of Caesar Augustus was issued at the time God had selected for the birth of His Son, and for the fulfillment of His purposes. Mary and Joseph probably thought it very unfortunate that they should have to take a journey across the Promised Land just at that time and in their condition, but by doing so they were acting in harmony with the will of God and all was well They were going to their old home. Much depends upon the character of our homes. In one great sense everyone is going home God has issued another great decree when He said: "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after that the judgement." This is an appointment that must be kept. No one can avoid it. Wealth, science nor power can postpone the issuing of the call. Neither can age or youth. This being the case, we should ask ourselves what is to be the character of our homecoming. Only those who have been born again can fully appreciate the meaning of Christmas. The tragedy is that so many today, as in the days of the Birth of Christ when there was no room for Him in the inn, have no room for Him in their lives. They allow pleasure and business to crowd Him out. An earnest appeal to the unsaved to open the doors of their hearts, and admit Christ as Lord and King, concluded a powerful address.

NOT all children have an inherent appreciation of beauty. They respond to color and brightness, but most of them have to be taught why they feel that way. They may begin to sense the beauty in a mass, but they must be coached in the appreciation of details. Appreciation of music or art is greatly enhanced by education. We may enjoy listening to a musical number, but how much keener is our pleasure when we know what it is, something of the composer and composition. We like to look at a picture, but we enjoy it more when we have pointed out to us the value of color and form. So it is with the child. Help him develop his sense appreciations by pointing out values to him and drawing his attention to detail

Nora had always been what the family vulgarly called "nosey." She always wondered what the people at tables round about her were eating and what shoppers had in their numerous bundles. She even surmised at sight of trunks and suitcases just what their contents might be.

Nora didn't mind a scrap being kidded about her curiosity.

"It's a perfectly harmless amusement," she always said. "And I get heaps of fun out of it."

"You should be a detective instead of an editor," some of her friends told her.

So in order to be nearer her editorial chair Nora took a small apartment in an old house down town.

There were two rooms on the second floor with large dressing room connecting them and Nora had scarcely decided on them when she fell to wondering if there was anything in cupboards that lined the wall above the ample wardrobes. They were so high that she figured she would have to climb on a table top if she were to make use of them. Soon after she had settled in her new quarters she climbed up on her small kitchen table to pull open the old mahogany door.

"Humph!" she commented, "there's not much here. The former tenant took everything along—fine place to put away winter curtains and coats and hats. What ho! I believe I've discovered something." She strained on tiptoe and dislodged a panel of wood that had made the cupboard a few inches more shallow than it's mates. Nora was getting excited. She dislodged the panel and exclaimed with surprise

The little compartment so carefully concealed was filled with papers and a diary. Nora sat down on the edge of the table, her feet swinging animatedly, her eyes swiftly scanning the pages of the diary.

"Well, of all things?" she exploded, "this is some poor struggling writer's farewell to a career and oh!—how broken hearted he is." She re-read portions, 'With the sealing up of this panel I am hiding away all that makes life wonderful—my soul and all the best of me is here—the rest is going into a world of business and a hunt for the filthy lucre that enables one to live and—marry. I am doing it for Amy— I regret she could not give me a longer trial at writing. I know I should have won out. However, there seems to be penalties attached to loving so—good bye—fair dreams." A tear splashed down on the diary and Nora dabbed her nose with her handkerchief. She jumped up swiftly and hauled down a lot of the manuscripts packed in the cupboard.

For a long time Nora read the stories. When she had finished about a dozen she went down to the housekeeper and made inquiries as to the previous tenants in her room. She got much information. Sufficient anyway to make her fling herself into her coat and hat and take the subway up to Seventy-second street.

It was about seven in the evening as she made her way to a most respectable boarding house and asked if Mr. Tom Webber still lived there.

"Is he in at present?" asked Nora and being told to have a seat in the reception room she waited.

She glanced up when a sort of miserable looking young man came questioningly toward her. She told him straight off that she wished to talk with him about some stories and diary that she had found in her studio.

The light that swept suddenly over Webber's face brought a swift lump to Nora's throat. He was transformed from his misery into radiant life and interest. He sat down close beside Nora..

"Mr. Webber," said Nora severely, "You are a very wicked and very weak young man."

Webber had not expected anything like this and he looked his surprise.

"Worse!" continued Nora. "You have deliberately tried to strangle a brain child—to cast it off for the sake of some woman. You should be thoroughly ashamed of yourself—to have knuckled down to a paltry money making position when you have a wonderful gift."

Webber gasped then laughed the first hearty laugh he had felt since leaving his old studio. "There must be lots to tell me," he said swiftly and eagerly, "won't you come out to some quiet place with me for dinner? I'm so fed up with this conventional boarding house with its three square meals a day that I feel I will bust—if I don't get out."

Nora laughed in complete sympathy and wondered how a fine manly man like Tom Webber had ever let himself be stepped on by some female. "Love," she thought, "is a funny thing."

A good idea," Nora said, "so get your hat. I can hardly wait to tell you how good your stories are."

Webber snatched both her hands in his and gave them a squeeze that hurt before dashing up stairs three at a time for his hat.

"You will be a very large, red feather in my editorial cap," she told him later "I am annoyed that you never tried my magazine—with any of your stories."

"I didn't dare aspire so high—I thought you only took good names," he said modestly.

"Only good stories," said Nora and when she saw the look in Webber's eyes, that was all for her, her knew that for once her nosiness had led her into real romance.

G. B. AIRHART HAS MANY ACTIVITIES

Two Businesses, With Village and County Politics, Not Enough.

CHURCH WORKER.

MARMORA, Dec. 21.—The subject of this sketch is essentially a Marmora boy, he having been born in the near vicinity of the village. His record of service in communal and county affairs is such of which all true hearted citizens are indeed proud.

Warden Airhart's father, Mr. Oliver Airhart, still resides a few miles north of Marmora, but his mother passed away some years ago. "Bruce," as the Warden is generally called, is one of that number of men in this important County of Hastings behind whose modesty lies veiled their fullest worth.

His first business associations may be said to have been with the Pearce Company, the local firm of long standing in the lumber trade. For them he worked assiduously for fourteen years, and for the greater part of that time in the capacity of yard superintendent. Then came three years of partnership with the late James Hickey in the flour and feed business carried on previously by the late W. H. Hubbell, also an ex-Reeve of the village. With the retirement of Mr. Hickey, G. B. Airhart took over the sole management of what is now known as the Marmora Flour Mills.

Personal business ability has not been confined to this enterprise alone. For the past six years, Warden Airhart has been carrying on a lumber business in the vicinity of nearby Malone, employing at times as many as fifty men, and personally supervising operations there.

One would imagine with the management of two businesses, one of which occasions many hours from home, and with Village Council and County Council affairs to attend to, that Warden Airhart would have time for little else, yet it is difficult to observe any relaxation on his part, of any of his original activities. He is still an active member of the Liberal-Conservative Association, and was one of the names before the riding last year as a possible candidate for Parliamentary honors.

He remains a devoted loyal member of the United Church, having for the past twelve years served on the board of trustees, at the same time holding the office of treasurer. The Sunday School in connection with that church has enjoyed for seventeen years his valued support, first as secretary and later as teacher.

For several years he has been president of the local branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society. He is Worshipful Master of Marmora Lodge No. 222 A. F. and A. M. for the current year.

Reverting to the matter of his share in municipal affairs, it may be mentioned that in 1920 he succeeded the late R. T. Gray as Reeve of the village, holding the office continuously since. He was elected Warden of Hastings County last year, succeeding Walter Wiggins of Bancroft. He is a passionate lover of the country, wherein he was born, and upon the appointment by Hastings County Council of its publicity committee a few years ago, as chairman of the finance committee with ex-Warden J. V. Walsh and County Clerk W. H. Nugent, was elected to serve as that committee. This committee was instrumental in the production of a book entitled "Over the Hills of Hastings." Some 5,000 copies have been circulated, many parts of the world near and distant receiving them. Following their distribution, thousands of advertising folders have been broadcasted by the committee.

In Mrs. Airhart, the Warden has found what all men with noble aspirations prize—a good help-meet, and it is the sincere, if unspoken, wish of their numerous friends that for many years to come, they, in their particular niches, may serve those interests served in the past, with naught disturbing, and see their children as they come to years, also loyal to the best interests of life.

AN ACTIVE CITIZEN.

G. B. AIRHART
Reeve of Marmora and Warden of Hastings County for the year 1926.

TRIBUTE PAID MRS. CRESSMAN

SPLENDID REPORTS.

At the December meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Women's Christian Association a beautiful tribute was read by Mrs. W. D. Scott to the memory of Mrs. A. W. Cressman. Mrs. Cressman, for many years was a faithful member of the Y.W.C.A. Board of Directors and carried a large share of the responsibility, occupying the position of president for some time, also convenor of the Finance committee. Mrs. T. Cruikshank, former president of the Association, presided for this first part of the meeting and also spoke of the loss to the Y.W.C.A. in the passing of Mrs. Cressman.

Reports from the various departments for the month of November were very encouraging. The Educational department reported $260 received from the English literature course. Basketry class, Christmas novelties sale, junior cooking classes and junior story hour were all well attended. The ukulele, wood carving, home nursing and first aid courses will commence early in the new year.

The Physical department has a splendid enrollment. Plans are being made for a big campaign to be held in January for more members. Reports of the swimming exhibition, life saving examinations, Hallowe'en parties and gymnasium classes were given by Miss Littlefield.

Miss Brownscombe, general secretary, reported for the religious work department, mentioning especially the large attendance at the Sunday afternoon friendly hours and the interest in the World Fellowship week November 8 to 15. The Industrial Department has 7 clubs and an attendance of 150.

The financial report was most encouraging. Receipts from the campaign have now reached at total of $1500. With promises and subscriptions not yet in, the committee hope a total equal to last year's 1,800 will be reached.

Mrs. W. D. Scott was appointed convenor of the Finance committee and Mrs. R. Turner and Mrs. N. D. Buchanan added to the committee.

Mrs. T. Brown closed the meeting with prayer.

CHRISTMAS DAYS ARE BUSY DAYS AT POST OFFICE

Hundred Thousand Letters Pass Through Local Office in One Day.

20,000 PARCELS.

Extra Men Assist Regular Clerks in Clearing Up Mountains of Mail.

How many realize in these days approaching Christmas that without the modern postal system of far flung collection and straight flung distribution, the modern Christmas would be impossible.

Right here, in the city of Peterborough, the local post office staff handled 100,000 letters in one day. Forty thousand of these, or two for every person in the city, were mailed within the city boundaries. The other sixty thousand letters were incoming mail, some of which had travelled from the far corners of the earth. And not satisfied with a deluge of letters, the same day resulted in 20,000 parcels being handled.

These figures constitute a record-breaking enoch in the history of the local office, being almost double the amount of any previous year.

At the present season the post office is filled with a bustling, feverish industry with waves of mail inundating the postal machine until its human and mechanical parts seem lost in the flood of letters and parcels that converge in this narrow channel to be distributed to the four winds bearing little messages and tokens of goodwill and affection.

In order to cope with the abnormal amount of mail, eighteen extra men have been added to the staff.

The office stays open to the public until 9.30 each night, and the staff is divided into three shifts, each of which works eight hours.

In one corner of the office at certain periods of the day and night stands a young mountain of parcels from places outside the Dominion. These have to be examined by the Customs department, and thus is another department that a person would not naturally connect with the Christmas rush brought into action. For the next few days the examiners from the Customs will be in the same category as the post office employee.

With the arrival of each train comes the inevitable rush of mail with its hundreds of sacks that fill the entire floor space of the office until it would seem impossible to the average observer that the mass would ever attain any semblance of order, but the smooth efficient service for which the post office is noted treats it all as a matter of course, and soon before the onslaught of the various clerks, the apparent state of chaos is reduced to one of comparative order. It is the proud boast of the Peterboro office that by noon on Christmas Day not a letter or parcel remains in the office.

DRY LAW AGENT BOOTLEGGER TOO

"DOUBLE CROSSER."

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(United News.) — How an "under-cover" prohibition agent operated a well known New York "speak-easy" for several months, "double-crossed" bootleggers, patrons, police, and others and finally arrested the man to whom he sold the property was told in United States' district court yesterday. Ralph W. Bickle, one of the right hand operatives of A. Bruce Bielaski, head of General Lincoln S. Andrews' spy system, admitted on the witness stand that for many months he had sold liquor in a "gin mill," known as the Bridge Whist Club. Bickle operated his club to obtain evidence, he said, and morning, noon and night he broke the prohibition laws he was supposed to enforce.

Bootleggers had begun to look upon the Bridge Whist Club as a "jinx" 'about the time Bickle got ready to quit, for nearly every time they went to make a delivery there, they were mysteriously intercepted, arrested and their goods confiscated.

Police, among the most frequent patrons of the city's "speak-easy," were sold liquor in this club and then transferred to less desirable posts. A police lieutenant sat drinking in the Bickle "speak-easy" for several weeks, spying upon his men. Prominent New Yorkers were lured to the club by the high quality of the liquor obtained high prohibition stores and sold by Bickle at low prices. Finally, the club was sold to a victim, who promptly was arrested and the place padlocked.

LLOYD GEORGE MAKES PROFIT

RUNS NEWSPAPER.

LONDON, December 21. United News. — David Lloyd George has just proved that he has a business as well as a political brain by making a profit of $5,000,000 for his campaign fund and $500,000 for himself through a judicious investment. Several years ago he became sole custodian of a campaign fund of about $15,000,000. He bought a newspaper with the money and backed his judgment by investing in the paper some of his own money.

The newspaper was the "Daily Chronicle," with a circulation of around 1,000,000 a day. Lloyd George has just sold it to a syndicate at the profit stated and so joins the thin ranks of those politicians about whom people say that they could not make a living at anything but politics.

FAMILY PARTY FOR BIRTHDAY

POPULAR OFFICER.

LONDON, Dec. 21. United News. —Prince George, the youngest son of King George and Queen Mary, celebrated his 24th birthday yesterday. A happy family party was held at Buckingham Palace in honor of the handsome young Prince, who has just returned from his lengthy naval service in Oriental waters, and the birthday festivities were in the nature of a welcome home.

Prince George like his royal father is a keen sailor. He is now a lieutenant and has seen service several years. He is very popular with his fellow officers, who affectionately call him "P.G." His quiet modesty and amiable temperament have won him many friends.

SETTLERS' AID TO BE TAKEN UP

Hon. Robert Forke Will Neither Confirm Nor Deny Report.

SAME LEGISLATION.

OTTAWA, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).— Legislation to aid settlers on Cron lands may again be introduced into Parliament at this session. At the present time, Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, ill neither confirm nor deny the report, although he has denied reports hich have appeared stating that annual expenditures of many millions of dollars ill be asked for use in such a scheme.

Any legislation this year will probably follow along the lines of last year's bill which never got past the committee stage in the House of Commons. The bill was to provide five per cent. ten-year loans of $1,000 to Canadian citizens and $500 to alien settlers.

The loans were to apply to settlers on Crown lands in any part of Canada, and the money was to be let out on improvements and buildings. Loan committees were to be established under the direction of the Minister of Immigration and were not to receive remuneration for their work of examining cases and making recommendations to the Minister.

IDEAL CHEESE HAS GOOD YEAR

NORHAM, December 21. — The Ideal Cheese and Butter Company, Ltd., at its annual meeting held in the hall here on Friday afternoon unanimously chose George E. McCubbin for president, who now enters his fourth year in that capacity. Martin Peterson was appointed auditor, and the following a board of directors:—Noman Gummer, Fred Platt, Ivan Denike, David Evans and Oscar Laver.

It was moved by David Evans and seconded by Fred H. Huycke, and unaimously carried, that this factory for the year 1927 sell its output of cheese to the United Dairymen's Co-operative Company, which is to have a cold storage in Campbellford where the cheese will be assembled, weighed and graded. The cost to the different factories will be five cents a box.

S. L. Joss of Belleville, secretary of the United Dairymen's Co-operative Company was present, and gave an address setting forth the advantages of having a cold storage room near at hand, where cheese would be graded and in a brief period of time the factory producing any but first grade cheese could ascertain the fact and remedy the defect.

The U. D. C. is managed by Mr. Moore of Montreal. It was organized in 1920 and that year handled 43,000 boxes of cheese from 13 factories. The increase in business has been at an annual rate of 25 per cent. Last year 205,000 boxes were handled, 75,000 of which were shipped direct to the old country, to Mills and Company, who are the largest buyers in Great Britain, and whose slogan is quality. The sole business of the United Dairymen's Co-operative Company is that of selling cheese and it is in their interest to have the cheese in the best possible condition before grading was an argument put forth by Mr. Joss. For the first year of the enterprise in Campbellford the cheese will be ice cooled. The factories promising their support are required to sign no agreement whatever. Mr. Joss said it would require the cheese from at least ten factories to make the new venture a success.

Following are some statements from the auditor's report:

Amount of milk received, 2,019,408 pounds. Cheese manufactured, 174,290 pounds. Number of standards of milk, 673,408. Net price per standard, 3759; pounds of milk used in making a pound of cheese, 11.58; average price of cheese a pound, 17.54 cents; bank account of company, $31,764.89; value of cut cheese, $376.69; total business of company $32,141.58.

Receipts from cream, $1,006.95; pounds of whey fat, 35,048; cost of manufacturing 35,048 pounds of whey fat, $350.48; amount realized by patrons from whey fat $656.47; average price a pound of whey fat, 28.47c; average price a pound of milk fat, 38.08c; total cheese receipts $31,134.63; money received by patrons from cheese, $25,485.32; cost of manufacturing cheese, $5,446.56; receipts from going into lanes for milk $40; paid Clem Palmateer for making cheese, $3,198.41, and for making whey cream $350.48; cost of hauling milk, $1126.15, and of hauling cheese $168.93; C. E. Meiklejohn for new vat and account, $298.75; officers' salaries, $235; dividend paid to stock holders, $275.25; balance on hand $338.22.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The diamond is both the talismanic and natal stone for today. It attracts good fortune to all who seek it with honest endeavor and endows them with courage and strength to meet all difficulties. To those born on an anniversary of this date it brings power to attract sincere and constant love, if it is set in gold and worn on the left arm or hand.

Light red should be worn on this day, since it brings charm and the power to attract friends to those who wear it.

The yellow chrysanthemum today brings happiness and great contentment wherever it is worn or used as a decoration.

OLD MASTERS

Mine be a cot beside a hill;
A bee-hive's hum shall soothe my ear;
A willowy brook that turns a mill,
With many a fall shall linger near.

The swallow, oft beneath my thatch
Shall twitter from her clay-built nest;
Oft shall the pilgrim lift the latch,
And share my meal, a welcome guest.

Around my ivied porch shall spring
Each fragrant flower that drinks the dew;
And Lucy, at her wheel, shall sing
In russet-gown and apron blue.

The village church among the trees,
Where first our marriage vows were given,
With merry peals shall swell the breeze
And point with taper spire to Heaven.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1926

Mercury and Venus in benefic aspect rule this day according to astrology. Uranus and the Sun are adverse.

This is read as an uncommonly lucky rule under which to send out Christmas letters or greetings.

This is a lucky day for women and their affairs. Those engaged in domestic epreparations are supposed to be exceptionally well guided.

This is read as a fortunate wedding day since it indicates lasting love and increasing prosperity.

Theatres remain under a most auspicious direction of the stars, which indicates constantly increasing interest in plays.

Dramas are to reveal a romantic trend once more and to present poetic themes, if the stars are rightly read.

Business aims should be subordinated to other interests today, for the planetary government is not favorable to practical pursuits.

Under this sway there may be a tendency toward retrospection, but there should be no harboring of painful memories, if one desires to make the best of life, the seers admonish.

This is not a lucky day for seeking employment and it will be wise to delay all important plans for betterment.

There is a sign read as detrimental to industrial building operations, but any idleness at this time will be followed by feverish activity, it is foretold.

World demands are to set the factory wheels whirring in all parts of the country, astrologers foretell.

Extraordinary international commercial relations are indicated by the stars and unexpected events are to take place, it is prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have rather an uneventful year in which relatives and neighbors will furnish the excitement.

Children born on this day probably will be serious-minded and industrious. They may have the critical analytical turn of mind which will make enemies, if it is not wisely directed.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

The problem of securing a quick supply of heat in bedroom, living-room or dining-room on a cold day is solved by many by means of a portable oil heater. And if you have a good heater and it proves unsatisfactory the chances are that you don't give it the right treatment.

Remember that the oil stove consumes oxygen. Don't shut yourself in a small bathroom with an oil heater. If you want to heat the bathroom for a bath, put the heater in the room some five or ten minutes ahead of time, leaving the door on a crack, so that enough additional oxygen can be sucked into the room. Then put out the flame, or take the heater from the room while you close yourself into the room.

Oil heaters should be attended to every day if they are used every day, and this takes but little time. Experts say that best results are obtained from heaters that are kept fairly well filled, so every day add a little oil, using a funnel so that you will not spill any. A piece of cardboard should be used to rub the wicks so that the charred part may be removed. The burner should be carefully wiped off. Soft paper may be used for this purpose.

Sometimes even with careful treatment oil heaters smell. This may be because the oil is not of very good quality. Buy from a reputable dealer and be sure to get a good quality. Sometimes the smell may be due to the fact that the burner needs a thorough washing. To do this most effectively the burner should be put in cold water in an old pan. Add a tablespoon of washing soda. Bring this to the boiling point and let it simmer for fifteen minutes. Rinse well, wipe with tissue paper, let dry in a warm place before replacing in the heater. The oil container also may need to be cleaned occasionally in case there is dust or sediment. To do this empty out all the oil and then rinse out with some clear oil, shaking well to loosen any sediments.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Not expensive yet in the best style is the ensemble shown here. It consists of a black suede cloth coat with bloused back and beige fur collar and cuffs. Beneath it is worn a beige crepe frock with rhinestone tab and white vest. The felt hat chosen to wear with it is of beige.

A very good authority on matters of dress gives it as her opinion that the woman who possesses what we politely call a "limited dress allowance" can dress better nowadays than it has ever been possible for her to do. Now more than ever before it is necessary to have more than expensive clothes to look well dressed. This is because now so much depends on the careful attention to detail, on the right assemblage of the different parts of the costume and on the silhouette. It is an age when youth is supreme. No woman no matter how "unlimited" her dress allowance can really look smart unless she actually is young or manages to retain the contours and lineament of youth. The rheumatic old dowager who has let herself get stiff and fat may gain considerable diversion buying new clothes and wearing them, but she simply cannot look smart.

Once the poorer woman—the woman on a limited dress allowance—used to sigh for a sealskin coat and diamonds. She wanted to be fashionable. Now she wears a neat string of imitation pearls, dons a cloth coat trimmed with dyed hare, keeps down surplus weight, wears her hat at a smart angle, has her skirts short enough but not too short, contrives to wear shoes and stockings beyond reproach and has the satisfaction of knowing that she is smart.

The ensemble idea is a good one for the woman who wants to look well on little and this may be bought as an ensemble or got together by the woman who wears it. With most women the smart street costume is the most important as well as the most difficult. A cloth coat with fur trimming is a better investment when pennies must be counted than an inexpensive fur coat. The only necessary expense about it is time and thought spent in selecting it. The simpler it is nowadays the better.

A woman simply cannot look well dressed now unless her hat is worn well down over her head with hair almost entirely hidden from view. She must not attempt too great economy in stockings. Darns where the shoe rubs the back of the foot may be respectable, but they show too plainly nowadays to be tolerated. If you must be economical in the matter of stockings buy some of the fine lisle sort that wear better than silk and are preferred by many French women to silk for street wear.

FOOD AND HEALTH

FOOD AND SOCIAL SUCCESS

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.

Probably no two women would make identical interpretations of the phrase, social success. To one it might mean climbing the ladder that leads to the diamond horse shoe at the Metropolitan; to another it may mean simply living life in its appointed conditions with the most satisfying all round results. Similarly, there is a possibility for various interpretations of the word, social when used independently. To the owner of a box in the diamond horse shoe, this word applies to the brilliant trappings of her own leisure world. To the social worker it calls up visions of problems on the solution of which depends the actual lives of men, women and children.

To which ever group we may belong, each one of us desires success. Members of both groups have certain common and fundamental needs and one of these is to be well nourished. The social leader who is well nourished presides with increased charm. The social worker who is well nourished is able to accomplish for her charges far greater boons than would be the case if she herself were not well fed.

These women should pool their efforts to help all who are working for good food accomplish their aims. The social leader, the woman of leisure, has time to go seriously into the matter of legislation planned for the purpose of improving living conditions. The social worker has the privilege and opportunity of helping to make direct application of such legislation. She watches the law that insures pure milk, for example, bring color to the white cheeks of underfed babies. She helps the plant executive who is eager to do his part toward improving the living conditions, go seriously about making the lunch room in his factory a place where his employees may be better fitted.

So food and nutrition have a very direct influence on social success. The very fact that social success means one thing to certain groups and another to others, makes the whole matter even more interesting. The woman of leisure may learn much from the busy social worker. The social worker in turn welcomes the opportunity to get away for a bit into the atmosphere of leisure surrounding her fellow-worker in the cause of good food.

Of course, there are women who belong to neither of these groups, the average busy, happy housewife. This same housewife, however, is becoming increasingly keen about keeping up with the advance of work along lines indicated. To this woman social success means a well ordered home and well-nourished family. She has it in her power to help both the social leader and the social worker. The influence exercised by this group of homekeeping women, old-fashioned as the term may sound, is very broad. They not only lift up their voices in support of the women who work for improving conditions outside their home, but they prove that they know what they are talking about in that they keep members of their own immediate circle well nourished.

The social leader, the social worker and the home maker, working together form a strong team and the result of their work is likely to be better legislation, relating to food laws, better fed children, better citizens and a more prosperous nation.

WOMAN'S LAWYER ATTACKS THEORIES

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—The suicide theory attached to the death of Mrs. Robert H. Ingersoll, who is alleged to have severely wounded Wallace M. Prebasco in her fashionable Park Avenue apartment on Sunday and then turned the pistol on herself, to-day was under the fire of her counsel, Frederick C. Leubuscher.

In a statement issued after Prebasco had been released from the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital on $12,500 bail of a technical charge of homicide and removed to a private sanitarium, Leubuscher denied that Mrs. Ingersoll owed Prebasco money, said Prebasco was the pursuer of the dead woman, and demanded a thorough police investigation of the case.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SECRET CLOSET.

Under the stairs in the hollow stump bungalow where Uncle Wiggily lived was a secret closet. Around Christmas time this closet was more secret than during the remainder of the year, and none of the forty 'leven little rabbit children (forty-twelve, counting Baby Bunting) none of them was allowed to so much as go near this place under the stairs.

At other times during the year Jingle and Jangle, Tingle and Tangle and Buster and Custer might play in the secret closet as much as they pleased. Often they did, having such games in it as Pirate, Robber, Baron and Charcoal, Charcoal Put Me in a Dark Hole.

But about two weeks before Christmas Uncle Wiggily, or Mrs. Uncle Wiggily, his wife, would lock the secret closet and they would say:

"Keep away from it now, my dears!"

You may be sure the rabbit children obeyed, though Baby Bunty, who was really only a visitor in Uncle Wiggily's bungalow—Baby Bunty used to say:

"What is in that closet that Uncle Wiggily doesn't want us to go near it? What is in it?"

"Hush!" Jangle would say.

So Baby Bunty didn't, though she very much wondered.

What's that? Will I tell you what was in the secret closet? Excuse me, but certainly not! I wouldn't dream of such a thing! It is the secret of Uncle Wiggily and his wife, and—eh—

Tell you after Christmas? Oh, perhaps I might, or even on Christmas Eve. We shall see.

Anyhow, there was the closet under the stairs, and the door was locked, and whenever Baby Bunty passed it she walked on her tiptoes, wondering if she could hear any noise. But she never did, until one day. But let me tell it from the beginning.

Though none of the little bunny children were allowed to look into or go near the secret closet, Uncle Wiggily himself, or his wife often opened the door at night, when the children were asleep, and peered within. Then the rabbit gentleman would say:

"I hope they will like them!" And his wife would say:

"Oh, they can't help it! They are just darling, I think!"

Now, tut, tut! There is no use asking me! I am not going to tell you the secret. But about Baby Bunty—Oh, Yes. Well, one evening, when it was almost time to go to bed, Baby Bunty happened to be playing with a rubber ball. It pounced out of her paws and rolled toward the secret closet under the stairs.

Baby Bunty hopped after her toy and, picking it up near the door of the secret closet, the little rabbit girl heard a queer sound. It was a ticking, tocking sort of noise and at once Bunty ran to the other boys and girls and whispered:

"Oh, I know what's in the secret closet!"

"What?" asked Jingle.

"If you know you mustn't tell!" warned Jangle. "It is so near Christmas that we ought to be very good and not snoop."

"I wasn't snooping!" declared Bunty. "I was just getting my ball and I heard in the closet a noise like——"

But before Bunty could say what she heard, there was another sort of noise in the bungalow. It was a snarling, barking, growling sort of noise and Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy cried:

Uncle Wiggily, who was reading his evening paper, rushed from the library with three jumps to drive the Wolf away. The bad chap was standing close to the secret closet and all of a sudden there came from it a loud banging noise; "Boom!" like that.

"Oh, there must be some soldiers in that closet with their guns and they are shooting at me!" howled the bad chap. "I came in to nibble some ears, but another time will do as well. I don't want to be shot!" And away ran the Wolf.

Uncle Wiggily went back to his paper, never opening the closet door to see what made the booming noise. And when the little bunnies asked Baby Bunty if that was the noise she heard, she said:

"It's a secret closet and I'd better not say what kind of a noise I heard in it. But it wasn't that kind. It was more like——" And then, for fear it might slip out of her, Baby Bunty put her paws over her lips and all the little ones hopped up to bed. So the secret of the closet was still safe. And if the letter man will bring home a piece of Swiss cheese full of holes for the goldfish to jump through, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily fixing the fire.

FOUR NOMINEES FOR MAYORALTY

Mayor Foster and Three Others Named—Eleven For Controllers.

MANY FOR COUNCIL.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press). — Four candidates were nominated for the Mayoralty of Toronto, to be decided by civic vote on New Year's Day, at the official nomination proceedings today. They are: Thomas Foster, present Mayor; Samuel J. McBride, Controller; Albert E. Hacker, Controller, and W. D. Robbins, former Controller. Mr. Hacker was also nominated for the Board of Control, so that he has another day to decide for which office he will run.

For the four seats on the Board of Control, eleven candidates were nominated, including three of the present Controllers. The fourth is Mr. McBride.

Aldermanic nominations also took place to-day at meetings in the various city wards, of which there are eight. Three are elected by each ward. For the 24 seats about 48 were nominated.

Hospital for Sick Children

57 College St., Toronto 2, Ont.

Dear Mr. Editor:

A spirit of warm friendliness towards the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto exists all over the province and it increases with the years. It has been enhanced to a considerable extent by the clinics which have been conducted in so many centres in Ontario by doctors from the Hospital who have picked out curable cases which up to the time of the clinic had been seemingly hopeless—eventually sending the little patients home from the Hospital healed and fitted to be valuable assets to their municipalities, instead of remaining useless and pathetic burdens.

Your readers, in common with the people in all other progressive communities, are interested in the Hospital and what it is doing. The keen interest in crippled children manifested by the Rotary, Kiwanis, Gyro, Lions and other service clubs, throughout the province, has been of grand assistance in bringing in unfortunate children, often from remote districts to the various centres where the members of the Hospital staff have attended and have been able to hold huge clinics with the result that there has been a steady stream of children admitted to the Hospital from all over Ontario, for a long time.

This is but one branch of the thorough service rendered by the Hospital. It is the best equipped institution of its kind on the continent for the treatment of all child ailments. No Ontario child requiring its services is refused admittance and all that modern medical and surgical skill combined with loving care can accomplish is bestowed upon the sufferer, without distinctions as to religion or nationality, or because those responsible for the child are in poor circumstances.

Heavy expense is involved in this merciful work, Mr. Editor, as you can realize. Ordinary sources of revenue, including grants, fail to cover the actual cost of maintenance of the little patients, notwithstanding thrifty management. Old friends and new ones are relied upon to help in paying the difference and they include the readers of your valuable paper. The Hospital for Sick Children does not share in the funds of the Toronto Federation for Community Service, because it takes patients from all over the province.

Please ask your readers to remember the Hospital for Sick Children when they are doing their Christmas giving.

Faithfully yours,
H. H. WILLIAMS,
Chairman of the Trustees.

Winter CORNS

Corns are painful at any time; but to many people, corns in winter cause intense agony. Feet incased in rubber footwear cannot breathe; heat and acid perspiration draw the feet; the uncertain footing on winter sidewalks press the hard structure of the corns against the nerves, and aggravates the pain until at times it becomes almost unbearable. Radox Bath Salts give blessed relief, removing quickly and easily the corns and callouses. When you dip your foot into a footbath containing Radox Bath Salts, the dead skin (which forms the corn) combines with the Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn itself. This protein salt dissolves in water like ordinary salt does, and so it is literally true to say that Radox Bath Salts actually dissolves your corn.

Radox Bath Salts does not attack the living skin—it softens and refreshes this—it cannot dissolve it. Only the dead skin—the corn—is dissolved. On your way home, buy a package of Radox Bath Salts at the druggist's.

A Substitute Santa

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

In Six Parts—Part II

IN THE DARK JOYLESS LANDS AND IN SCANDINAVIA

THROUGH the land of the Lapps and the Eskimo folk
The reindeer sleigh passed with a single long hop.
For although they hold worship, they never give gifts,
And never meet Santa, so how could she stop?
She saw them so solemnly walking to church,
Or driving in dog sleighs to visit their folk,
All wrapped up in furs like the fat polar bears,
But none seemed to laugh or to dance or to joke.
But in Scandinavia feasts were all laid
There were Christmas Trees brilliant with candles an chains.
On house tops and gate posts were feasts for the birds
Where children had tied luscious bundles of grains.
Old Bok had a time, for the reindeer would snatch
At the bundles they passed on the tops of the roofs,
And they made such a clatter to get at the grain
He was fearful lest folks would be warned by their hoofs.
Mrs. Santa put on a great coat of dark fur,
Then while people were feasting she hid all the toys
In the corners of rooms she found Christmas trees in.
When the children were through and the toys were all found
She made them a visit and gave them advice
On manners and bed time and lessons and teeth,
And how to treat grown-ups politely and nice.
When she'd finished her visits small choir boys came
With lanterns like stars and soft mantles of white,
To sing Christmas carols of days long ago
And tell the sweet tale of the first Christmas night.
Mrs. Santa told Bok as the reindeer flew south,
"It's really quite snug in this old-fashioned sleigh."
Then she brought out a themos all fragrant and hot,
"But I do like my coffee this nice modern way!"

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

ONE AND ALL

I like to think that Christmas comes
Not just to us, and just our house;
I hope it brings a few nice crumbs
To ev'ry bird and ev'ry mouse.
I hope the deer have Christmas Day
Besides the ones on Santa's sleigh;
And even bears won't be so bad
If friends will try to make them glad.

I'd hate to think that Christmas came
To us, and not to folks about;
Why, Christmas wouldn't be the same
If someone had to go without.
And so I hope that Santa Claus
Won't skip a single one; because:
Although, of course, I can't be blamed,
I know I'd feel—well, so ashamed.

I tell you what we did last year:
My father found a family;
And then we fixed a basket here:
And filled it full as full could be;
And then we left it in their hall;
And here's the funniest thing of all:
We got the most fun Christmas Day
From just the things we gave away!

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

The modern street car, which may be far short of the standards of a luxurious limousine, is superior to the stage coach and ox cart of the past. By means of the street car the great mass of urban population is carried quickly to and from their homes. Without the street car, urban life would be practically impossible.

Gas shares with electricity the honor of making our homes and industries clean and comfortable places in which to live and work.

GIRL'S HUNGER BRINGS TO LIGHT STOLEN DIAMOND

Chambermaid Yields To Temptation and Bites Luscious Apple.

JEWEL INSIDE.

Robbery Which Baffled Paris Police For Weeks Is Solved.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—A woman biting into an apple that did not belong to her brought about the recovery of the famous Rose diamond, stolen some two months ago from the Gem Tower of the Chantilly Chateau of the Duc d'Aumale.

This woman—a hotel chambermaid—yielded to the tempting piece of fruit on Sunday morning, and last night all France was reading of how this led to the arrest of the men responsible for one of the greatest jewel robberies of recent times, and to the recovery of a good part of their loot.

Police Are Reticent

At first the police merely announced that the diamond, known as the "Grande Conde," had been recovered, leaving the public to deduce that their detective force had done a great piece of professional work. But last night the truth came out, revealing that the police simply enjoyed a piece of luck worthy of the pen of the world's most imaginative writer of detective yarns.

The story, as it became known last night, was that Leon Kauffer, one of those arrested for the robbery, left his hotel room in Paris Saturday in great disorder, saying he would be gone for twenty-four hours. Sunday morning the chambermaid, whose name has not yet been given by the police, decided to clean the room. She noticed in a valise which Kauffer had left opened as luscious-looking an apple as she had ever gazed upon. She yielded, but at the first bite her teeth grated against something so hard that she screamed. Investigating, she found imbedded in the apple a pinkish stone, and called a policeman. He took it to headquarters, where it was immediately recognized as the celebrated Rose diamond.

Arrests Quickly Made

Returning to the hotel, detectives found Kauffer, a 29-year-old Alsatian. He was rummaging in his room, and the detectives inquired: "What are you looking for?"

"For a clean shirt," was the reply.

"You are sure it is not an apple?" the detectives suggested.

The young man turned pale; he shuddered, and then said: "Since you know everything, it is useless to deny it. Yes, I am looking for an apple in which I hid the Rose diamond, which Souter and I stole from Chantilly."

Emile Souter and two "fences" were quickly sought and arrested.

(By F D. C.)

Although the fast Oshawa Intermediates led by the tricky veterans, Sammy Lowe and 'Kip" Rowden, gave Eddie Wright's Peterboro Seniors a royal argument in the exhibition fixture at Brock Street rink last night, especially in the first two periods, class asserted itself on end and the senior O.H.A. champs finally won out, 3 goals to 2.

The intermediate representatives led by one goal to nil at the end of the first period, and were on even terms with the Petes at the close of the second, two markers each, but the blue and white came through with their fastest hockey of the night in the first ten minutes of the final dash and while they only got one goal out of the rally—enough to win—they were outlucked out of two or three more when scores seemed inevitable.

Give Oshawa full credit. The mixture of veterans and youngsters wearing the bright-colored shirts of the Motor Town Club showed speed and individual cleverness, and with a little more attention to team work should just about bring home the intermediate honors. There is no lack of fast skating and good puck carrying but the tendency to have three or four players all trying to check the man with the rubber would be fatal against a team playing combination as the Petes showed in the last period when good passing carried them in repeatedly for shots.

For an early season exhibition fixture there was a lot of nice hockey exhibited for the benefit of a none too robust crowd. There were moments crowded with lightning fast work, and the speed shown by the blue and white crew in the rally that spelled victory for them early in the last period was of the kind that brings a crowd to its feet and keeps it there

Both "Snap" Parker and Bert McLeod were absentees from the Petes' roster and Ray Rose and Grover Halpin made up the defence. Otherwise Manager Wright trotted out his full line up, giving the two youngsters, Eddie Williams and "Scotty" Maudsley, a good chance to show their wares. Williams especially took advantage of the opportunity, displaying aggressiveness, good stickhandling and a fine turn of speed. Maudsley, a little nervous in his first senior appearance, showed promise.

The three forwards of last year's team, Babe Bogardis, Biffer Ranger and Frankie Collins all turned in fine cards. Bogardis and Ranger were good all the way with Collins flashing his best hockey during the last period. Bogardis, a thoroughly unselfish player, whose methods might be more generally followed by his team mates, did some great passing and was strong no matter where he was used. Ranger's stickhandling made him always prominent, and Collins' speed was much in evidence in the onslaught that won the game for the Petes. Kane played good hockey when called on, although he contributed one charge that might have been left out.

Joe Dwyer, despite an ulcerated tooth that took most of the joy out of life for the bulky goalie, stopped a flock of shots and wore out his vocal organs shouting instructions to his team mates. Rose and Halpin worked hard on the defence and were dangerous on their jaunts down the ice.

Oshawa displayed a lot of strength. Sammy Lowe is the same old wily stickhandler and his adroit handling of the puck gave the Petes a lot of trouble while he checked with good judgment. Johnston, his defence mate, had plenty of speed but his tactics got him into a lot of trouble. Up in front Lott, Houck and Rowden played smart hockey at all stages. Lott, the former North Bay player, is a fast skater and good puck carrier, while Rowden has slipped back little, if any. Between the posts the experienced Smith handled himself nicely, making a lot of clever saves.

Oshawa had a shade the edge in the first period and were value for the one goal lead they had at the end of the session. The Petes did not seem to be able to get started and the only real dangerous threats from a Peterboro standpoint were made by Ranger and Bogardis, both of whom tested Smith several times with hard driven shots. Lowe and the Oshawa forwards kept steaming in and Dwyer had plenty to do Midway through the period an epidemic of hard checking developed and Referee Ernie Legon chase a bunch of offenders and the trouble subsided. The period was almost over when the visitors broke into the scoring column. A nice rush by Lott paved the way. Dwyer blocked the centre man's hard shot but Rowden batted the rebound into the net.

The Petes showed more of their real form in the second period and had much more of the play. Smith fooled them several times but they were not to be denied and the break came when, after the Oshawa goaler had sailed out and upset Collins when the Petes' centre was inside, the puck drifted out to Kanger and before Smith could get back between the posts Ranger sighted a beauty through a tangle of players into the net.

That evened it up and a flashy piece of combination by Williams, Collins and Bogardis, the latter taking the final pass and going in close to give Smith no chance to save, put the Petes in front.

Just when it looked as if they were going to stay there a three man rush started by Lowe culminated in a goal when Lott passed out of the corner to Lowe, who beat Dwyer for the tieing goal.

It was all Peterboro early in the last period which was just nicely under way when the Petes took the lead. Bogardis worked his way up right wing and slipped a beautiful pass out in front to Collins, who took plenty of time and slid the rubber under Smith's arm as the Oshawa goalie flopped to save.

The Oshawa defence was beaten clean a half a dozen times in the next few minutes, but the Petes couldn't increase their margin. Another Bogardis-Collins play gave the Petes' centre the puck close in but Smith dived into the shot, making a fine save. Collins came back alone and missed the net by an inch, with Smith beaten, and a few second later, on a neat pass from Halpin, was fooled by Smith once more. On top of these plays Bogardis and Rose also lost golden opportunities by shooting a trifle off the mark when the goalie was at their mercy. Oshawa's raids were not as frequent nor as dangerous as earlier in the game and the Petes held their lead. The outstanding incident of the closing moments was a heavy charge into Johnston by Kane, which even the tactics used by the Oshawa defence man did not justify.

TO SETTLE CASE OUTSIDE COURT

Suit Brought Against Jack Dempsey By Former Manager.

FORM AGREEMENT.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 21.—Settlement out of court is in prospect in the suits brought against Jack Dempsey by his former manager, Jack Kearns, the latter said, as he passed through here en route to California to spend the holidays

Counsel for the former partners in the heavyweight championship have begun negotiations toward an agreement on the terms of Kearns' demands for a share of Dempsey's winning until expiration of the managership contract, last August. It has been Kearns' contention that, since the Dempsey-Tunney battle, was signed during his regime, he should share in Dempsey's end of the purse although the match took place after their partnership had expired.

The last court move in the proceedings was a further postponement early this month and since then, Kearns said, the lawyers have been dickering on a settlement.

COLLINS MAY GO TO YANKS

Yanks Open Negotiations For Seasoned Catcher and Pitcher.

TRADE WARD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Player negotiations, designed principally to obtain a seasoned catcher and fielder, have been pending with rival American League clubs, Ed. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, disclosed yesterday.

Only one deal appears likely to be consummated. This carries a hint that Eddie Collins, deposed manager of the Chicago White Sox, will wear a Yankee uniform in 1927.

According to Barrow, it involves sending Aaron Ward, utility infielder, to Chicago for Grabowski, a catcher "and an infielder." The Yankee official would not say whether Collins was referred to in this proposition, but baseball inclined to a belief that the former "king of second basemen" is headed here anyway.

BURNLEY TAKES LEADERSHIP OF ENGLISH LEAGUE

MOTHERWELL LEADS.

Newcastle Forced To Split Game With Leicester City.

Again the leadership of the English League first division has changed hands, and this time Burnley are the temporary custodians. The Turf Moorites moved up into the lead by overwhelming Everton, but at the same time they received a boost as the result of Sunderland draw at Bolton and the unexpected collapse of Huddersfield Town at Villa Park. The doings at the week-end only served to tighten up the race for the championship. Burnley occupy pride of place only because they have a game in hand, their points equalling the Sunderland total. Huddersfield and Newcastle are locked together on the second rung, and Bolton come next with Tottenham Hotspurs at their heels. That is the position of affairs with the season half gone.

Huddersfields Set Back.

Burnley were irresistible against Everton, and their forwards had the opposition smothered. Beel was responsible for two of their five goals, with Devine, Page and Freeman rounding off the score. Everton's come-back—one solitary counter — came from Kerr's toe.

The league champions, Huddersfield Town, came a bad cropper at Villa Park, where they were blanked by three goals. This was Huddersfield's second defeat of the season, the first being chalked up when Birmingham beat them at Huddersfield on Septemi er 4, since which ti the champions had divided the points in their games away from home and won on their own ground. Dorrell, Walker and Stephenson registered for the Villa.

Two Penalties Missed.

Thirty-five thousand enthusiasts on the Tyneside saw Newcastle United forced to split the game with Leicester City, the goal of Chandler bringing about the equalizer. Newcastle had many chances to score, and in the course of the game two penalties were missed by the Northumbrians, but the goal countered by Seymour was all that could be got for the homesters.

For the second time this season Arsenal met defeat on their own grounds, Spurs spiking the guns.

Forty thousand fans witnessed a thrilling battle which was not decided until the last sound of the whistle. The brilliant play of Osborne, who accounted for a couple of the 'Spurs' four goals, was the feature of the game, but he was ably assisted by Seed and Handley, both of whom scored. The Arsenal's answers came from Brain and Butler.

"Fishermen's" Lu .

The strangest game of the lot was at Wolverhampton,where after being three goals down at half time Grimsby Town came from behind to take the points by 4 goals to 3.

The Second Division saw Hull City open up a gap between themselves and Swansea Town in the race for divisional honors, when Hull blanked Fulham by two goals while the Welsh men were being soundly defeated at Middlesborough. This latter game brought Middlesborough well into contention with the leaders.

An unfortunate accident to Milne, Swanseas back, was an undoubted help to Middlesborough, who were leading by only two goals at half time. Camsell accounted for four of the winning team's seven tallies.

Scots Took Amateur Crown.

England's amateurs gave Scotland's simon pures a great argument in the first period of Saturday's international clash at Leicester, but had to bow the knee to a superior force in the second moiety and were well beaten in the end with the tally 4-1 against them. Towards the close of the first half, Brant gave England the lead, but immediately afterwards Jessiman equalized. After the "breather" Noble and Bain twice added to Scotland's score. The English defence broke down under the continuous and severe Scottish pressure.

Motherwell Leads.

Rangers' division of the spoi . at Kilmarnock enabled Motherwell to resume leadership of the Scottish League, the Fir-Parkers winning by the loan goal at Aberdeen. Celtic's victory over Partick Thistle gave them precedence over their Ibrox rivals, and they now hold second place. The Dundee and Queen's Park game was was not played, possibly because several of the Hampden Park players were away at Leicester on international duty. St. Mirren made an unexpected flop at Tannadyce Park, where Dundee United captured both points.

HORNSBY GOES WITH GIANTS

Is Traded For Frankie Frisch and Jimmie Ring, Pitcher.

NO MONEY.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press). — Rogers Hornsby, manager of the world's champion Cardinals, has been traded to the New York Giants for Frankie Frisch and Jimmy Ring, pitcher, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat said last night.

The paper said that the announcement had been made at 6.30 p.m. by President Sam Breadon after a long distance telephone conversation with Charles Stoneham, president of the New York club.

Breadon announced that the trade was made because of his failure to reach an agreement with Hornsby over a contract at another meeting yesterday in which Hornsby asked for a three-year contract and Breadon stood pat on a one-year document.

No money was involved in the trade, Breadon said.

The others have three points or less.

Nels Stewart, Montreal, is the "bad man" of the league with a total of forty-eight minutes spent on the penalty bench. Ching Johnson, Rangers, and Red Dutton, Montreal, are outstanding with 40 minutes each, while Hooley Smith, Ottawa, had 38 minutes: Reg. Noble, Montreal, 36; Bert Corbeau, 35; Babe Siebert, Montreal, and Sprague Cleghorn, Boston, 33 each; George Boucher, Ottawa, and Fred Oliver, Boston, 28 each, and Aurel Joliat, Canadiens, 25. MANAGERS TALK LOUD AND LONG TRADE NOTHING

Low Mark For Inactivity Set at Meeting in Chicago.

VETERANS ON BLOCK.

Many Ball Players Counted Out of 1927 Plans.

(By Bill Slocum)

New York's representatives at the joint meeting in Chicago arrived home yesterday, all with hands hanging. Nothing in the way of a deal that might improve Giants, Yankees or Robins was made during the many hours of baseball conversation which started last Sunday.

It was probably the first time that the two leagues ever went through their December meetings without some sort of a trade by two major league clubs. The only transactions announced during the week were those with clubs of lower classification. No big league club bought a player from another and not one trade was reported.

This negative result is particularly surprising because of the numerous opportunities for trading. It is unusual to have so many players on the auction block with their managers making no secret of the fact.

What'll You Give?

Among the prominent players who were known to be counted out of 1927 plans by the managers now controlling their services are Zach Wheat and Burleigh Grimes, of the Robins; Kenneth Williams, of the Browns; Aaron Ward and Sam Jones, of the Yankees; Vic Aldridge and Emil Yde, of the Pirates; George Harper, of the Phillies, and Dick Burrus of the Braves. Another prominent player who was listed as trading material is Bill Terry, of the Giants, and it is not likely that Stanley Harris is figuring heavily on Roger Peckinpaugh for 1927.

Perhaps the managers asked too much for veteran material. Perhaps only young blood was wanted by the managers to whom trading propositions were made. At any rate the number of vets who were dusted off for display and then put back in crates because nobody wanted them comes close to a record.

Manager Joe McCarthy is so well satisfied with the results of his first year with the Cubs that he is standing pat on coaches. Both Mike Doolan and Jimmy Burke are to be retained by the club.

National Leaguers were quoted while in New York as not keen for any salary raise for Landis, but the joint meeting ended with the commissioner on the receiving end of a $15,000 yearly raise. The real story behind the salary boost should be interesting.

HORNSBY FIRM ON FIRST STAND

Refuses One Year Contract With Salary of $50,000.

LIKES CARDINALS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Refusing a one-year contract at a salary of $50,000, Rogers Hornsby, manager of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, failed to come to terms yesterday at a conference with Sam Breadon, club president. Hornsby requested a contract for three years or more.

Breadon left the Cardinal office immediately after the conference and could not be reached for a statement. Secretary Clarence Lloyd said, however, that before departing Breadon expressed himself as less hopeful than ever of coming to an agreement with Hornsby.

"I always have wanted to play in St. Louis," Hornsby said after the conference. "My friends and my family are here, and my home is here. I cannot forget the great reception and support given to me and the Cardinals when we won the pennant and the series, and I still feel I would prefer to play in St. Louis.

"However, I do not think that a one-year contract is fair to offer a man what I have done and that is why I declined to accept it. Mr. Breadon said he was sorry we could not reach an agreement, and I am sorry also."

Hornsby pointed out that he had acted as manager nearly two years and had received only his player's salary of $30,000. He was appointed manager after his three-year player contract, which still has one year to run, was drawn up.

ST. PATS LOSE TO AMERICANS

Shut-out Game Marked By Twelve Penalties, Three of Them Majors.

SCORE 2-0.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21—The New York Americans went into a tie for second place in the international section of the National Hockey League with Canadiens by defeating St. Patrick's of Toronto 2 to 0 here last night. It was the first home win of the season for the Americans, and was marked by 12 penalties including three majors, one each to Carson, Conacher and Bailey. The latter two also were fined $15 each for fighting in the second period.

Mediocre hockey was in order, the only signs of life being displayed in the second session, when 10 of the 12 penalties were meted out. The players were pugnacious, and heavy checking, high sticks and tripping featured the 20 minutes. During this session, with the summary still at zero, the Americans at one time had a full team against Roach, Bailey and McCaffrey for St. Pats, showing over-anxiousness.

As soon as the teams were at full strength again, however, the locals broke through, and Himes beat Roach on a pass from Burch. The Yankees' second goal came early in the third period, Roach being completely fooled on a long shot by Burch from centre ice.

Americans — Goal, Forbes; defence, Conacher and Reise; centre, Burch; wings, Red Green and McKinnon; subs, Roach, Bouchard, Himes, Boucher, Simpson, Scott.

Officials—Dave Ritchie, Montreal; Eddie Enright Boston.

The summary;

NORTH TORONTO OPENS WITH WIN

BUMPING MATCH.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—North Toronto opened the senior O. H. A. season last night at the Arena Gardens with a victory, the graduates from the intermediate ranks slipping Toronto Canoe Club a 2-to-0 defeat. The result was a surprise, as the Canoeists had counted on a successful start in the schedule, but they lacked the power to get goals, being bumped out of the scoring zone by the North End defence, while they had little luck in their long shots. The game was not a brilliant exhibition of hockey, but the crowd was well entertained, particularly when both sides resorted to body-checking, there being plenty of spills and funny incidents.

Both teams depended on individual efforts, the puck seldom being passed, and the failure to work combination cost golden chances for goals. Unchecked men often posed in front of an open goal, but the puck-carriers apparently forgot that they had assistants, and tossed aside splendid opportunities to score. Bumping duels were on all over the ice, the players not being extra particular where or how they body-checked. Big Joe Wright, the Canoeists' defence man, and Jack Cain, on the rear guard at the opposite end, started early in a heavy checking battle, and the prominent Paddler did some weird dives, while Cain was also bounced around. Nothing but the best of feeling prevailed between the players, all taking their bumps with a smile, which added greatly to the evening's entertainment.

THE "WHY" OF THE SHORTEST DAY

December 21, the shortest day in the year for us, brings the longest day in the year for South Americans. While it is cold here, it is hot there. While the sun is high in the sky there, it is low here, even in mid-day. The reason is the inclination of our earth's axis.

While we are rotating around an imaginary axis running from pole to pole, we are revolving around the sun, along a track that takes the form of an ellipse. It takes us 24 hours, a whole day, to rotate once. It takes the earth a whole year to revolve completely around the sun.

Orbit and Axis.

The imaginary belt that girdles the earth midway between the poles is called the equator. The imaginary plane made by the ellipse of the earth around the sun, called the earth's orbit, is termed the ecliptic.

If the earth's axis were straight up and down, or at 90 degrees in relation to the ecliptic or its plane of revolution, the equator would coincide at all times with this plane the sun would always take the same course, a little to the south of us, across the sky, the days would be as long as the nights all over the world, and the length of day and night would remain the same throughout the year

Instead of this, however, the earth's axis is inclined at an angle of about 23 degrees from the ecliptic. No matter what our position is during the year, the axis of the earth always is at the same angle from the sun.

The result is that at this time of the year the earth, from the north pole down to the equator, is tipped that much away for the sun, getting so much less warmth from the sun's rays due to its angular position, and putting itself more in its own shadow than in the free light of the sun.

Fields of Shadow.

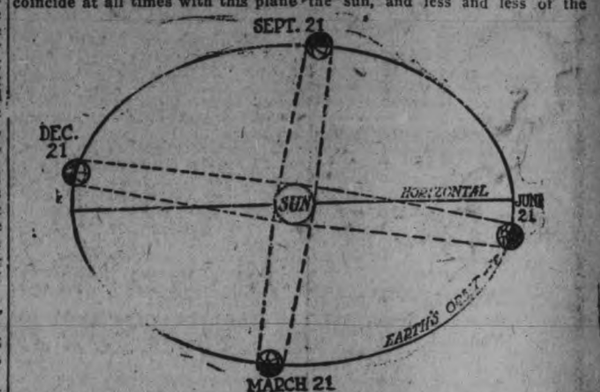
We reach the greatest and longest field of shadow away from the sun, December 21 each year. What little remains of the day's 24 hours is daylight.

But there's consolation in the thought that our lot is not so bad as that of the Eskimos, who are in the earth's shadow for half the year.

The farther north we go the longer this time of shadow, the longer the night and the shorter the day.

After today the earth gradually will come around, exposing more and more of its northern part of the sun, and less and less of the southern part, until on March 21 the entire northern and the entire southern hemisphere will be equally exposed, and the day will be as long as the night.

Then the tables will begin to turn, the southern hemisphere going into deeper shadow and the entire southern hemisphere going into deeper shadow and the northern hemisphere coming out of it. By June 21 the longest day will be ours and the shortest day theirs.



Positions of the earth, on its orbit around the sun, are shown above. The days are longest for the northern hemisphere about June 21, shortest Dec. 21, and equal to nights March 21 and Sept. 21. Due to the inclination of the earth's axis, the northern hemisphere is in shadow most of the winter.

PROGRAMME ANNOUNCEMENT TO-MORROW

PRACTICE TO-NIGHT.

Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. Team Preparing For Opener.

Manager Walter Perks asks that the following candidates for the Intermediate O.H.A. team turn out for practice at Brock Street Rink to-night:

The first game with Port Hope is only a week away.

CURLERS START AHEAD OF TIME

Games Last Night Week Earlier in Season Than Usual.

SCHEDULE DRAWN.

Curling at the Charlotte Street Rink got under way last night, at least one week earlier than for some years. Angus MacIntosh has a splendid sheet of ice prepared, and no doubt most of the members will take advantage of it to get a work out in preparation for the season's schedule which opens on Monday night next, December 27th. The following games will be played on the opening night:

Hicks vs. Anderson.
Best vs. Seymour.
Davidson vs. McDermid.
Bacon vs. Weber.
Connal vs. Oke.
Foote vs. Lang.

No penalties will be imposed for games drawn the first week of the schedule, in case it is found necessary to postpone any of them, but in view of the fact that the schedule is somewhat longer this year than formerly, it is hoped that the skips will co-operate with the committee and do everything possible to play the games as scheduled. Several of the rinks are one player short of their complement, and accommodation can be found for a few more players.

The president, Ira D. Moore, or the secretary, J. W. Mayneord, will be glad to know of any who would care to join up.

O.H.A. REFEREES DISCUSS RULES

Many Knotty Points Made Clear at Annual Meeting.

FIFTY PRESENT.

TORONTO, Dec. 21. — About fifty O.H.A. referees gathered at the Prince George Hotel yesterday afternoon and indulged in a two-hour discussion of the rules governing the games in the amateur association. President G. B. McKay of Kitchener was in the chair, and Secretary W. A. Hewitt read the rules and led the discussion or some of the more complicated points.

The meeting disclosed that there was quite a difference of opinion among some of the officials as to the proper interpretation of several sections of the code, but all these points were dealt with, and before the meeting adjourned a uniform interpretation was reached.

Among the points that come up for discussion was the question of what happens if, in the case of a tie game, both teams agree not to play the full overtime period as laid down in the rules. The rules state that if one team refuses to play the extra period necessary the game will be declared a loss for that team. It is now agreed that in the event of both teams refusing to play extra time, each team will have a defeat scored against it.

Stop Watches Preferable.

An understanding was also reached governing the time of periods at games where the timekeepers are not provided with stop watches. Some of the referees in the past have ruled to play twenty-three minutes' straight time, the only time off being for delays due to injuries or other unforeseen causes. It was the opinion of the meeting that all rinks be notified to provide stop watches for the timekeepers, but, in the event that this is not done, referees should arrange with timekeepers to play a straight twenty-five or twenty-seven minutes.

Another point not exactly covered by the rules is in regard to the length of time a game can be delayed while substituting a goalkeeper. In the past games have been held up while the sub goaler donned his skates and the pads of the goalkeeper who started the game. It was decided to permit a delay of ten minutes only under such conditions. The question of allowing a goalkeeper to come back on the ice again after retiring from injuries or any other cause was also discussed. Some of the referees have ruled in the past that no further change can be made until the expiration of the period, but it was generally agreed that a goalkeeper be allowed back again any time play is stopped before the expiration of the period in which he has been forced to retire.

Offside Rule Explained.

The offside rule also provoked much discussion. The particular point raised was whether it is offside when the player carrying the puck is blocked by the defence, but passes the rubber ahead of him and one of his teammates who is behind him when he is blocked skates ahead and takes the puck. This was clearly shown to be an onside, although many clubs have disputed this ruling when referees have called it such. If the player recovering the puck is ahead of the player blocked, then it is an obvious offside, but not otherwise.

NORTH TORONTO HERE ON THURSDAY

O. H. A. Senior Season Will Get Under Way at Brock St. Rink.

Hockey fans as well as players are pulling for colder weather for Thursday night to ensure fast ice at Brock Street Rink for the opening Senior O.H.A. battle with the North Toronto team. The latter won their first Senior game last night, when they defeated the Toronto Canoe Club team, 2 goals to 0, and they will bring a strong, well trained team on Thursday night, hopeful of adding a second win to their string at the expense of the Petes. North Toronto have an experienced defence in Jack Cain and Tracey Shaw and a squad of fast forwards who will give the Ranger-Collins-Bogardis line plenty to think about.

The first O.H.A. clash of the season should attract a big crowd of fans. Last night's game with Oshawa did much to put the Petes in shape for Thursday's test and the Blue and White should have condition enough to stay with the visitors despite the latters' longer period of training.

RUGBY ASSOCIATION HAS SMALL BALANCE

Donations Enable Officers To Close Books With Surplus.

Through the generous donations of many citizens in this city, the Rugby Association has been able to complete the year with a very small balance on the right side, which is something new in the history of the Association. The gate receipts were very small, as there were only two games, but the association wish to give their heartiest thanks to those who made it possible for the team to travel to Penetang and Oshawa, and to the management of the Y.M.C.A. and Capitol Theatre for the way in which they used the boys, both while they were training, and for the show after the banquet.

The receipts of the past year were:

Penetang game	51.15
Donations	89.00
P. C. I. game	12.36
	$152.51

The expenditures were:

MINISTER HOPES TO MAKE FOREST OF BARREN LAND

Hon. William Finlayson Discusses Possibilities Before Lumbermen.

DEPARTMENT POLICIES.

Would Take Land Unsuitable for Agriculture For Lumbering District.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—Transformation of an area unsuitable to agriculture lying between a line from the Severn River to the Ottawa, cutting through the Counties of Haliburton, Hastings, and Renfrew, and Algonquin Park into a lumbering and tourist district, was considered a possibility by Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests for Ontario, who spoke following a banquet arranged by the Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association, with retailers, members of the Hoo-Hoo Club and undergraduates of the Faculty of Forestry also present, in the Prince George Hotel last evening.

Preserve Game and Forests

If the proposal comes to a head appropriations may be made to buy out the agricultural holdings. By conserving the game and forests, Mr. Finlayson believed, the tourist trade would prove a stronge revenue producer, in addition to the potential forest wealth.

Hon. Mr. Finlayson stated that the department is considering making large expropriations for reforestation in Southern Ontario and for giving assistance in Northern Ontario. He urged that lumbermen support the Government in its effort to prevent depletion of woodlands. He also urged use of Canadian woods in building, and said he was considering bringing a recommendation before the Government to have Canadian woods used exclusively, when required, in the erection of Government buildings.

Some type of Commission, including representatives of the lumbering industry and of the department, was suggested by Mr. Finlayson to work out a scheme for reviving the lumber industry of the province.

Duke C. Johnston acted as Chairman, and other speakers were E. J. Zavitz, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forest; Dr. Charles D. Howe, Dean of the Faculty of Forestry; A. C. Manbert and Prof. T. W. oight.

SEVERAL NAMES

man Mel. Turner has resigned to run for the Public Utilities Commission. This apointment will be made by the incoming council.

There does not seem to be a great deal of criticism of last year's councillors, they having apparently co-operated with less friction than former councils, but the public likes a contest and some of the possible candidates in addition to the retiring members of the council are ex-Aldermen R. N. Jones, Robert Morrison, Malcolm McIntyre and Walter Stocker. In addition John E. Corkery, Ira D. Moore, H. J. McCannon, J. T. Braund, R. J. Kidd, George Goheen, C. E. Smith, J. W. Kelly, W. E. Taylor, Thomas Wedlock, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Andrew Brown, D. Drummond and S. A. Lowe are spoken of as men who might be prevailed upon to offer themselves for election.

With these names there ought to be no dearth of candidates in the municipal field. One feature is that at present there is no representative from Ashburnham and the names of M. J. Roche and T. H. Adams are mentioned as possible candidates from that part of the city.

At present there are four candidates in the field for the vacancy on the Utilities Commission through the resignation of E. F. Mason, who was the member to retire this year. They are Alderman Mel. Turner, F. H. Hills, E. R. Shirley and ex-Mayor George Duncan.

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

ALICE IS FAVORITE OF PICTURE FANS.

Alice Joyce, the star who plays the mother role in "Headlines," a newspaper romance now at the Regent Theatre, has had a long and eventful career in motion pictures.

She has appeared in a dozen or more outstanding features for several companies. Her start was made with the Vitagraph Company, for which she starred in half a dozen productions.

In her latest appearance she makes a charmingly youthful mother and the critics say she is more beautiful than ever. She has a daughter who is empty-headed and almost brings disgrace to the family name. Between her daughter's troubles and the advancing years of the mother, Alice finds it a difficult thing to grind out heart-interest feature stories for the newspaper on which she works.

Alice was born in Kansas City and educated in Virginia. She has brown hair, hazel eyes and is five feet seven inches tall.

SEE THAT THE LIVER IS ACTIVE

You've heard it today—the story of the bright young woman, whose energy is sapped by bilious headaches and constipation. Complexion blemishes or sallow skin perhaps give the first warning. Then the attacks of headache become more frequent, and a chronic state of nervous depression ensues.

Women in business and in the home, in need of a gentle tonic and laxative that assists Nature in cleansing the system of poisons, and keeping stomach, liver and intestinal tract in a state of healthy activity find prompt relief and permanent satisfaction in the use of

JAPANESE DENY ANY BREACH OF WASHINGTON AGREEMENT BY CONSTRUCTING CRUISERS

Vessels Part of Programme Drawn Before Conference of 1922.

WORK HELD UP.

Finances Will Not Permit Excessive Building, Authorities Say.

TOKIO, Dec. 22 (Associated Press).—Japanese naval authorities, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, denied yesterday that Japan was building light cruisers of 10,000 tons or under excessively, thereby violating the spirit of the Washington agreement of 1922 for limitation of armament.

This assertion was made on Monday by Chairman Thomas S. Butler of the House Naval Committee, when he introduced a bill in the House at Washington providing for the construction by the United States of ten light cruisers. The treaty of 1922 between the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan did not limit construction of fighting craft of less than 10,000 tons.

The 10,000-ton vessels referred to by Mr. Butler, the Japanese officials asserted, were made a part of the so-called eight-eight-1920 program of Japan. This program originally called for completion in 1927 of eight battleships with 16-inch guns and eight battle cruisers. In conformity with the Washington Treaty only two of these capital ships were retained in the Japanese program. Six other battleships and eight battle cruisers were either given up or their construction suspended, with the exception of two to be rebuilt as aeroplane carriers.

Japan's financial condition, authorities asserted, would not permit excessive building of warships, even if it were desired. They intimated that the Government hoped that some disarmament conference would be called which would make unnecessary even some contemplated replacements.

Tea Hour Was Observed Rehearsal Had To Wait

LONDON, Dec. 22 (A.P.)—The call of the tea hour is heeded by Arnold Bennett, the novelist, regardless of what is happening.

He was watching a rehearsal of a dramatic version of his novel, "Riceyman Steps," when he glanced at his watch and was astounded to discover it was 4 o'clock.

"At this hour," he exclaimed, "I always have an overwhelming desire for tea." He jumped up in the middle of the rehearsal, gave his bowler hat a pat and hurriedly left the theatre. "I don't care what's happening, I must have my tea."

RETURN MOSLEY AT SMETHWICK

Has Huge Majority Over Both Opponents in By-election.

BAYLESS FORFEITS.

SMETHWICK, England, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—Smethwick more than justified the confidence of the Laborites yesterday in the by-election for Parliament by returning Oswald Mosley, Laborite, by a huge majority over his Conservative opponent, J. M. Pike, and the Liberal, W. Bayliss.

The vote was: Mosley 16,077, Pike 9,495, Bayliss 2,600.

The result, which was received with frantic enthusiasm by Mosley's supporters, shows that the Socialist Laborites of Smethwick were undeterred by the aristocratic extraction of Mosley and his wife (who was Lady Cynthia Curzon) and their wealth from giving him their confidence, and, it may be, fresh testimony of the old saying in this country that "your radical dearly loves a lord."

Mr. Mosley said after the announcement: "The result shows that the Government has entirely lost the confidence of the country and has now no mandate to govern."

Mr. Pike said: "The electorate seemed to have been hypnotized by Mosley's worldly possessions. The main lesson of the election is that the conquest of the Labor party by wealthy aristocrats has been begun."

The small Liberal vote is further indication of how the Liberals have lost their hold on the public. Mr. Bayliss, having failed to poll one-eighth of the total votes cast, forfeits a deposit of £150 which the law requires.

YOUTH UNDERGOES SERIOUS OPERATION

Takes Only Local Anaesthetic When Surgeon Works on Throat.

KINGSTON, Dec. 22.—Freddy Janes, a ten-year-old boy, underwent a very critical operation at a local hospital with only a local anesthetic, showing pluck that was most amazing. The boy had suffered from diphtheria, and as a result of an aftermath of the trouble, his throat became afflicted, and he was unable to swallow and had to be fed through a tube in his nose and down his throat. On Saturday the lad's doctor decided that he would have to make an incision in the boy's neck and this was performed with a local anesthetic. It was reported today that the lad was doing as well as could be expected. Due to the incision in the neck, the youngster cannot speak unless he places a finger over the incision.

Able To Take X-Ray Films Of Human Body

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— A radiologist of University College, working with two motion-picture experts, has discovered a method of taking X-ray cinematograph films of the human body, according to an official British despatch. The problem of producing sufficiently strong illumination for moving pictures without injuring the skin of the subject has, it is said, been overcome.

CANADA SEEKING NEW TRADE PACT WITH AMERICA

Liberal Government Expected To Re-open Negotiations Abandoned in 1921.

FREER EXCHANGE.

Question Brought To Fore By Commission Probing Maritime Provinces.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 22. — A fresh attempt to reopen trade negotiations between Canada and the United States is likely to be initiated from Ottawa by the new government elected in October, and which is just getting into its stride.

The reciprocity treaty of 1911, it will be recalled, was negotiated by the Liberal government of that day and was the cause of that government's defeat in the general elections which followed. The Liberals, however, always felt that the issue was not regarded on its merits as a trade proposition and that it fell a victim to an outbreak of patriotic hysteria induced by a campaign of flag-waving on the part of their opponents. When they came into power in 1921, one of the first things they undertook was to reopen negotiations with Washington. W. S. Fielding, Canada's Minister of Finance at that time, made a personal pilgrimage to the American capital and consulted with members of the Harding administration. He found them non-receptive to the plea of reopening proposals looking to reciprocity in trade between the two countries and so reported to the Canadian parliament. Since then the matter has lain dormant.

The question is once more brought to the fore in a report made to parliament this week by a commission appointed to inquire into the unsatisfactory economic conditions prevailing in the maritime provinces—Nova Scota, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island—and to prescribe means for their alleviation.

The maritime provinces trace their backward state to their entry into confederation 60 years ago. This move they maintain, destroyed their natural market in the nearby states since it took from them the privilege they had hitherto enjoyed of making their own trade arrangements. While the report recommends the granting of preferential freight rates, the bonusing of the steel industry and an increase in the annual cash contributions which the Dominion now pays to the maritimes, it also draws attention to the grievances of the complaining provinces with regard to their inability under the present tariff laws of Canada to do business with the States, the natural outlet for their products. The commission draws special attention to the views expressed by representatives of New Brunswick, in particular, that a trade treaty with the United States providing for the free exchange of forest products, particularly pulpwood, woodpulp and paper, would be of immense benefit to that province and urging that steps be taken to bring about its adoption.

The government has announced its intention of bringing in legislation to give effect to certain of the commission's recommendations.

Whether this will include another offer of a trade pact to the American Government is not known but the fact that Canada now has her own minister at Washington puts this country in a much better position to open and carry on negotiations and the known attitude of the present Canadian government toward a freer exchange of trade between the two countries makes it highly probable that steps in that direction will be shortly forthcoming.

THERE'S BIG TRIBE OF HER

Can you imagine what sort of vision it is that inspires the smile this young lady of the broken shoestrings is wearing? One guess! And you're right, of course—it's a vision of the joys that Christmas morning is going to bring; going to bring, that is, unless Santa by some dire mischance should forget. And surely there are plenty of folks in Peterboro to see that no such sad thing happens to any of the broken shoestring tribe.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — Reports reaching local papers yesterday recorded the bringing in of an oil well near Grandview, Man.

The well was "spudded in" by Premier John Bracken six weeks ago, and oil was struck at a depth of 700 feet. The well, it is reported, has a high quality flow of 35 barrels a day.

HUDSON DEATH TOLL IS NOW 51

Launch Captain Arrested on Charges of Homicide and Negligence.

THIRTY RECOVERED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—The probable death toll due to the capsizing of the launch Linseed King in the Hudson River was set at 51 yesterday when police announced that 21 passengers were still unaccounted for. Thirty bodies were recovered and 29 persons were saved from the ice-choked river.

Three bodies were found yesterday floating in the ice where the launch overturned Monday morning, and the rest were taken from the cabin after the boat had been carried upstream several miles by the ice. Police boats are still dragging the river.

Captain John Rohmeider of Jersey City was under police guard yesterday in Knickerbocker Hospital, suffering from shock and submersion, and charged with homicide and negligence.

Mexican Health Officers Forbid Baby "Pacifiers"

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Mexican babies hereafter are denied the rubber-ringed contraption called a pacifier. MANY CITIZENS ATTEND FUNERAL OF D. W. DUMBLE

TRIBUTE PAID.

Judge Huycke and S. R. Armstrong Recall Work For Church and City.

The funeral service of the late D. W. Dumble, K.C., was held in George Street United Church this morning. Rev. J. E. Todd officiated, assisted by two laymen, His Honor Judge Huycke and S. R. Armstrong, men who had been associated with the deceased for many years.

Mr. Armstrong gave the biography of the late D. W. Dumble, K.C., and spoke of the deep and active interest he took in all affairs which related to the welfare of this city. As magistrate and as a member of the Board of Education for twenty-five years, he had taken an interest in the life of this city. It was not, however, in this realm of public life that the deceased excelled, but in his relation to his church. He helped her grow and prosper, he was the minister's right hand man for years, and he was an active class leader.

Judge Huycke

"I know it is somewhat unusual for a layman to take part in a funeral service, said Judge Huycke, adding that he had been a close friend of the family for years, first when he was practising in Cobourg and Mr. Dumble's brother was magistrate there and then, on coming to Peterborough, serving on the same commission with Mr. Dumble while he was magistrate. His Honor then referred to the deceased as a barrister, a magistrate, and a citizen.

"As a barrister we must realize that in the past few years, Mr. Dumble has not been the Mr. Dumble of his best days. We must look back many years to see him as a lawyer who was careful and who gave wise counsel to his clients and who was one of the best conveyancers of real estate in the province.

"As magistrate, the citizens of Peterborough do not know and never will know the debt they owe Mr. Dumble for stamping out evil and upholding right. The citizens of this city can never pay the debt they owe the deceased, but I say in the

Succumbs This Morning at His Home in Eastern Village.

CHARGE AMENDED.

Crown Attorney Says Indictment Will Be Changed To Murder.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Bailiff Charles St. Charles, aged 73 years, of Madoc, who was shot in the back while making a seizure of cattle on the Robinson farm, four miles from Eldorado, on November 15th last, died this morning shortly before ten o'clock at his home in Madoc village. Abraham Robinson is in jail awaiting trial on the charge of attempted murder by shooting, having been committed for trial some weeks ago.

The cause of the bailiff's death was septic pneumonia, aggravated by the wound received when he was shot.

R. C. Donnan, Crown attorney, intimated that Abe Robinson would not be arraigned again in police court, but that the indictment would be amended to the capital charge.

Mr. St. Charles went to the farm of the Robinson brothers to make a seizure of cattle to pay a tax bill and was shot at three times, the third bullet entering his side.

A widow and two children survive.

YOU'RE NEEDED!

Wouldn't you like to banish the pathos from this face and wreathe it with smiles? There may be many such faces in Peterboro on Christmas Day unless a lot of folks volunteer as aids to Santa Claus.

FRANCE FEARS WORLD CRISIS

Europe Turns Eyes Towards America For Signs of Weakening.

BALKANS UNEASY.

PARIS, Dec. 22. — Is the world verging on an economic crisis? Will 1927 see a general fall in world prices on account of over-production and lack of markets?

These questions are beginning to worry France considerably and an apprehensive eye is turned toward American markets where, since cotton collapsed, there are signs of weakening.

Old Europe still is very sick. Wherever one looks, serious troubles appear.

Franco-German difficulties may have been smoothed out at Geneva, despite the interference of the German Nationalists, but Foreign Ministers Gustav Stresemann and Aristide Briand are 10 years ahead of their contemporaries and both are up against the hatred and insults of partisans of force and prestige.

M. Briand's return from Geneva was far from glorious. That statesman, who follows a foreign policy of his own, always finds himself without followers in Parliament, which has no foreign policy. Both the Nobel peace prize winners have hard parliamentary battles ahead, although the simple masses and former soldiers in both countries are with them, heart and soul.

Clouds in the Alps.

Unfortunately, while the war threats recede along the Rhine, they rise menacingly in the Alps and the Balkans. Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy appears to be a prisoner of his followers, his committees and his own policy. Apprehension is great, not only in southern France but in Jugo-Slavia and even Turkey.

Both Belgrade and Constantinople are gravely disturbed by the Italo-Albanian treaty. Since the London Treaty of 1915, Italy has not renounced Asia Minor. Although thoroughly Greek, the Dodecanese Islands and Rhodes have become Italian bases at the very doors of Anatolia. Who can say that Rome is not cherishing designs on the Near East?

In any case, military precautions are needed on the Italian frontier to insure protection of French territory. Thus, one of two great peoples who fought side by side and now suffer similar economic ills, have become a menace to the other, although the latter is entirely peaceful.

Again, the Italian dictatorship may end with civil war.

For 106 years the pulpit of the Salem Baptist Church near Sparta, Va., has been occupied by a pastor bearing the name of Andrew Broadus—father, son and grandson.

FOWL PRICES CHANGE LITTLE

Large Quantity Offered on Farmers' Market This Morning.

TURKEYS 45 CENTS.

There was plenty of fowl offered for sale on the farmers' market this morning, with quotations fairly stationary. Large turkeys sold from 40 to 43 cents a pound, but 45 cents was the general price. Dry-picked chickens were 25 cents a pound, ducks 30 cents and geese 25 to 28 cents a pound. Butter was priced at 38 cents a pound and eggs at 70 cents a dozen, with pullets' eggs selling at 35 cents a dozen. Clover honey was 15 cents a pound and clover sections were 20 cents each.

On the open market, hay was $13 and $14 a load, and wood sold from $7 to $10 a load. Potatoes were $2 a bag, with sundry vegetables and apples at the usual rates.

London Fogs Beaten At Burton On Trent

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(United Press.) — London's fogs may have to accord precedence for thickness to the fogs of Burton-on-Trent.

Leff Pouishnoff, a Russian pianist engaged to play in the town hall, rose before his audience and said: "My soul, my body and my fingers are ready to play for you. My piano was on the way, but it is lost in the fog."

There was no concert.

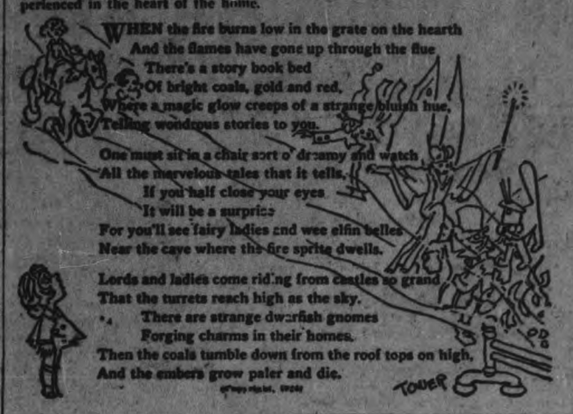
Stories in the Coals

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THERE is nothing quite so cozy as an open fire. It radiates a sort of spiritual warmth as well as physical comfort and makes one settle down in relaxed contentment, sort of nestled in the heart of the home. The day can be ever so dull, but an open fire will dispel all gloom. Folks may feel ever so strange in a group, but a cheery fire will break the restraint. Children will draw to a fireplace as little worshippers at a shrine and if we are wise we will capitalize this magic charm to build the home ideals of cozy companionship and gather there for confidences and stories. Long after other things are forgotten in the process of growing up there clings the feelings we had of happiness or discontent as experienced in the heart of the home.



SOCIALIST WIN IS CELEBRATED

People of Smethwick Parade Streets For Many Hours.

SING CAROLS.

LONDON Dec. 22 (Canadian Press)—Smethwick's population did not get to bed until early hours this morning and then sought rest, hoarse from shouting and tired from parading the streets in celebration of the victory of Oswald Mosley, "Silver Spoon Socialist" in the parliamentary bye election yesterday with a majority of 3,982 over his Conservative and Liberal opponents.

Judging from the enthusiasm, Mosley and his wife, Lady Cynthia, daughter of the late Lord Curzon, have won a big hold on a large section of the community. When the cheering which greeted result had subsided the crowds found relief in singing "The Red Flag" and when tired of that, switched to Christmas carols. The magnitude of Mosley's victory came as a surprise to political quarters here.

Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader, expressed his warm congratulations to Mosley and his wife, who, he said, "Have borne so bravely villainous attacks which must have been painful to them."

The Daily Herald quotes Mosley as stating "I cannot emphasize too strongly that we won on a programme of uncompromising Socialism."

GERMANS RESENT VERDICT OF COURT

French Officer Acquitted of Murder of Civilian—Self Defence.

BERLIN, December 22. — Resentment against the French is expected as an outcome of yesterday's action by the French court martial in the Rhineland in acquitting Lieut. Roucier of the French army of the charge of manslaughter in connection with the killing of a German civilian and the wounding of two others at Germersheim in September. The citizens of Landau, where the court martial sat, are reported to be enraged over the verdict.

The French have maintained that Lieutenant Roucier fired in self defence. It has been said that he was threatened twice on the night of the shooting by defendant crowds of young Germans. On the second occasion, according to the French version he fired into the air and did not turn his pistol against the Germans until they raised their canes to strike him.

Germany Protests.

BERLIN, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press.) — The German foreign office to-day instructed Ambassador Von Hoesch of Paris to protest to the French government against the acquittal by a French court martial of the French Lieutenant Roucier on manslaughter charges growing out of the killing of one German civilian and the wounding of two others at Germersheim in September. The German foreign office contends that Roucier's acquittal and the conviction of the wounded men on charges of striking at Roucier are a "serious menace to the furtherance of friendly relations between Germany and France."

Ministers Worried

Dr. Stresemann, Foreign Minister in the Marx Cabinet which was recently overthrown, is worried by the turn of events in the Roucier case, and has cancelled a contemplated six weeks vacation in Egypt. His act is against the orders of his physicians, who insist that he must rest. It is expected that Dr. Stresemann will take a shorter vacation nearer home, probably in Italy, beginning next week.

Johannes Bell, Minister of Justice in the Marx Ministry, which is carrying on until after the holidays, today issued a fervent appeal to all Germans to unite "in regaining freedom for our peoples along the Rhine and full sovereignty for the German States in those areas."

CHEESE FACTORY OUTPUT SMALLER

Brae Company Reports Very Successful Year Despite Decrease.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 22. — The cheese factory season has been closed for a month but the final touch has been just put on during the last week when the annual meetings of the various companies have been held. Brae Cheese and Butter Co. held its annual conclave in the factory on Wednesday afternoon last. The attendance was below normal, but keen interest was shown in the year's results. This company had a somewhat smaller make this year, with 100,414 lbs. of cheese from 1,148,529 lbs. of milk and 36,208.6 lbs. of butter-fat. The average price per pound cheese was 16.86 cents, with butter-fat averaging 40.67 cents a pound for the season. The expenses were somewhat higher than usual, owing to the purchase of a new vat, and a smaller balance of $230 was distributed to the patrons at the close of the season.

While prices have been much below the average this last year, a fair return has been realized, and Mr. Nicol of the Bank of Montreal, speaking at the meeting, held out prospects of some improvement in market conditions before another year.

Mr. Murray, district instructor, also spoke and reported favorable features of the year's work. In his area covering the northern part of Northumberland County, there had been an increase of over 800 cows from the 1925 report. The average test was 3.21 in 1926, as against 3.13 in 1925, due in some measure, he thought, to the reduction in the feeding of turnips in some parts of the district. The second-grade cheese was also less than in 1925, a very hopeful sign. Mr. James Shillinglaw, maker at Kimberley Factory, on the English Line, was the districts' high man, standing as one of the five high scorers in the Central Ontario district.

The 1926 board of directors was re-elected, the officers for the Brae Company being as follows:

President, Malcolm Totton; Secretary, E. L. Anderson; Directors: Percy Oddie, Ed. Wilson, Bert Hay, Bogart Finn, George Anderson. Maker, Leslie Shillinglaw.

A delightful house dance was held by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Millar at their home, Town Line, on Wednesday evening last. Friends were present from all over the community, as well as neighboring centres, and one and all declared the event most enjoyable. The music was supplied by Mr. Fred Jones.

LAKEFIELD COUNCIL PASSES ACCOUNTS

Final Meeting of Year is Held—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 22.—A statutory meeting of the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the Village of Lakefield was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday, December 15, at 8 p.m.

There were present Reeve J. C. Strickland and Councillors Clarke, Tedford and Kennedy.

Councillor Kennedy mentioned the lack of observance of Armistice day and thought that the Corporation should take steps to see that there was some fitting observance of the occasion in the future. Mr. Marling asked for the assurance that the Canadian Legion should have the use of the hall as in former years for holding the annual Christmas tree for soldiers' children. The Council assured him that they could.

The finance committee presented a report recommending the payment of the following accounts:

L.H.E. Commission, $165.33; L.H.E. Commission, $8.76; L.H.E. Commision, $1; Election Board, $61.60; B. Marling, $3; R. J. Webster, $3; Bell Telephone, $5.47; W. J. Charlton, $295.35; Hunter and Webster, 75 cents; W. W. Leonard, $6.02; W. W. Leonard, $10.32; Davis' garage, $22.95; pay roll, $78.50; Hunter and Webster, $35; Porter Co., $7.98; Porter Co., $5; Porter Co., $1.79. Total, $711.82.

Moved by Councillor Tedford, seconded by Councillor Kennedy, that the report of the finance committee be received and adopted. Carried.

Mr. Rutter addressed Council regarding advertising in the Trent Waterways booklet, and Mr. S. J. Charlton regarding the blocking of his drain.

The treasurer tabled a statement of receipts and expenditures for the year to December 15th showing balance in the bank of $8,565.81, also statements of assets and liabilities showing total assets of $128,762.67 and liabilities of $74,586.26, also detailed statement of receipts and expenditures.

The Reeve and Councillors made short addresses thanking the Council and the various committees for co-operation during the year.

Messrs. W. A. Barker and R. C. Chittick have bought the auto and taxi livery of Hill and Sabatino and will carry on the business in the same stand. Messrs. Hill and Sabatino have been in business nearly six years and have built up an excellent business.

The weather man broke all the season's records when the thermometer went to 15 below zero on Saturday morning last. It was decidedly the coldest day of this remarkably cold December but the cold was of short duration as it moderated on Sunday and Monday was very mild.

The Canadian Legion are having a Christmas tree this year as usual for the soldiers' children. The idea is a good one and welds together in one happy family the children whose daddies are numbered among "some of the lads who went." It is a great heritage and one of which the younger generation should not lose sight.

Wood sleighs are much used vehicles at present and the children are having a particularly enjoyable time at the popular winter pastime of "catching on bobs" .Whether the pleasure is shared by the driver always seems to be a matter of doubt.

Many small boys are earning pocket money by selling Christmas trees which are in great demand as in nearly every home where there are kiddies the Christmas tree figures in the family celebration. Santa Claus is a myth to the older children but the tree is a delightful reality.

Mr. Francis Condon of Sudbury is at his home in the village for the holidays.

Mrs. John Hunter of McCracken's Landing is visiting friends in the village.

Miss Ruth Benson of Peterboro is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Tanner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Strickland of Toronto were in the village for a couple of days last week.

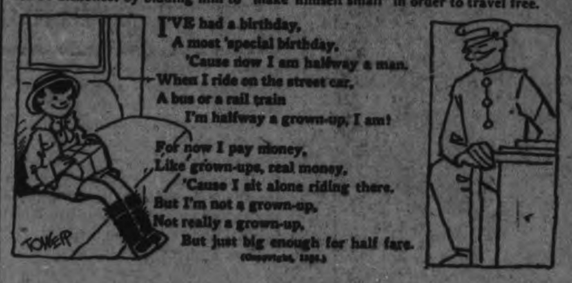
Half Fare

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

IT'S such a thrilling experience when one is allowed to occupy a bus or street car seat all alone. One gets to feeling so dangley perched on a lap by the time one reaches the "paying age" and, really, when he gets that large it's not only humiliating to the child, but awkward for other passengers to have him held! When the "Half Fare Age" is reached grown-ups should meet it also as a matter of honor. Unfortunately there are parents who unthinkingly teach the child to be dishonest by bidding him to "make himself small" in order to travel free.



I'VE had a birthday,
A most 'special birthday,
'Cause now I am halfway a man.
When I ride on the street car,
A bus or a rail train
I'm halfway a grown-up, I am!

For now I pay money,
Like grown-ups, real money,
'Cause I sit alone riding there.
But I'm not a grown-up,
Not really a grown-up,
But just big enough for half fare.

SAINT and SINNER

At five o'clock, just a few minutes after the last of the afternoon's nine callers had taken a reluctant departure, the Cluny limousine rolled noiselessly to a stop at the curb before the Lane home, and Cherry descended like a proud, small queen. The uniformed chauffeur followed her up the path to the house, his arms piled high with parcels, including a gayly colored bandbox from the most exclusive hat shop in the city.

On Cherry's lovely, childish face there was an almost comical dignity and condescension, as she directed the chauffeur in disposing of the packages and in dismissing him with grand nonchalance. But when he had marched away, Faith was distressed to see the small, vivid face cloud over with petulence, the golden eyes fill with tears.

"Oh, I'm tired out!" Cherry dashed at her tears with the back of her hand. "Shopping all afternoon, with that noisy old man right at my elbow every minute! Couldn't get a darn thing exactly like I wanted it! He's so scared I'll look young in my trousseau things! If he had his way, I'd dress in black trailing down to my ankles."

"It seems to me he'd be rather afraid it would cause gossip, his going about with you to shop," Faith deprecated.

"Oh, little does he care! He talks right out loud about our getting married! And sometimes I think if he says 'ah' again, I'll murder him! 'Something a little—ah—more dignified,'" she mimicked bitterly. "I didn't mind it so much, when I was taking dictation from him, because his eternal 'ah' gave me a chance to catch up with my notes. But now—"

"Why, dear, aren't you working for him any longer?" Faith asked in amazement.

"Not since Wednesday," Cherry confessed dispiritedly. "I didn't say anything about it because of Dad, and I thought I could get a lot of shopping done. And the old fool wanted me to lunch with him every day. You know what he did? He told Mr. Neff, his partner, you know, that we were engaged, and by Tuesday it was all over the office. Then he said it wouldn't be 'ah—dignified' for me to 'ah, work for him,' since we were engaged. But he's going right on paying me my salary, for pin money, as he calls it."

"But you can't shop every day and all day," Faith was dismayed. "And Dad will find it out somehow. Oh, Cherry, you're just getting deeper and deeper into this thing! Did you know he'd been interviewed about his engagement for the Sunday Star? Well, they got hold of it somehow, and the society editor called up Mother today and said Mr. Cluny had confirmed the rumor, and they could get details from her!"

"My God!" Cherry jumped up and beat her curly head with a clinched fist. "What in the world did she say?"

"Gave them the announcement," Faith confessed drearily. "And there were seven neighbors here, all just bursting with curiosity. They ate up all the raisin cookies and the marble cake I'd made for Sunday, and a whole loaf of my bread—"

"Now, I'm in for it!" Cherry moaned. "I didn't want it to get out till a few days before the wedding. I'd counted on having a date every single, solitary night between now and Thanksgiving Day, and now I suppose every boy that I go with will ditch me because I'm engaged to that silly old fool."

"Cherry, Cherry!" Faith seized the girl and held her hands in a crushing grip. "It isn't old Mr. Cluny that's the fool! It's you—you! I don't understand you! Hating him, despising him, calling him ugly names, and yet letting him buy you hundreds of dollars worth of clothes and planning to marry him in November! Are you crazy, honey? Don't you know you're simply wrecking your life—with your eyes open?"

"Oh, don't start that again!" Cherry writhed out of Faith's grasp and flung herself upon the piano bench.

She was suddenly a frightened little girl again, a full lower lip caught between her round, pearly teeth, her golden eyes wide with terror. "It's too late, isn't it, Faith? Gosh! In the papers! Wonder what they'll say?"

"'December and May romance,' I suppose," Faith's lips curled in bitter cynicism.

Later, when Faith was dishing up supper in the kitchen, Cherry wandered in disconsolate again. "What are you doing tonight, Faith—anything special?"

"Bob's coming over. George Pruitt called up, but I already had a date with Bob. Why?"

"Has Bob—said—anything yet?"

"Has Bob—said — anything yet?" Cherry was strangely diffident, crumbling a thin, three-cornered slice of Faith's home-made bread between unheeding fingers.

"No," Faith answered rather shortly. "You must see what a position it puts Bob in, your being engaged to his uncle. I don't think he'll say anything to me—if he means to at all—until after you're married. You can imagine how the papers would try to figure out the relationship by marriage, of an uncle and his nephew marrying two sisters."

"If you and Bob got married, I'd be an aunt to both of you, wouldn't I?" Cherry smiled rather forlornly. "Oh, Lord, what a mess! Say, Faith, are you—awfully in love with Bob?"

There was something so desperate in the suddenly rigid little figure before her that Faith found herself lying, out of the greatness of her pity. Maybe that would be a way out. Cherry had always said that she cared for both Bob Hathaway and Chris Wiley. To marry Chris would be infinitely more tragic than marrying old Mr. Cluny, but if Bob still cared, even a little bit—

"I don't think I'm the kind to be 'awfully in love,'" honey,' Faith managed to laugh carelessly. "Why?"

"Oh, I was just wondering—say, would you mind terribly if I took Bob away from you, just for tonight? I have a date with Chester Hart, and I know he'd be willing to change. Please, Faith! I—I'm nearly desperate for one more good time, and after tomorrow's paper comes out, I—I'll be stranded here at home, with no dates, no work, no nothing but an old man around after me. Faith?"

CONFIRMATION AT YOUNG'S POINT

Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeny Confirms Fifteen Candidates.

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 22.—On Monday, December 13, at 2.30 p.m., the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto, performed the sacred rite of confirmation at St. Aidan's Church.

Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly, the incumbent, presented fifteen candidates for confirmation from the various points of the mission. They were:

From Young's Point: Ethel Gwendolyn Wilson, Bessie Doreen Wilson, Ellen Irene Clapper, Thelma Marjorie Duggan.

The Bishop, in his address to the candidates, took as his text, Phil. iv., 4th verse: "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say rejoice.

"Let your moderation be known unto all men.

"The Lord is at hand.

"Be careful for nothing: but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made unto God.

"And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."

The Bishop stressed two main ideas. The first was rejoicing. This is indeed a time of rejoicing, when we are preparing for the great feast of the Nativity, more commonly known as Christmas. Again for the candidates this is a special time of rejoicing, because at confirmation they are to assume their own spiritual responsibilities.

The second point in the Bishop's address was summed up in the words, "The Lord is at hand." This means not that the second coming of Christ is to be in the near future, but that the Lord is near at all times. We can do nothing, say nothing, think nothing, without that saying, doing, or thinking being known unto God. So it behooves us to be careful at all times because the Lord is near. He is with us at all times.

The Bishop urged the candidates to take advantage of the invitation in the words, "Let your request be made known unto God." God wants us to treat Him as a friend, not as an absentee landlord. He wants us to talk to Him and make our wants known unto Him.

Mrs. L. Ellsworth presided at the organ and the hymns sung were in accordance with the service.

The offertory at all confirmation services in the Diocese of Toronto goes towards the building fund of the new Cathedral, and the sum realized at St. Aiden's amounted to $10.05.

The Bishop congratulated the Rev. Mr. Dwelly on the splendid work he had done in the short time he had been in charge.

Mrs. Leon Ellsworth and little son Royden left for Windsor on Friday, where they intend spending Christmas.

A NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

Dr. F. W. Gershaw, Liberal member for Medicine Hat, is quoted as announcing that he has been successful in interesting the Secretary of State in a proposal to create the anniversary date of the Armistice a national holiday.

There will be among many Canadians a fervent hope that the Medicine Hat member is correct in his announcement of a change.

Instead of combining the two celebrations of Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day, it is understood that the latter holiday will be changed back to a date early in October, as it formerly was observed, while November 11th will be celebrated as a national holiday.

Out of all the historic dates associated with the war it seems desirable that at least one should be properly observed, and doubtless the anniversary of the end of the struggle will be regarded by the majority of people as the most fitting.

The combined celebration has not been a success.

In some centres Armistice Day ceremonies were not held on Thanksgiving Day, but were deferred until the actual anniversary; in others the end of the war was celebrated on the Sunday before Thanksgiving Day.

The setting apart of the Armistice Day anniversary as a national holiday will find favour in all parts of Canada.

POOR PROPAGANDA.

Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, has refused to either deny or confirm the report that he proposes to introduce a comprehensive scheme of placing a large number of settlers upon Crown lands in the West.

However, the Minister is expected to bring forward a more extensive immigration scheme than has been in operation for some time.

In any such plan he may advocate Mr. Forke would be materially helped if he could successfully shut off the chorus of complaints from Western farmer members as to conditions in the Prairie Provinces.

If copies of Hansard containing the speeches made by such members in the last four or five years were to be given a wide circulation in the British Isles, Canada would have to pay immigrants to go into the Western Provinces, and pay them handsomely.

It is difficult to imagine anything more harmful from an immigration viewpoint than the tales of woe told by Western Progressives in regard to the troubles of the Prairie farmers, and if they want their former leader to succeed as a Cabinet Minister the blue-ruinists will have to change the tone of their speeches.

GOOD MEN NEEDED.

On the eve of the municipal nominations it is not particularly reassuring to note a general lack of interest in the proceedings and a greater paucity than usual of aldermanic candidates.

Tomorrow, of course, may do much to remedy this condition of affairs.

It has usually been the case that public-spirited citizens have seen to it that a number of capable candidates were placed in the field.

Often, however, some of those nominated—sometimes the best material in the list—decline to become candidates.

The Examiner hopes that those whose names are brought forward tomorrow will consider the matter carefully before refusing to offer themselves to the electorate.

As was said in these columns a day or two ago, there is a very real call to service in connection with the Council, and men who have the qualities necessary for such service should not be too eager to pass the responsibility on to somebody else.

If every citizen qualified to hold public office had done so Peterboro would not be the progressive city she is today.

If men like D. W. Dumble had remained aloof from public service it can readily be seen that the city's advancement would have been materially retarded.

Good men are needed in the Council; there is much work to be done there and a splendid opportunity to advance the interests of the community.

TOWNSHIP SCHOOL BOARDS.

Premier Ferguson, as Minister of Education, is returning to his proposed scheme of township school boards, a bill covering which has been several times introduced into the Legislature, only to be withdrawn when it was seen that there was strong opposition to the measure.

The Premier does not wish to put the legislation into effect until public opinion in the sections affected is behind it, and in the meantime he has been endeavouring to convince opponents of the proposal that it is a reform very much needed in Ontario.

He has many strong arguments to advance on behalf of township boards, particularly in regard to the high cost of educating pupils in schools where there is but a meagre attendance.

When it is realized that there are thirteen schools with an average attendance of two or less, 57 with an attendance of three or less, 93 with four or less, 171 with five or less and 996 with ten or less, the suspicion begins to seep in that there is something decidedly wrong with our system of rural education.

The average cost of educating a rural pupil in Ontario is around $80 a year, but in these skeleton schools the cost to the ratepayers per pupil runs as high as $243 a year in some cases.

Premier Ferguson has issued a pamphlet dealing with the matter, and the following summing up of the situation is worth noting:

"I have endeavored in this letter to do three things; first, to point out the undoubted advantages that will result from the adoption of the township boards scheme; second, to meet the main objections that are urged against the scheme and to show that these are based on misconceptions; and third, to impress upon you that the schools concerned are your schools, that they exist solely for the purpose of training your children, that you must continue to control them, and that the department has no purpose in mind other than to improve them and reduce the cost of operating them. I believe that rural people have much to gain and little to lose by the institution of a method of school administration that has been for many years of great advantage to urban people. The most important factor in any scheme of educational reform is the bearing that this reform has upon the good of children and upon the promotion of better citizenship in this Province. This factor I have endeavored to keep uppermost in the proposals I have made."

THESE ARE MOTHER'S DAYS.

Fashion has fixed Mother's Day in the springtime, but it seems out of place then. If reward for services rendered is the basis for the day, its season is belated. Mother is having her day of service now. Her reward in the spring does not suggest what is due her for the work of December.

One needs only to visit the retail district this month to realize her unwearying efforts. The stores and the streets are full of mothers. Father and the children are not idle, but the brunt of the gift-making and the gift-buying falls on mother. Far into the night, from need of time and from need of secrecy, she toils over the dainty things which will go forth to happy friends this week. Through the stores she drags her weary but unflagging body to final completion of the list of remembrances. She is tired to exhaustion, but is freshened and stimulated by the love she wraps into her parcels for dear ones. She would collapse by the counter if not encouraged by the beacon fires of her enthusiasm.

Men, in their crude materialism, grumble at the sacrifices of their wives and mothers at the holiday season. They cannot get the vision which carries the women to final victory in their Christmas campaign. Only on Christmas morning will they see the joyous faces, and surrender with the admission: "Mother was right, after all."—The Globe.

SUNSHINE FROM SNOWDRIFTS.

Why complain of Canada's winter? Why not capitalize it? A long season of frost and snow may be unpleasant in one sense, but there is little to be gained by merely being philosophical about it. Canada's winter is what it is, has been, and always will be, and Canadians should emphasize its good qualities. That is what the Canadian railway companies are now doing.

At one time publishers vetoed any pictorial representation of the Canadian winter, and we had Christmas editions without a hint that the Canadian landscape knew such things as ice and snow. The angry reception of Kipling's "Our Lady of the Snows" showed a sensitiveness that has fortunately passed away. Something of the same mistaken idea probably prompted the big railways at one time to protest against winter carnivals at the larger eastern cities, but Canadians are now doing their climate more justice. Publicity is now being given lavishly to the attractions of Canada's winter season. Items in the winter program at Quebec, Montreal, Algonquin Park, Banff and elsewhere are being broadcasted, and will bring returns. The latest departure in winter sports offered to tourists is a personally-conducted trip over northern trap-lines, much on the principle of the famous "dude ranches" of the West.

So far as Western Ontario is concerned, the trend is all in the right direction. Interest in winter sports of all kinds is on the increase. Curling and hockey, ski-ing, skating, tobogganing are enjoying revived popularity. The talk of a commercially-profitable winter resort at Port Stanley is no longer considered fanciful.

Switzerland has taught us a lesson. In late years it has advertised its winter charms as energetically as its summer allurements. As a result, many thousands from all parts of Europe flock to its resorts for winter pastimes.—London Advertiser.

NOT PEACEFUL AT ALL.

A delegation of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress presented to members of the Government Thursday a series of representations for proposed legislation. Many of these were desirable things, but there was one which we think should be objected to by public opinion.

This was a request that the Criminal Code of Canada be amended so as to permit "peaceful picketing" in this country in the course of a strike.

We are afraid that "peaceful picketing" is a misnomer. "Peaceful picketing" means that in a case of industrial trouble, strikers or their sympathizers shall be legally entitled to stop other people in the street to try to argue them against going to work. This is not a peaceful thing. It is a very unpleasant thing to anybody who is subjected to it—a very offensive thing—a thing certain not only to breed bad temper but very likely to breed violence.

Any man who wants to go to work, or any person in the streets whether he wants to go to work or not, should not be made legally subject to being stopped by anybody who wants to interfere with him and compel him to argue about the propriety of his doings. That is a thoroughly nasty thing and, as already said, quite likely to breed violence.

People who desire to quit work have a right to quit work; people who want to work at legitimate and honest work have a right to do so unmolested in any fashion whatever by other people. It is to be hoped that the Government and Parliament will continue to uphold the law of Canada in this matter.—Ottawa Journal.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — Wheat prices advanced sharply yesterday with buying much more active than of late, and with offerings scarce. Milling demand for cash wheat at a premium over future deliveries, counted as a stimulating factor, and so, too, did the unexpected bullish showing of the government report regarding production both of Winter wheat and Spring.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 1 1-2c to 3 5-8c net higher, corn 3-4c to 1 1-2 and 1 5-8c up; oats unchanged to 1-4c off and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to a rise of 20 cents.

Corn and oats rallied on account of the pronounced strength of bread grains. Disappointment of bulls regarding government figures on corn and oats had only a transient effect particularly as to corn. May and July oats touched a new high price for the season.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—There was some enquiry from foreign buyers for grain on the Montreal market yesterday, but as the prices bid were in most cases below working basis, little business of importance was done and the market generally was quiet. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also slow, but the undertone was firm at the recent advance in prices noted.

Owing to the renewed strength in the cash wheat situation at Winnipeg, a stronger feeling developed in the local market for Spring wheat grades of flour, and prices were advanced 10 cents per barrel.

The undertone to the Winter wheat flour market was steadier and a moderate amount of business was done.

The millfeed market continued active and prices were firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was active and the market was steady.

An active business was done in all grades of fresh and storage eggs and values were firm. The receipts were 1,746 cases.

Owing to the increased offerings and the small demand for potatoes, the undertone to the market continued easy but prices showed no further change. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.70 to $1.75 per bag of 90 pounds, New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.55 per bag, and Quebec white stock at $1.40 per bag in bulk, ex-track.

The tone of the market for beans was firm under a steady demand. Sales of car lots of choice white hand picked were made at $2.75 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $3.00 per bushel.

The demand for butter continued good and a moderate amount of business was done. The receipts were 140 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in cheese but prices were steady. The receipts were 237 boxes.

FASTING AND MILK DIET FOR CHICKENS

You will find that your dictionary says that a chicken is "a person of tender years." Of course, many of these chickens need a fast to cure enlarged tonsils; and a milk diet to build up their weight. However, the chicken that I am writing about in this article is the domestic fowl used for eating purposes.

Even with this feathered fowl it will be found that fasting has a very beneficial effect, both in improving the chicken's health, if suffering from obesity or disease; and also in improving the color of its flesh for eating purposes.

If any kind of fowl is fasted for at least twenty-four hours before killing, the meat will be more tender and the flavor more delicious. For several days previous to fasting the fowl, it should be fed only milk or buttermilk. This will make the giblets quite clean, and light in color.

The Kosher way of killing is far superior to the method used by most butchers. The arteries in the neck are severed and the bird allowed to hang by its feet until the heart has pumped out all of the blood.

Dry picking is superior to scalding, and this should be done immediately after killing. The fowl should then be kept on ice for three or four days before cooking, as this will also make the flesh still more tender, as it does with all meats.

If you are forced to buy your fowl in the market, you will not be able to secure a fasted chicken, but most good markets now sell milk fed poultry. Many butchers buy the birds already grown and keep them in small coops, feeding them for a week or more on milk or some combination such as bread and milk.

The smaller chickens are called squabs and weigh from three fourths to one and one-quarter pounds. The broilers weigh from one and one-half to two pounds. The best roasting chickens weigh around three pounds, and the meat at this size is the most tasteful and contains about the same nutritive value as beef.

The white meat found in the breast of the chicken is the cleanest and has the most delicate flavor. It is an American custom to discard various parts of the bird which are considered of value in other countries. In Europe, the head is generally left on and the brain eaten as a tidbit. In France, special dishes are made of the cock's comb and wattles, and the feet are skinned and cooked for soup.

The practice of frying chicken is a deplorable one, as the frying fat so toughens the meat as to render it indigestible. Fricassee chicken is likewise not a desirable manner of preparing chicken, as the addition of cream and flour makes a bad combination and leads to digestive disorders.

Broiling or roasting is by far the best method of preparing chicken. Fowl prepared in this manner is easily digested and should be used once or twice a week with a salad and only the non-starchy vegetables. No bread or starch should be used with this meal.

Chicken is of great value to us, for in the form of an egg it can be eaten before it is born, and then again as a chicken after it is dead.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

HOUDINI

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Harry Houdini is dead.

In many respects he was a great man.

He was not only a great entertainer, but he was great physically, being exceedingly strong and fit, and great spiritually.

His real name was Eric Samuel and he was the son of the Rev. Dr. Mayer Samuel of Appleton, Wisconsin.

He afterwards repudiated Houdin and wrote a work denouncing him, but he kept his name.

Those who were intimately acquainted with Houdini respected the force of his convictions.

Although he was a magician and a trickster, he hated fraud of all kinds, and anyone that claimed supernatural powers or supernatural aid was to him as a red rag to a bull.

He did a great deal of good in exposing spiritualistic claims.

One of his last acts was to spend some time submerged in a coffin, showing that the much-advertised Rahman-Bey did not do this feat except by trickery.

He held that it was all right to fold the public if you told them you were fooling them and it was manifest trickery, but to fool them and to claim supernatural powers was wrong.

Houdini had a great library consisting of works of magic and sleight-of-hand of all ages.

He was a most companionable man and very modest in his personal life, although his name was a household word in every language.

He escaped from so many prisons and various kinds of shackles that "to do the Houdini act" was a phrase that entered into common parlance. It is given to very few men to enrich the language of their fellows with a new word.

His death is sincerely mourned by all who knew him.

His personal life was attractive and beyond reproach.

HOPE FOR PEACE WITH CHURCH IS STILL REMOTE

Believe Pope Contesting Fascism's Right To Control Youths' Education.

IS MAIN POINT.

Secondary Consideration Given Pontiff's Disapproval of Violence Against Church.

ROME, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—An entirely new issue arose yesterday evening to cloud the horizon of Premier Mussolini's consistent efforts to achieve permanent friendly relations between the Church and the State.

This point, an official spokesman asserted to the correspondent of the Associated Press, is the fundamental feature of the allocution, which is considered the most important political utterance since the beginning of the present pontificate.

The Pope's expressed disapproval of the Fascist conception of the State and his condemnation of sporadic acts of violence against Catholics are considered by the Government as secondary details. The acts of violence, upon which the Pontiff lengthily dwelt, it was pointed out, are so definitely things of the past that the reference in the allocution to them came as a shock and surprise not only to the Government, but to both political and politico-ecclesiastical circles.

In view of the duce's prompt steps to nip in the bud any anti-Church manifestation and his unfailing policy of conciliation, the informant declared it was obvious that the Pope's true intention in criticizing the regime could be found in another paragraph of the allocution, namely:

"It seems that an obscure menace confirmed by clouds of suspicions, interferences and difficulties, hangs over the activities of the Catholic organizations for the most part concerning the youth of the 'Catholic action organization,' which is the apple of our eye. It seems that the education and formation of Christian youth which is an essential part of our mandate 'eundis doceta' is imperilled."

The Pope's remarks, it was stated, obviously refer to the strength of the Fascist Balilla and vanguard organizations which are intended to train boys between the ages of eight and eighteen years for their eventual entrance into the Fascist party or the black shirt militia.

The holy see fears, the informant declared, that these organizations in themselves are anti-religious and furthermore potential dangers to the containued existence of the various Catholic youth organizations, not-

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

MILLBROOK CONTINUATION SCHOOL.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 22.—An opening chorus, "O Come, All Ye Faithful," with the pupils of the Continuation School massed upon the stage, fittingly opened the annual entertainment under the auspices of the school, given in the Town Hall on Friday evening.

Byam's four-piece orchestra played a number of selections while the audience was gathering. The three front rows of seats on either side of the aisle were reserved for the pupils, and in spite of extremely cold weather, there was not a vacant seat in the hall when the programme began shortly after 8 p.m.

A pleasing effect was produced by the fact that the girls singing in the choruses wore white middies and dark skirts, with ties of the school colors, orange and black, while each boy wore a rosette of the same shades on the lapel of his coat. A large shield made of the colors, with the school motto, "Age Quod Agis," centred the front line of the group.

Mrs. Muir, who came from Toronto ten days previously to assist her daughter, Miss Shirley Muir, Principal of the school, with the training, was the musical director for the entertainment; Miss Bertha Lang was pianist; Mr. G. E. Burnham, cornetist, and Mr. Charles Thorndyke helped materially with the singing by supplying a good tenor.

A short play, "The Christmas Guest," for which "The Spirit of Yule" (Audrey Larmer) recited the prologue and epilogue, was the second number presented. The stage arrangement, with mantel and glowing "Yule logs," overhead ropings of deep green intertwined with red and pink roses and dark curtained background, was most effective.

The characters, in quaint old-time costumes, were seen grouped about the fire, discussing the possible advent of an angel visitor, and the gifts each would present, when a beggar maid (Jean Bothwell) enters and asks alms.

Warmly welcomed by the young folk who, upon learning that her journey was to a far country on a bitter night, bestow upon her the fur-lined shoes and coat, the purse, etc., they had intended for the angel. Suddenly the beggar seemed to assume a regal carriage, and lifted her hands in benediction, her parting blessing creating a warm, expectant thrill in her listeners' hearts.

Watching her as she passes on her way, a sudden blaze of light floods through the open door, and they know truly the Christmas angel had been their guest. The soft light produced by snuffing out the lighted candles when the play opens and by covering the footlights with red crepe paper, made the wide shaft of white light which poured in after the beggar left, all the brighter by contrast.

The other characters taking part in the sketch were: Rosamond (Ruth Thorndyke), Geoffrey (Edward Budd), Harold (Gordon Armstrong), Elinor (Jean Stinson), Francis (Marian Earle), Dame Margaret (Jean Bothwell), Bookholder (Clara Bonner).

Following this number was a very interesting feature of the programme, the presentation of diplomas, for which the graduates, 11 girls and 5 boys, were called to the platform. Rev. F. H. Howard made the presentation after briefly addressing the pupils, reminding them that though the intrinsic value of the diploma was small, its significance the recipients would hardly be able to compute.

Those receiving diplomas were: Mildred Brown, Agnes Breckenridge, Martha Bonner, Violet Bothwell, Hazel Armstrong, Margaret Howard, Elsie Spence and Amy Hunter. The others, though not covering the curriculum required, yet have definitely left the school and are counted graduates.

Equally interesting was the presentation if the "Dr. Norman Allen Scholarship," which is awarded to the boy having the highest all-round standing in the school each year, and this time was won by Kenneth Skitch.

Rev. Canon Allen, who attended Millbrook school in his boyhood days, and claimed the honor of being "the oldest pupil present," had very appropriately been asked to fill the position of chairman, and to him fell the pleasant duty of presenting the diploma and cheque. The rector is a brother of the late Dr. Allen whose widow four years ago endowed the school with the scholarship which has a value of $50.00 annually, and is for competition among the boy students only. Allen Pitt won it the first year, Ernest Burnham the next, Robert Shaw in 1925 and Kenneth Skitch this year, his fellow-pupils joinging heartily in singing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," at the conclusion of his neat speech of thanks.

The valedictory address was delivered by Miss Agnes Breckenridge, the pupil having the highest standing in the whole school last year, her clear enunciation and well rounded sentences calling forth a genuine and deserved applause.

Presentations from the pupils to Miss Muir, Mrs. Muir and Mr. H. Jordan followed, the first named receiving a big box of fine stationery; the musical director, a toilet case of French perfume with quaintly cut atomizers, and the other member of the teaching staff, who was business manager for the entertainment, being given a Duofold fountain pen.

Suitable reply was made by each, and two choruses by the pupils and graduates, "Dear Old High" and "Millbrook High School," were given with rousing enthusiasm. A solo and chorus, "The Bells of St. Mary's," Ruth Thorndyke singing the verses, and a brief address by Rev. John Riddle, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, preceded the closing number, a play, "Wardle's Christmas Party," from Charles Dickens' "Pickwick Papers."

The play was in three acts, and was particularly enjoyed by the audience. The cast included:

Emma—Eileen Armstrong.
Sam Weller—Dickson Hutchison.
Joe (the fat boy)—George Gray.
Mr. Wardle—Walter Sayles.
Mrs. Wardle—Marie Kenyon.
Samuel Pickwick — Kenneth Fallis.
Tracy Topman—Aubrey Todd.
Bob Sawyer—Eddie Nattrass.
Benjamin Allen—Donald Rutherford.
Arabella Allen — Marguerite Lang.
Augustus Snodgrass—Henry Lancashire.
Nathaniel Winkle—Cairns Lee.
Emily Wardle—Jean Fairbairn.
Waifs—Jack Byam, Jack Hutchison, Henry Gray, Percy Bingham, Gordon Armstrong, Gerald Raper, Mac Newton.
Ladies—Martha Lang, Margaret Armstrong.
Bookholder—Dorothy Crossley.

The old-fashioned costumes in this play were especially well reproduced, and in every case the characters took their parts with ease and in a manner that made very real the atmosphere which belongs to Dickens' inimitable story.

The first scene took place in Mr. Wardle's living room; the second showed the waifs singing their Christmas carols outside his hospitable home; and the final act depicted the Christmas party, with a graceful minuet as one of its leading features, at Mr. Wardle's house.

All the characters taking part in the programme were effectively massed upon the stage for the singing of the National Anthem.

CROARKIN FACES MURDER CHARGE

For the Slaying of Walter Schmith With Blacksmith's Hammer.

MISTREATED GIRLS.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—Five days after he beat six-year-old Walter Schmith with a blacksmith's hammer in the loft of a riding club, Harold Joseph Croarkin, 26, was indicted yesterday for murder. Since his surrender on Sunday, Croarkin, the son of a wealthy family, had been held in strict seclusion without a formal charge, but yesterday he was placed in the county jail.

Five witnesses, including the father of the dead boy and Dr. Jacob Goodman, coroner's physician, appeared before the grand jury.

The coroner's physician testified that the lad had not been mistreated and that testimony was accepted as bearing out Croarkin's confession that he slew the child in fear that little Walter would tell his parents that Croarkin had tried to force him to commit an act of degeneracy.

Croarkin was identified yesterday by six little girls as having made improper advances towards them within two months.

Croarkin has confessed that he mistreated three little girls and five boys, but he denied that any of the half dozen tots who confronted him yesterday were among his victims.

RINGLING DENIES SALE OF SHARES

For Controlling Interest of Madison Square Garden To Rickard.

NOT DISCUSSED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — In the midst of the hub-bub about the sale of controlling interests in Madison Square Garden, John Ringling has come forth with the following statement:

"I wish to state that I have not sold out my interest in Madison Square Garden and am one of the largest individual stockholders in the company and am chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Rickard and I are in thorough accord as to policy and have been at all times and we are working in perfect harmony.

"The statement that Mr. Rickard wanted to buy my share or that I wanted to buy his is entirely without foundation and nothing of that kind was ever thought of or discussed between us."

FOOD CANNED FOR 6 YEARS

ROTTERDAM, December 22. — Food that had been canned for six years was opened recently by a Dtch physician, Van Leersum, and found to be still fit for human consumption. It was meat hash, including onions and potatoes. The essential thing in canning according to Dr. Van Leersum, is to be sure that all air is exhausted from the can before sealing.

Competent to judge

There is no better way for you to learn the true value of commodities in general use than to read the advertisements day by day—regardless of whether or not you have any immediate intention of buying.

Those young housekeepers whose first experiences in marketing began in war-time have a fixed idea of high prices. Those of an older generation have an equally strong conviction that prices should be lower.

With the shifting changes of a rapidly moving world both prices and values are bound to fluctuate. A financier studies these trends with scrupulous care in published financial reports compiled by experts.

An intelligent housewife may similarly make herself a competent judge of values by studying each day's advertisements of the things she needs—just as the broker studies his stock list.

Then as she comes to buy she may do so with full confidence in her knowledge.

To stand the test of advertising, merchandise must be good

ITALIAN SAILORS RESCUE CREW OF SINKING SHIP

THREE HOURS' WORK.

Rescuers Make Three Attempts Before Succeeding.

GENOA, Italy, Dec. 22.—Another romance of the high seas was told yesterday when the Italian steamship Roma, carying 26 survivors of the 1,700-ton Italian barque Guarneri, arrived with the story of a heroic rescue during a furious storm in mid-Atlantic on December 17.

A radio message saying that the Guarneri, carrying 3,000 tons of marble to Rio de Janeiro, was in a sinking condition, with her masts gone, was picked up on the morning of the 17th, when the Roma was 150 miles distant from the stricken vessel. The British freighter Virfield also answered the call, but the commander was informed that the situation was in hand.

To this appeal the Roma rushed a message urging the captain of the Guarneri to stand by his ship. At 7 o'clock that evening, in a dense fog, the Roma sighted a flare on the Guarneri.

With the distance between the two ships cut to two miles, Captain Desposito of the Roma called for volunteers and almost the entire crew responded. Thirteen men were selected, manned Lifeboat No. 13, and set out over the stormy waters, heedless of superstition.

It took nearly three hours for the rescue boat to get away from the Roma because of torrential rains, high winds and a furious sea. Again and again the boat was almost overturned. The rescuers made two futile attempts to approach the sinking ship. On the third atetmpt they succeeded in reaching the ship and taking off the crew after tons of oil had been poured on the waters.

Proposed bridge to be constructed by the Cataract Development Company of Buffalo. The bridge shown above will be approximately 600 feet in length with a traffic width of 70 feet and will be solely for pedestrians and motor car traffic. The company erecting it is willing to go above the $4,000 000 mark to provide a beautiful structure. Its environment will be of the greatest interest to Canadians and strangers, situated as it will be adjacent to Niagara Falls, in the very centre of country rich in traditions of Canada. In this light it might be looked upon as the gateway to Canada.

WOULD DEPORT MANY CHINESE

U. S. Congressman Introduces Bill To This Effect.

AIMED AT TONGS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (United News).—Chop suey, Chinese laundry marks, and many of the Celestials themselves may be banished from the United States as things immical to the advance of Americanism.

Representative Miller, Republican, Washington, where they say Chinese cross the border in tank cars, introduced a bill today to deport all Chinese Tongmen as undesirable aliens.

"They are inimical to the good order and well-being of the United States," declared Congressmen Miller.

MANY CITIZENS ATTEND FUNERAL

presence of the Mayor and Council that the City of Peterborough has never tried to pay the debt which it owed, and I might suggest that it is not too late yet to partially pay this debt. He stood for right and duty, and was a public-minded citizen in the best and truest and highest sense of the word, but higher, abler and better than David Dumble the magistrate, stronger than David Dumble the citizen, was David Dumble the man. He was tenderhearted and most tolerable. He had his views but knew other men had their's also, and today he will be placed in a beautiful cemetery with his brother, his parents, his sisters and his wife. His remains go to the grave, but the memory of David Dumble will remain. God accept him; Christ receive him."

Rev. J. E. Todd

Mr. Tood spoke a few words on the loss the church had suffered. Although not an active member lately he had been the foremost in building and weaving together the George Street congregation. He was a man of singleness of purpose. "His weary days of waiting are over, he has fought a good fight, he has finished the course; he has kept the faith, and now is his coronation time. Our city, our country will be the poorer but Christ's church triumphant will be the richer."

The two hymns which Mr. Dumble liked so well were sung, "Abide With Me," and "Rock of Ages," and after the Benediction, J. H. Renwick played "The Dead March in Saul."

Six members of the Police Force acted as pall bearers. The Mayor and City Council and members of the local Bar Association were present in a body along with many other leaders in the public life of Peterborough.

HAND OF DEATH FALLS HEAVILY

Five People Called From Warsaw in Three Weeks.

MUCH SICKNESS.

WARSAW, Dec. 22.—Until recently the hand of death has spared this district, but within a trifle over three weeks there have been five deaths, each with an extra touch of sadness.

After being ill a short time with pneumonia, Mrs. Melville Crowe died, leaving three little children. On the following Monday Mr. Watts passed away, and the whole community feels his loss. In less than two weeks Mrs. Sneider was taken after a very short illness, and though a very quiet and unassuming woman, those who knew her, loved her. In four days her husband followed her, and on Friday, Mrs. Harry Little was taken. She too had pneumonia, and had been taken to the hospital. She is another young mother who has left two little children.

The funeral of the late Mr. Elgin Sneider took place on Thursday afternoon from the home, where on the previous Monday his wife had been taken. Rev. H. B. Herrington conducted the services. The same hymns were sung as at Mrs. Sneider's funeral, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Rock of Ages." The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Thomas Clements, Robert Somers, A. F. Choate, William Jackson, Robert Moore and John Rose.

Mrs. Joseph Gallagher and little Jean Watts, who were quite ill, are improving nicely.

Motorist Hands Over Car To Man He Knocked Down

LEICESTER, Eng., Dec. 22 (United Press). — A motorist named Allen was fined $2 here for bumping over a pedestrian named Gilbert. "Have you been compensated?" the court enquired of Gilbert.

"Yes," replied Gilbert, indicating Allen, "he gave me the car."

STEAMER BRINGS MILLIONS IN GOLD

Captain Fears No Harm Until He Approaches New York.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — A real treasure ship crept out of the fog on the North River yesterday and nosed into its berth at Pier 42, foot of Christopher Street.

She was the Essequibo of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, finishing a 6,000-mile trip from Valparaiso with $5,000,000 in gold bars and gold coin in her specie room consigned to the National Bank of Commerce in New York.

A century ago a fleet of warships would have accompanied the Essequibo. Such is the freedom of the seas nowadays that she did not even carry an extra gun.

The gold was escorted down to the pier from the office of the Banco Central de Chile in Valparaiso by Chilean cavalry and left in the charge of hearty, red-faced Captain F. E. Kite of the Essequibo, who declared: "If there is any pirating to be done, I'll do it myself."

Captain Kite did not begin to worry about the gold until he approached New York, and then he became anxious when the fog drifted down on him.

MANAGER NAMED FOR HUGE MERGER

G. H. Rennie Appointed President of Canadian Department Stores, Ltd.

G. H. Rennie, heretofore assistant general manager of the Robert Simpson Company, Ltd., has been appointed president and general manager of Canadian Department Stores Ltd., a recently formed merger of twenty-two large stores in the principal cities of Ontario. Mr. Rennie, who assumed his new duties this week, will have his head-quarters in Toronto. The Canadian Department Stores, Ltd., are very fortunate in securing a man having the ability and integrity of Mr. Rennie.

As a mark of esteem in which he is held by his former associates, Mr. Rennie was tendered a banquet on the occasion of his withdrawal from the Simpson company by operating heads of the firm and 150 departmental executives, when he was the recipient of a handsome hall clock.

The new executive head of Canadian Departmental Stores, Ltd, who has resided in Toronto for twenty-five years, received his early training with the firm of Thomas Kinnear and Company, the wholesale grocers.

After joining the J. Simpson Company as manager of the market, his rise in rank was rapid. Mr. Rennie is still a comparatively young man.

At the time the merger took place the constituent companies had an annual turn over of $10,000,000, and since then steady growth in business has taken place. Substantial increases in sales are reported by the individual stores this month.

The consolidation was in accordance with modern business methods, involving economy in operation and overhead, through expert buying and volume distribution. Department stores are located in the following places: Napanee, Belleville, Woodstock, Stratford, Chatham, Huntsville, Hanover, Sarnia, Ottawa, Brockville, Picton, Lindsay, Peterborough, Pembroke, Sudbury, North Bay, Midland, Port Arthur, Sault Ste Marie, St. Catharines, Brantford and Montreal.

HONOR VOLTA.

COMO, Italy, Dec. 22.— It is now nearly 100 years since the death of Volta, after whom the volt was named. It has been proposed to celebrate the centenary by an International Exhibition and Congress here sometime between May and October, 1927.

LADIES' AID MEET.

Of Trinity United Church Held Regular Meeting on Thursday.

OMEMEE, Dec. 22.—The Ladies' Aid of Trinity Church met on Thursday afternoon in the basement of the Church, for their regular monthly meeting. There was only a small attendance. After hearing the reports of the treasurer and secretary, correspondence was read as follows:

From Mrs. R. Carey, thanking the Society for a box of fruit during illness; from the treasurer of the Women's Department of the Ontario Prohibition Union expressing thanks for the contribution of $5.00 received last month.

It was decided to have the small shed erected at the back of the church, the contract to be given to Mr. Cyril Elliott.

The president reported that potted plants had been sent to Mrs. Douke, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. T. C. Ivory, Mrs. Nugent, Mrs. Potts, and Mr. W. H. Kennedy, all of whom will be shut in through illness or infirmity at the Christmas time. Fancy boxes containing fruit have been sent to Mrs. Glenny, Mr. Charles Rutherford and Mr. Joseph Sandy.

Other business included the final arrangements for the Christmas tree, which the Ladies' Aid provide for the Sunday School each year.

Santa Claus in Town

On Saturday evening, much excitement was caused among the children when it became known that Santa Claus was to make his first appearance in the village. About 8 o'clock, McPherson's bread truck came down King Street with Santa standing on the running board and only one cheer was necessary to attract a large crowd of followers to McPherson's store, where arrangements had been made for his arrival. Here, he proceeded to hand out numberless bags of peanuts which were quickly demolished by many eager children, and as quickly as he made his arrival did he make his hurried exit for other points.

On Christmas Eve he has promised to make a return trip to Omemee when he will call on the various stores.

Church Services

Special Christmas services will be observed in the churches on Sunday next, accompanied by special Christmas music. At Christ Church, a carol service will be held instead of the usual form of service. There will also be a service on Christmas morning at 10.30 o'clock.

"The Pals," an organized class of eleven girls in Trinity Sunday School, whose energetic teacher is Mrs. Harry Lamb, packed and sent to the Deaconess Home in Toronto this week, a bale of good cheer, containing a quilt, several pairs of mittens, picture books, dolls, a splendid assortment of daintily made doll clothes, and many other articles, which will no doubt bring joy to many less fortunate children living in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Corneil visited the former's brother, Mr. Roy Corneil at Manilla on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clemett, Messrs. Noble Wilburt and Miss Irene visited Lindsay friends on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Isaac Richardson of Millbrook renewed old acquaintances in town on Monday.

Mr. and Miss Elliott of Dunsford spent Sunday with their brother, Mr. Cyril Elliott.

Mrs. Harenden of Philadelphia is the guest of her cousin, Mr. Charles Ivory.

Mr. B. Middleton visited Peterborough on Tuesday.

F. G. Sandy, M.P.P., was in Toronto a couple of days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Seymour of Fairmount were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Bannon last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ford of Havelock visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ford, on Sunday.

Mr. Aubrey Adams of Peterborough was in town, Tuesday on business.

Rev. Thomas Brown of Lindsay attended the funeral of the late Thomas Atwell on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Allyn Fee visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Widdiss of Victoria Road on Sunday.

Rev. E. W. Rowland and Mr. F. G. Sandy attended a meeting of Presbytery in Queen Street Church, Lindsay, on Wednesday.

Friends of Mr. Jeffrey Widdiss will be sorry to hear of his illness. Miss Florence Rutherford is relieving him of his school duties at Fee's School.

Mr. Jack Hayes left last week to spend the Christmas vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hayes, of Hornpayne, New Ontario.

Mr. J. Harker of Belleville called on friends in Omemee on Tuesday.

Miss Genevieve Sandy attended the promenade of the Collegiate Institute in Lindsay on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Wellington Lowes, of Emily Township has sold his farm to Mr. William Fee.

'Dont's' For Christmas Don't Include Puddings

LONDON, December 22. — Canadian Press. — In a well-meaning desire to help people's digestion, the new Health Society has issued a list of Christmas "Don'ts.' They include:

Don't let the children stuff themselves all day long with candy. Dried fruits are much better for them.

Don't drink heavy vintage wines.

Don't indulge in cocktails.

Don't dance or indulge in active games until half an hour after the Christmas dinner.

The Society recommends that Christmas revellers "eat roast turkey, plum pudding and mince pies, and turn a deaf ear to food faddists."

RESCUE EFFORTS FATAL TO SISTER

Nun Dies of Pneumonia After Saving Children From Fire.

DEVIL'S LAKE, Nd., Dec. 22.—(United Press).—Sister Superior St. Alfred is dead here of pneumonia contracted on Monday when she helped lead 100 Indian children from a burning building on the Fort Totten Reservation. Sister St. Alfred had returned to the building to look for more children after she and other sisters of the Order of Gray Nuns had directed the 100 to safety. She was overcome by smoke and taken to the hospital, where she developed pneumonia.

Yuletide Greetings
TO ONE AND ALL

ONCE again, at the advent of another Yuletide, we ask our fellow citizens to accept G. J. Jopling and Sons' warmest greetings for a joyous Christmas and a New Year replete with health, wealth and happiness.

We also extend our warmest appreciation of that ever-growing patronage which has rewarded our best endeavors to excel, both in quality and service, as meat and poultry purveyors worthy of unqualified public confidence.

Coupled with the above expressions of good will and gratitude, your consideration is invited of our extensive preparations for supplying meat and poultry delights for the Christmas festive board. As is customary with us, the windows of our two stores are simply overflowing with luscious table birds—the very pick of this country for all-round goodness. In tempting array you can see them — delectable turkeys, the plumpest of plump geese, and dainty chicks and ducks, all of a superlative quality satisfying to the most epicurean taste.

But the interiors of our stores are also heavily laden with appetising fowl, together with an abundance of real Christmasy joints. For inspection will reveal an appealing display of prime juicy beef and delicate veal, both of traditional English sweetness, and bred by us specially for the holiday trade; to say nothing of that rich, pure fed pork and truly delicious lamb, which always find a ready welcome wherever the very best in viands is demanded.

When planning the Christmas dinner, remember that the pleasure of your table will be enhanced if Jopling's meat and fowl are included in the menu.

REPORTS ANNOY LAKEFIELD FOLK

Have Had Only Seven Cases of Contagious Disease This Fall.

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 22.—A considerable amount of indignation has been roused by the widespread report that Lakefield is in a state of quarantine for smallpox and diptheria. By order of the Medical Health Officer, all public and private gatherings are banned for two weeks and the schools are closed till after the New Year, but not because Lakefield is reeking with disease. Several cases have been reported and in order to prevent an epidemic, the authorities have taken strong preventive measures. Lakefield is using the ounce of prevention that is said to be worth a pound of cure. All being well, Christmas Eve will see the ban lifted, and Christmas festivities will proceed with their usual jollity. To the alarmist, who delights in sensation, the situation has afforded so much scope for imagination that weird stories have spread abroad without a shadow of foundation of truth to justify them. As a matter of fact there have only been four cases of smallpox and three of diptheria in the village, which in a village of more than 1,200 inhabitants hadly constitutes an epidemic.

At the beginning of the year a Sunday School will be organized in the Presbyterian Church. This was announced at the Sunday service and plans were discussed by the Elders and Board of Management.

Rev. L. M. Wesley and Rev. William Spencer exchanged pulpits on Sunday morning last.

Lakefield Rink

Work has been commenced at flooding the rink for the season, which usually begins during the Christmas holidays. The zero weather is conductive to making ice rapidly and in a short time(weather permitting) the rink will resume its old place as Lakefield's "great playhouse," the rendezvous of old and young.

Curling

The meeting of the curling club for rinks for the coming season has been postponed till after Christmas. There is a splendid prospect for the season as a large number have already signed up, and more will do so.

Hockey

At a meeting of the Lakefield Hockey Association held on Tuesday night, it was decided to form a district league as usual and arrange for games for the season. The attendance was small, but the general impression was that the league had been successful in encouraging amateur sport and was an advantage to the community. The more definite arrangements will be made at a subsequent meeting.

SPLENDID CONCERT AT CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27.—Large numbers attended the concert given by the Northumberland Regiment Band on Sunday evening in the Regent Theatre.

Major J. M. Bygott was chairman for the evening and on behalf of the Band extended a hearty welcome to all present. Mr. Bygott spoke briefly on the death of the late Bandmaster, Richard Cowell, and of the excellent service and talent he had given to the Campbellford public while a resident of town. The Band played a Memorial March, "Abide With Me" in memoriam.

The following programme, under the capable leadership of Mr. Pearson, was then rendered by the band:

March, "Crisis."

Overture, "Bridal Rose."

Serenade, "Twilight on the Mountains" by Mr. L. J. Elliott.

Mr. Eliott gave two monologues for encores; accompanist, Mr. Pearson, "The Bridge of Sighs", and "La Rosa."

March, "Colonel Bogey."

Overture, "Arcadia."

Intermezzo, "Barcarolle."

Selection, "Airs from the Opera."

March "Gardes de Corps."

Hymn, "Abide With Me"

Mapor Bygott then spoke a few words in closing. On behalf of the band he thanked the audience for their kind attention and felt sure that all present appreciated the efforts of Bandmaster Pearson and the Band in giving the public these musical evenings. Hearty thanks were extended to Captain Hyland for his generosity in providing the hall for these entertainments.

OBITUARY.

MRS. MARY JACKMAN.

There passed peacefully away this morning at the residence of her son-in-law, A. Wilson, Young's Point, Mrs. Mary Jackman, in her 80th year.

She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Mrs. A. Wilson, Young's Point, Mrs. William Ayott of Clydesdale, and one son, George, of Lakefield.

The funeral will be held on Friday, at 1.30, from the residence of A. Wilson to St. John's church, Lakefield, with interment in Hillside cemetery.

RICHARD COWELL.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 22. — Citizens of Campbellford were grieved to hear of the death of Richard Cowell, A.T.C.M., which took place on Saturday evening at his home in Carleton Place. The late Mr. Cowell was organist of St. John's Church for over five years, and leaves many Campbellford friends who mourn his death.

About eight months ago he removed to Carleton Place, where he had accepted a similar position as organist of the United Church, and although able to fill his position for only a few months, made many staunch friends.

Mr. Cowell was a man of impeachable character, kind and genial in disposition, and of noble Christian character, and as a musician, could capably fill any position.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, one son Jack, who is on the staff of the Hydro in Campbellford, and three daughters: Hilda, R.N., of New York; Millie and Norah at home. One daughter, Peggy, died several years ago in Wingham, where Mr. Cowell will be buried.

HOPE FOR PEACE WITH CHURCH

The Government, on the other hand, is insistent that the Fascist and Church organizations for the youth can continue to co-exist amiably provided the former will scrupulously steer clear of religion and the latter of politics. To dispel the holy see's fears, Mussolini intends to hasten the publication of the new statutes of the Balilla to prove that there is no foundation for alarm, but beyond doing this, it is avowed, the Government does not intend to recede in the slightest from its policy of controlling the education of the youth, which it considers to be a fundamental right provided by the Fascist conceptions "everything in the State, everything for the State, nothing outside the State."

The issue which was brought to a head yesterday has been brewing for nearly a year and has been marked on several occasions by open clashes. The International Congress of Catholic Boy Scouts which was to be held in Rome last summer had to be called off after clashes between the factions, which went so far as the destruction of the offices of the local headquarters in provincial cities.

The Fascists objected to the Catholic organizations, first because they were essentially international and, second, because, it is claimed, in many parts of Italy they are still allied with the popular party adherents who are anti-Fascist. The Catholics maintain that the accusation of meddling in politics has been a pretext for an attempt to interfere with or destroy their organizations, which, they assert, being purely religious, should not owe allegiance to any political or State power.

SALES AND BAZAARS

AT PONTYPOOL.

PONTYPOOL, December 22. — Probably the best bazaar ever held in connection with the Ladies' Aid was held in the basement of the United church on Friday. The bazaar commenced at 3.30 p.m. Those in charge of the booths were:

Product booth: Mrs H Richardson, Mrs E Cain.

Candy booth: Miss H Aldread, and Miss Ruth.

Fish pond: Miss Catherine Terrill, Richardsom

Fancy work: Mrs Terrill and Mrs A. Fowler.

Cashier: Mrs George Begg.

Mrs. Wilder, president of the Ladies' Aid, assisted by the rest of the ladies, took charge of the lunch, which was daintily served in cafeteria style, from 5 till 7 p.m.

After lunch several quilts and other articles were auctioned by Mr. Bert Richardson, Deputy Reeve of Manvers.

This was followed by a concert, Rev. A. J. Terrill, being the chairman.

The programem consisted of singing by Mrs. Parker and family; musical readings by Miss Mareitta Marvin; solos by Mrs. George Wilder and Miss Iva Shaw; readings by Miss Lily Barwell, and community singing. The proceeds amounted to over $115, and the ladies are to be congratulated on their success.

The auction sale at Mr. Thomas Cowling's home was largely attended and good prices were secured for both machinery and stock.

Mr. Cowling has sold his farm to Mr. H. Hudson and will move to his residence at Manvers station.

L.O.L. held their regular meeting on Monday night. Two candidates were initiated in the Orange degree. The next meeting on Monday Dec. 27th. Election of officers, initiations, followed by lunch.

R. B. PRECEPTORY ELECTS OFFICERS

J. A. Jeffs Preceptor of Golgatha Chapter of Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 22. — The Royal Black Preceptory, Golgotha No. 381, held their annual meeting and election of officers on Monday evening, Dec. 20. There was a large attendance of members, and the following officers were elected:

Immediate Past Preceptor—W. I. Stillman.

Preceptor—J. A. Jeffs.

Deputy Preceptor—W. J. West.

Chaplain—J. I. Free, Past Preceptor.

Registrar—J. I. Adams, Past Preceptor.

Treasurer—E. Haig.

1st Lecturer—Ray Free.

2nd Lecturer—E. J. Webber.

1st Censorer—R. J. Bibby, Past Preceptor.

2nd Censorer—J. A. Anderson.

Preceptor—Addison McDonald.

Standard Bearers—Robert Haig, Robert A. Lynn.

Past Preceptor Harold Brown occupied the chair and duly installed the newly-elected officers, and all members look forward to the best year Golgotha Preceptory has enjoyed for some time.

A sumptuous supper was served, and the usual toasts were indulged in.

The following letter of sympathy was extended to Past Preceptor W. I. Stillman:

Dear Sir Knight,—Your Knights of Golgotha No. 381 have not forgotten the calamity that overtook you, nor the experiences through which you have passed.

Sordid indeed, and cold of heart would we seem did we allow any further time to elapse before expressing to you, even though all too inadequately, our feelings of fraternal sympathy.

While it seemed to us a tragic tale, it was doubly so to you, and the loss to you in a business way is beyond all calculation.

Through all this sorrow and loss your Sir Knights have sympathized with you very deeply; but we rejoice to find you again on our streets. Our Christian sympathy for you, in what you have suffered and still do suffer is none the less real, now that joy has joined it.

They are fellow-citizens within the kingdom of our hearts.

May we who know and love you so well, now be permitted to recall a passage in the Holy Writ? It is one that you must have long ago proved true: 'They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength.' Such waiting is a condition of all true rebuilding of our energies and of all renewed hope.

Fraternally,

P.P. J. I. Adams, Registrar.

P.P. H. Brown.

P.P. R. J. Bibby.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, MILLBROOK.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 22.—The forty-first anniversary of St. Thomas' church was observed on Sunday, the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, having charge of the morning worship and his assistant, Rev. P. C. Howard, preaching the sermon at night

The special music for the day included solos by Mrs. (Rev.) Howard, who sang "The Holy City" at the morning service, and by Mrs. W. McKee Bingham whose selection in the evening was "Abide with Me", both numbers being much enjoyed.

The present church, which is attractively situated and beautiful in its interior furnishings, replaced a red brick building, the first Anglican church in the village. When the latter became too small for the growing congregation the decision was pull it down, rather than enlarge its capacity, and build on the same site the white brick edifice, larger in size and in design, the formal opening taking place on December 16, 1885.

It is rather a curious coincidence that two men lost their lives, through the scaffolding giving way, when the steeples of both the Anglican and the present United church were in course of erection. A Mr. Beatty met with the fatal fall from St. Thomas' church, and Mr. William Orr from what was then the Methodist place of worship.

The parish of Millbrook and Cavan has the unique record of having had only three rectors in its long history of over 107 years, the centenary being observed in 1919. Rev. Samuel Armour (1833-53) was the first to hold this office, Venerable Archdeacon Allen, succeeding him and celebrating his diamond jubileee during the time he had the spiritual oversight of the parish; his son, Rev William Cartwright Allen, who is Canon of St Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, followed his father and celebrated the Goldeen Jubilee of his ordination to the ministry on June 27, 1925.

Rev. Mr. Thompson, an English missionary, was the first clergyman of any denomination in the township, and had the leadership in things spiritual before Rev. Mr. Armour's time. Coming out under Church of England auspices, Mr. Thompson built the first church in the parish, a log building, which as far as can be recalled was situated on the corner of the lot next the road, below where Cavanville school now stands. Struck by lightning and burned it was replaced by a frame church on the hill and this in turn being torn down, the present St. John's church was built and came into use in 1865.

Before any Anglican church was built in the village, worshippers from here walked, or drove to the frame church which used to stand in the cemetery on the Fourth Line, Cavan, and which has since been replaced by the mortuary chapel Before even the frame church was erected services were held in the home of Mr. John D. Armstrong, a pioneer settler who came from Ireland in 1818, grandfather of Mrs. T. B. Collins and Miss Annie Armstrong, of Millbrook.

Preaching from the unusual text, 'Possess thou the west" (Deuteronomy 33:23), on Sunday evening, Rev. Mr. Howard referred to the trans-Atlantic movement of the peoples of Europe westward to America, and the people from the east of this continent moving westward as well, adding "we are all moving from the sunrise of our birth, slowly, definitely, to the sunset of the grave. Each day marks a milestone farther from our starting-point, and nearer to our destination. O Christian, have you on your journey a worthy Guide Who will take you surely in to the 'land of possession' beond?"

Life was pictured as an adventure, with faith as an absolute essential, with opportunities presented, and choices thrust upon us daily. 'Time is lessening the opportunities, and there are always the assaults of the enemy, but if we tread the way with Him, who has trodden it before, we shall come safely to the end of the way."

"On this anniversary day does there come a great call to earnestness, reverence, and devotion? The mind travels back and doubtless there is a realization of the difference between what has been builded in the moral life of the community during these forty-one years, and what God would have had us build."

"Are we keeping right on the trail of our church journey, going forward with full purpose of heart to possess our heritage 'in the west'? Are we to hand on the next generation depleted heritage, barren of fervor, and decreased in attendance? We have a duty which we cannot evade, and still the golden opportunity is ours to build, and grow, and possess."

The special Christmas services in connection with St Thomas' church will be held next Sunday, December 26 with the Christmas carols sung at the evening worship. On Christmas Day there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 and 11 a.m.

NO CLUES FOUND OF TWO BANDITS

Robbers of Chatham Taxi Driver Make Good Their Escape.

TAKE HIS CAR.

CHATHAM, Ont., Dec. 22—County police last night were without any valuable clues as to identity of the two men who, at an early hour yesterday morning, held up William Hughes, taxicab driver, and relieved him of his earnings amounting to approximately sixty dollars, and his gold watch and then drove away in his car.

Hughes was on night duty and had just left two passengers at the C.N.R. depot at 1.20 a.m. when he was hailed by a man who contracted with him for a trip to Blenheim. They picked up another man on starting the trip. A few miles from the city one of the men produced a revolver. They then blindfolded the taxi driver, secured his wrists with a piece of rope and rifled his pockets. They left him near Cedar Springs, one remarking that he would find his car in Windsor

CHRISTMAS POSTER LOCAL BOARDINGS

Birth of Christ Depicted as Part of National Programme.

The spirit of Christmas is on us and the contagion of giving has seized us. Bustling shoppers, appealing advertisements in the newspapers, enticing window displays all proclaim the spirit of good will, of bearing gifts, of celebrating our oldest anniversary. And, attune to this feeling that pervades us all, one of our local concerns, Hodgson and Willison, as part of a huge nation wide program has posted the now famous Nativity poster on selected poster panels belonging to the Company

This poster which has been used for over a decade to contribute to the better appreciation of Christendom's holiday depicts the birth of Christ, relating that story with graphic and sincere directness.

Mrs. Hodgson, lady member of the Hodgson and Willison Company, stated that some seventy millions of people would see this poster during the month of December. "When one recalls", said Mrs. Hodgson, "how some of the earliest Christian teaching was effected through very crude Bible pictures, one appreciates how profoundly a reproduction of such a picture as this will even today hold of millions of people. If from the standpoint of pattern, the pictorial value of this performance may be somewhat overcrowded, the balance has been remarkably well arranged and the interest has been successfully centered in the Mother and Child. We are attempting nothing new in the presentation of this poster. In the very earliest days before the printing press was known, religious messages, let us even use the Websterian definition of advertising, was accomplished by a variety of exalted symbols. In the 17th century one finds numberless examples of public pronouncements of religious opinions Sculptures, stained glass, and architecture—all told a pictorial story to a people who could not read. The church directed all the arts to its service. At the same time dramatic pageantry developed. In England we had the miracle plays and mystery plays. In Germany the same spirit gave us the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

"Today we with some other 15,000 other outdoor advertising companies, endeavor to keep alive this dominant spirit of a people by enabling this basic feeling to find pictorial expression through the medium of posters on our poster panels. There never has been a time when the church as the fundamental exponent of a spiritual message has had so much competition from the innumerable material interests which our complex civilization has built up If our company can help along with the newspapers and other forms of advertising, to keep the church and its message in the foreground, we feel amply repaid in the knowledge of having made some contribution, however small."

WEST WILL BE BIG CUSTOMER IN 1927

Roy D. Kerby, General Manager Durant Motors of Canada, Limited Is Optimistic After Extensive Business Trip.

"Business conditions appear to be very good in the West and particularly the automobile business," says Roy D. Kerby, General Manager Durant Motors of Canada, Limited, who has just returned to Toronto.

Mr. Kerby spent several weeks in the West, visiting the important centres and reports that not only is the new car situation on a sound basis but also that the dealers have very few used cars on hand.

With low stocks and every prospect for a demand for cars in the spring, he looks for a substantial volume of business from the prairies.

"Saskatchewan may lead the three provinces in percentage of increased sales owing to the fine harvest there," he said, "but whether this proves the case or not, I feel sure that Western Canada, generally speaking, will be a big customer for the East during 1927."

WASP STING FATAL.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Stung by a wasp, William Collinson, 46, of Tinsley, Sheffield, developed serious complications and died in 18 hours, despite every medical attention.

HOME FROM ABROAD

Dr. Frank Crane whose daily editorial essays appear in this paper has returned to the United States after a season abroad with his family. Most of his time has been spent in France in the past months, but he did find time to visit Italy, and in the picture he is shown in front of the Cathedral of The Duomo in Florence.

BOMB EXPLOSION SAVES PRESIDENT

Man Waiting For Peruvian Chief Executive Killed While Burying It.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 22.—A great explosion was felt in the heart of the city early Saturday morning. Upon investigation, it was found that the explosion had taken place in the main square in front of the cathedral. The headless body of a man was lying there, near a palm tree; the head had been thrown on to the cathedral steps.

Part of the tree was burned.

Information of the happening was withheld until the police officials announced that everything pointed to a frustrated attempt against the life of President Leguia.

The President usually returns to the palace between midnight and one in the morning, but that night he had not gone out. It is deduced by the police that the man whose body was found carried a bomb, and realizing that his wait for the President was fruitless, decided to bury it in the process of which the bomb exploded.

All that is known of the bomb carrier is that he had served in the army under the name of Narciso Huanca, and was a resident of the interior country.

ITALIAN 'GHOST' ARMY DESERTER

Has Lived in Hiding While "Widow" Drew Pension For Death.

FOR EIGHT YEARS.

ANCONA, Italy, Dec. 22. — For eight years Nazzareno Ragni played the ghost in his little home town, Morro D'Alba, near Ancona. As a matter of fact, Ragni has been registered as dead by the Italian War Office all that time. "Killed in action" was his official epitaph, and his widow drew her war pension regularly.

Nobody in the neighborhood dreamed of linking Ragni with the "ghost" who used to be seen on moonlight nights by young men going home after a jolly evening or by belated housewives and farmers.

But with the general revival of police supervision, which is now fashionable, the Carabinieri started to hunt the almost homeless ghost of Morro D'Alba. The ghost, given chase, fell into a ditch and could not get up again. A feminine voice answered the Carabinieri, who pulled out a drenched and most human figure in woman's clothing. But surprise was great when the "ghost" confessed he was Ragni, "killed in action."

He confessed to having deserted in 1918 by the simple plan of vanishing from sight at the end of five days' home furlough. The "widow" managed to feed him and hide him in their cottage when the weather was bad. At other times he hid in the wood and roof for eight years. Thanks to the "widow's" pension, they were able to rub along very well. Both were arrested.

SPANIARDS AWAIT CHRISTMAS DRAW

Suspense Ends To-day as National Lottery Winner Is Picked.

MADRID, Dec. 22. — (United Press.) — Millions of dollars in Christmas prize money was released for distribution to-day while all Spain waited enthralled with suspense during the annual drawing for the great State lottery, whose first prize amounted to approximately $2,250,000. Ticket No. 17,229 won this year, as an orphaned child from a local institution manipulated two bowls that wto by two dropped numbered discs which determined the prize winners.

The Spanish government received approximately $5,000,000 as its share on this year's lottery.

Shaw States Landlords Only Gainers By Christmas

LONDON, December 22 — Canadian Press. — George Bernard Shaw, the sprightly British dramatist, who recently was awarded the Nobel prize for literature, for 1925, thinks that Christmas should be abolished.

Writing in the New Leader, Shaw says: It has become an unbearable nuisance, but the difficulty is to draft a bill making the celebration of Christmas a criminal act and compensating the shopkeepers, who are just enabled by the Christmas trade to pay their rents, not to mention all the other people who make money out of it, and who do not know that the landlords pocket it all in the long run."

FOURTEEN DIE IN ACCIDENTS

FIVE ASPHYXIATED.

HUNTINGDON, W.Va., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press)—Four men were reported missing and were believed to have been drowned to-day when the centre span of the Midland Atlantic bridge over the big Sandy River at Catlettsburg, Ky., collapsed. Three other men working on the bridge which is under construction, were removed to the hospital, one in critical condition.

Floods Kill Five

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press)—Rapid swirling and rising waters in Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee have taken a toll of five lives and caused unestimated property damage.

Five Asphyxiated

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press)—Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Ayre, were found dead by gas asphyxiation today. There was but a spark of life left in the mother, while the father of the family also was suffering from the gas.

S. A. ACTIVITIES IN MANY FIELDS

Workers Are Busy At All Kinds of Christmas Effort.

PAYING VISITS.

Christmas week is a big time in local salvation Army circles, Adjt. Ham and his assistants having prepared between 50 and 60 baskets for distribution. The list of families to receive these was taken by the Adjutant to the Relief Officer and a check up disclosed that only two of them were on their lists.

Ladies of the League of Mercy have visited the hospitals, the Protestant Home, and the jail, with candy, small gifts and Christmas War Cries, while Adjutant Ham and 'Dad' Edmondson, went out to the House of Refuge, with similar gifts, and held a short service. The adjutant states that the old people enjoyed the service very much, and that he was surprised to hear that no clergymen had visited them for some months.

Some of the toys repaired by the Boy Scouts have been allotted to the Army, while boxes have been placed in some of the stores for contributions.

Mr. Fletcher has provided tickets for a special show at the Capitol, while other gifts have been received.

One lady offered four chickens on condition that the Army would kill and pick them. This condition will be met.

The band is also busy, being engaged in its annual serenading tour of the city.

Lord's Day Alliance Answers Protests From Hamilton.

FREE RINKS OPEN.

TORONTO, December 22. Canadian Press.—There is no law against skating on Sunday nor has the Lord's Day Alliance taken any steps to prevent it, Rev. Dr. W. M. Rochester, the former secretary of the Alliance, stated to-day in connection with the protests by Hamilton clergymen over the action of the Hamilton Parks Boards, in giving official sanction to Sunday skating. Rev. Dr. Rochester pointed out, however, that skating on Sundays, in commercial rinks, where an admission fee is charged, is not permitted by law in Ontario municipalities.

Price Trend Uncertain On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press) — Price movements again lacked uniformity in to-day's stock market. With the heaviness of the rails and the strength of the motors and public utilities as the contrasting features. Trading was in fairly heavy volume, despite the stiffer call money rates and the departure of many traders for extended holiday trips.

The day's new developments were largely constructive, with reports of record breaking holiday trade. A new series of "Christmas dividends" attracting the most attention. The weekly stel trade reviews reported further slackening in demand, but this was regarded as seasonal. Heaviness of some of the standard rails was atributed to the official denial of dividend rumors concerning some of the large roads, and the publication of a few poor November earnings statements. Despite the general reactionary trend in this group, St. Louis and San Francisco common and preferred were marked up to new high levels for the year while Erie first preferred touched the highest price in a decade. The uying of the motors centred largely in General Motors, Nash and Hudson, being based on expectations of increased business through the sale of new models to be introduced at the New York Automobile Show next month.

Mining Market Weak Volume Of Trading Less

TORONTO, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press.)—Weakness set in on the standard mining exchange this morning, with a decrease in the volume of trading from yesterday. Sales, however, were more than six hundred thousand shares. Laval, Quebec, losing two at 34 1-2, and Duprat, down two at 29, were leaders in activitiy. Another weaker Quebec stock was Noranda, down 25 at 23.15. Teck Hughes eased three at 4.98 and Nipissing 20 at 8.25. Area advanced two at 82.

B. C. Fishing Leads Drop With Large Loss To-day

TORONTO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—British Columbia Fishing overshadowed all issues on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Fishing sold down, with only temporary rallies, to a low of 86 on the last dip, recovering to 88 3-4 at noon for a net loss of 4¼ points. The turnover come close to six thousand shares. Other stocks moved individually but there was an undertone of weakness throughout the list. Industrial Alcohol sold down 2 1-8 at 28 5-8 in heavy trading, and Noranda Mines lost 35 at 23.05. Abitibi at 88 and Atlantic Sugar at 28 7-8, were fractionally lower. Gooderham and Worts gave an individual exhibition of strength, reaching 45½ and closing at 44½, a point and three-eighths higher than yesterday.

Wheat Opens Lower But Buying Causes Gain

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — Largely because of the Government report showing that domestic winter wheat seeding had been extended, wheat values underwent an early downturn to-day. On the declines in price, however, wheat ran into good buying. Starting at ¼ to 3-4 cent off, wheat recovered in some cases to above yesterday's finish, but then sagged lower than before. Corn and oats were also easier, corn opening 3-8 to 3-4 down and displaying little power to re-act. Provisions held steady.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 142 3-8; May, 141 3-8. Corn—December, 74½; May, 83¼. Oats, December 46½; May 50 7-8.

CHANGES MADE IN CAR LICENSES

Some Fees Have Been Reduced—Two Purpose Vehicles Changed.

MARKERS NOT HERE.

There are a number of changes in regards to motor licenses for the year 1927. The license fee of all passenger cars has dropped $5.00, which means a $9.00 license fee for a Ford.

There is also a change in the two purpose or convertible vehicles. They are now classed as two purpose vehicles and special markers are to be issued, the number being prefixed by the letter "X" and the fees for these cars will be the same as that for commercial vehicles.

The local branch issuer, Frank G. Stinson, is now permitted to issue transfers, for which the fee is $2.00. No fee is required if the car is purchased by a licensed dealer who holds the same car for sale. Permit cards this year are double the size of last year, the extra space being for transfers. No transfer can be recorded unless the permit card is properly filled out and returned to the license issuer.

There is little change in the license requirement for trucks this years, except in the case of the truck with 14 inch tire and 14,600 pounds gross. The fee last year for this truck was $70 for pneumatic tires and $77 for whole or in part solid tires. The prices remain the same as last year, but the gross rating has been reduced to 14,000 pounds.

The lowest truck license fee is $16 for a 3,000 pound gross rating three and half inch pneumatic tire, and the highest fee is $130 for 20,000 pounds gross rating 14 inch solid tire.

The lowest non-commercial car fee is $9.00 for 4 cylinder motors of 25 h.p. or less. The highest fee is $36 for an 3 to 12 cylinder motor with more than 50 h.p.

The new license plates at present have not arrived, but they are expected by January 1st.

In the Saturday issue of the Toronto "Telegram," the following item appears in the theatrical section: "Charming Marion May Perry, who graduated from the Margaret Eaton School of Dramatics, having studied under Bertram Forsythe, has been selected by Vaughan Glaser to form one of his chorus for the Christmas pantomime. Miss Perry appeared with the Irvine Players in New York City a year and a half ago, and has risen steadily since." Miss Perry, who went to Toronto a short time ago, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Perry, Brock Street.

The many friends of Mr. Homer Borland will be pleased to learn that at the recent examinations of the Ontario College of Pharmacy at Toronto, he was successful in obtaining first-class honors.

An efficiency expert has come to the conclusion that the worst workers are widows and fat men and that the most efficient are confirmed spinsters and men who are either tall and wiry or of small stature.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1926

Mercury, the Sun and Mars are in benefic aspect, according to astrology. This is a day of rarely fortunate planetary influences.

When the stars smile on Earth it is a time for pushing all one's best interests, financial and social.

It is pre-eminently a day on which to send messages and greetings to friends. There should be a decided stimulation of mind and heart while this configuration prevails.

Under this rule it is held that there is a special benefit conveyed in the presentation of gifts.

It is supposed to be peculiarly lucky to offer gifts of money under this direction of the stars. Both he who gives and he who receives is blessed.

There is a sign of good luck for association with persons of power and high station while this aspect prevails.

All those who occupy positions in the Sun are supposed to have added benefits today.

There is a sign of fair fortune for engineers, surgeons and all who are concerned with constructive work, whether it be bridges or health.

To the men who are distinctly virile and forceful the coming year is to be wonderfully profitable, the seers declare.

Increase of the men who belong to the less masculine types has marked a transition period, the seers explain, and now when there are to be events of tremendous significance a domination of power is necessary.

A stabilizing of forces is to mark 27, it is prophesied, and much that abnormal in what we call civilization will be eliminated.

Thrift is to be widely practiced in the new year, it is foretold, and women will lead in campaigns to prevent waste.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of exactions and perplexities, but they will be easily overcome. Good fortune is indicated. Big ambitions are to be realized.

Children born on this day probably will be generous, affectionate and fond of all the good things in the material world.

JACK FROST, BEAUTY DOCTOR

Winter beauty begins with being comfortably dressed.

BY NINON

For NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The whole philosophy of being beautiful or of looking beautiful, which is the real trick, is to work with rather than against the weather.

Every season makes its contribution to beauty, and takes its toll as well unless we guard against it.

Take, for instance, this season of ice and snow that is settling down upon us. It can mean cold feet, chapped hands, a nutmeg complexion and the mottled color effect so appropriate for the sausage and so disadvantageous to any woman younger than 100—or it can mean bright eyes, hair that is alive and lustrous, a complexion that won't rub off and a vitality that is positively compelling.

It's all up to the individual whether she makes Jack Frost her beauty agent or her arch foe.

Beauty Standards Change.

While it isn't so fashionable to spend the winter in the north, it is a very wise course from the point of view of health and beauty.

You must, of course, realize that standards of beauty change with the season. Your winter ideal is sturdier, more colorful and more alive.

So, leading up to this subject of beauty at zero, let me begin with externals. You can't be beautiful if you look frozen to death. You must suggest a warmth and comfort that defies the thermometer. Contradictions and paradoxes always attract.

So provide yourself with sufficient protection from the cold. No, I am not suggesting red flannels. With our modern system of ventilation I am quite in sympathy with silk undies, and silk hosiery, if you like. For in rooms that are from 70 to 80 degrees, they are quite adequate.

But your outer garments must be warm. Your coat, whether of fur or wool must be wind-proof, and so that you can be comfortable on the coldest day. Whereas in some cases when comfort and style clash I advise a compromise, I believe that the first essential of the winter coat should be warmth and protection, and that godets and gadgets should get second consideration.

The prejudice against the galosh has changed to a whole-hearted approbation. It is no longer considered smart to go about with wet shoes and mudstained stockings, whereas it is definitely swagger to appear in arctics.

If your leg cannot stand the galosh—well, it should be reduced until it can, and we will take up that problem later.

Wool stockings are purely up to you and your conscience. Those thin layers of wool that may be worn under the silk stockings on very chilly days seem to me to offer a very comfortable substitute.

So the first beauty hint is to provide yourself with adequate protection from the weather, so that you can get out in it and enjoy skating, skiing, tobogganning and all the winter sports. Winter is a great season if you attack it right.

The next important consideration is your diet. It takes considerable more bodily energy to keep the body going in January than it does in July. You need more substantial food. The tendency is to eat too much meat, potatoes, bread and sweets, and to neglect the vegetables, salads and fruits you so eagerly ordered in the summer.

Don't Forget Exercise.

However, vegetables and fruit are just as necessary to your bodily health. So begin your day with orange juice, grapefruit, stewed prunes or any fruit that is your particular delight, and don't consider that ham and eggs are adequate without it.

For luncheon and for dinner, don't forget the excellent vitamine content of carrots, turnips, cabbages and squashes and the cheaper vegetables, when such hothouse delicacies as lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes become as high priced as caviar.

Of course you must sell yourself on the idea that the whole secret of beauty is exercise and proper diet, and a good frame of mind. These are the cornerstones of health as well. If you are happy and in fine physical condition you are almost immune from colds, chaps and the common winter ailments.

Specific difficulties of the winter and how to treat them will be taken up in later articles.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

The agate is the talismanic stone for today and the acquamarine exercises its good offices for those who were born on some anniversary of this day. No better stone than the agate can be chosen to accompany one on a journey, since it insures a pleasant trip, good accommodations and profitable returns.

Violet is today's lucky color. It exerts a soothing influence on its wearer, and should be worn by those who are nervous or emotional.

The chrysanthemum is today's lucky flower.

A. The Blue Nose Skipper is the nickname given to the Nova Scotia seamen who man the fishing and other craft that ply the Atlantic—the men "to who no land was distant, to whom no sea was barred." Joseph Howe wrote of them:

Every depth from the Banks of St. Lawrence were tried
And we care not though round Labrador we may roam
Or sweep on the strength of old Fundy's tide.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

LIGHT AND AIYR

By Alma Whitaker.

If I seem to be all up in the air for a few days, please bear with me. You see, I flew 1500 miles this week in about 350 mile stretches. I have been gazing down upon the world from lofty heights.

It is getting quite common to travel by airplane. So I just had to have the experience. Otherwise how could I ever hope to become a "remarkable old lady" some day and tell how I had travelled in everything from ox-wagons to airplanes?

And it is exciting to leave the air field at 7.30 a.m. and pass a train en route that left at 5 the afternoon before and won't arrive at the same destination until a day after we do! And to dash across portions of four states in something under six and a half hours.

Of course I felt a bit heroic. I was careful to leave all my affairs in good order and outline a nice little obituary notice for my newspaper, hinting what I would prefer them to say about me, if I did not come back.

They allowed me twenty-five pounds of baggage, and weighed me. Then I had to sign a "release," by which they would not have to pay my heirs more than $100 if anything awkward happened. They filled my cars with cotton, because the noise of the whirring plane is deafening, and fittied a tight leather cap over my head, equipped with goggles, so that I could keep my hair on in the wind.

My first real qualm came when they told me I must wear pants because the parachute could be more easily adjusted on my person that way. That parachute—ugh (one sits on it and straps attach it round the thighs) and a sort of harness is strapped to one's shoulders and round one's chest. There is a ring at the left side, upon which much depends.

"Of course, you won't need it," they assured me, "but just in case of an emergency, be sure you are clear of the plane after you have jumped before you pull this ring, which releases the parachute." Oh, ah!

But once the propeller started up and we were dashing across the field, finally rising gracefully into the air, I knew no more fear. And, incidentally, I never for an instant needed the thoughtful little box they provided me with which takes the place of the "Basin, stewardess, quick!" on board ship. That plane was far steadier than any ship I ever travelled in. And it was difficult to believe we were travelling at the rate of over 100 miles an hour because we were so high up and there was nothing to guage our speed by.

The pilot enhanced that trip considerably. He knew and loved every inch of the way. Of course talking was out of the question, so he would wiggle the plane to attract my attention and pass me cute little notes (I was seated in front with my back to him.)

"We are now 10,500 feet high and crossing the Nevada State line," he would write. Or, "We are now approaching the Grand Canyon, to my mind the most beautiful part of the whole trip," or, "That crooked river below us is the Seiver." And so on.

Rivers looked like little trickles of shining water, roads looked like little threads, lakes like small puddles and giant pines on mountain tops like blades of grass. Civilization was recognizable by the little straight lines into which humans like to form their towns and ranches, and houses looked like tiny match boxes.

One soon gets used to the roar of the propeller, in fact, after a few minutes I forgot to notice it. I never even got a headache, although I was heroically prepared for that.

Quite an enchanting experience.

FOOD AND HEALTH

A FOOD VISITOR FROM FOREIGN LANDS

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist

While it is true that most of us must depend for "human nature's daily food" on what we think of as good old standbys, bread and butter, bread and meat, milk and so on, we are likewise prone to fall into food ruts. There is nothing startling in this statement, since every housekeeper knows how easy it is to let the imp, Monotony perch on her shoulder.

One way in which to foil the attempts of this imp is for the housewife to have, at least a reading knowledge of unusual foodstuffs that come to us from foreign lands. When her interest has been roused, she will be ready to give her family an occasional surprise. Whether or not it is yet practicable for her to accomplish this surprise by the use of fruits I have in mind just now, is neither here nor there. It is very much "here," however, to offer just a bit of the story of certain of these fruits.

There are hundreds of tropical and sub-tropical trees and plants that are affording horticulturalists interesting opportunities for study. Among these are the fruit of the spiny strychnine tree, the sapote and the ilama.

So that we may have an idea of what it is possible to do with these fruits in the southern part of our country, I may tell you just a bit of the story of each. First, the spiny strychnine looks like an orange in shape and texture. It has a delicious pulp with a flavor resembling peaches. The rind of this fruit is thick and hard as the shape is that of a cocoanut, its aroma being distinctly spicy.

The sapots has been studied by our own Department of Agriculture and we find that this fruit has a very delicate flavor, but that it leaves a bitter after taste. A taste for what is known as a "sour-bitter flavor" has to be cultivated. Once a person learns to enjoy this flavor, he is usually a devotee as witness the popular grape fruit.

Now for the ilama. This is a native of Peru and was introduced long ago into Central American probably by the Spaniards. The fruit is shaped like a pineapple. The juice and the pulp are very delicious, and in its native markets the ilama is sold almost as widely as our own apples are in New York State!

The food value of these exotic fruits has not yet been given extensive study. We are, however, fairly safe in assuming that it is, in general, about the same as that of oranges and grape fruit.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CHRISTMAS HORN

"Now," said Uncle Wiggily to his wife one morning, "I shall go out and buy it."

Before the old rabbit gentleman could take one hop, or even a fraction of a hop, provided you are that high in arithmetic and know what a half and a third are—before Mr. Longears could even move, some voices exclaimed:

"We'll come with you and help you buy it!"

"My goodness! What's that?" gasped Mrs. Longears.

"Not the bad chaps—you may be sure," her husband said with a jolly little twinkle of his pink nose. "They could not have such laughing voices." And, truly, there was laughter.

"We'll go with you and help you buy the Christmas horn!" cried Baby Bunty and then she and the others of the forty 'leven little bunnies who lived in Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow came skipping around the corner of the house.

"How did you know I was going to buy a Christmas horn?" asked the rabbit gentleman, and he seemed a little bothered, not to say nonplussed at this, as well as he might be. For he hoped to keep the horn buying a secret like the dark closet under the stairs.

"Oh, Daddicums! As if we didn't know what you always do three days before Christmas!" laughed Scooter.

"Always you go out and buy the Christmas horn," said Tooter, who, in fact, was named after the horn, the horn having been named first.

"And when Christmas morning comes we'll stay in bed until the horn blows, and then we'll jump up to see what's on the tree or in our stockings!" added Jingle, dancing around Uncle Wiggily.

"There is no use trying to keep secrets away from you bunnies!" sighed the old rabbit gentleman. "So come along!"

As the children had said, Mr. Longears every year, about this time, bought a tin Christmas horn. And Scooter, Tooter, Jingle, Jangle, Baby Bunty and all the others, having no school, were waiting around for their daddicums to start off. So they were all ready for him.

Over the fields and through the woods hopped the rabbits little and big. As a matter of fact Uncle Wiggily was the only big one. Soon they were at the horn store. Mr. Longears bought a big red one, and, wishing to try it away from the little bunnies, who, he knew, would tease him to let them take turns blowing it in the store—to get out of this Mr. Longears said:

"Here are some pennies. Go buy yourselves some candies."

Now it takes forty 'leven little rabbits a long time each to pick out the kind of candy he or she wants for a penny. And as there were forty twelve bunnies, counting Baby Bunty, it took that much longer. So Uncle Wiggily had plenty of time to try the Christmas horn, which he did, picking out one with a loud voice.

Slipping the horn into his overcoat pocket, Uncle Wiggily called the boy and girl rabbits who, by this time, had bought their candy, and on home they hopped. Every now and then Baby Bunty, with her bag of candy would hop close to Uncle Wiggily and pretend to be going to pull the red horn out of his pocket to blow it—blow the horn I mean, not the pocket, of course. But Uncle Wiggily always saw her in time.

At last, after a while, all of a sudden, out from behind the bush popped something big and black and shaggy. At first Uncle Wiggily thought it was Jimmie Wibblewobble, the duck, pretending he was a scarecrow, but it wasn't—it was the Bushy Bear, and the Bear wanted ears to nibble.

Uncle Wiggily put his paw in his overcoat pocket, and the Bear began to smile, thinking the rabbit gentleman was going to pull out some ears. But, instead, Mr. Longears took out the red Christmas horn and, putting it to his mouth, held the other end to the bear's own ear and blew so hard that it made the bad chap turn a somersault.

"I'm shot with a horn bullet!" howled the Bear.

"No, that's only one of my gumdrop candies I let fall in the horn when it was in Unkie Wig's pocket!" laughed Baby Bunty. And so it was. When the rabbit gentleman blew the horn, out popped the gumdrop.

Away ran the Bear and everyone said Baby Bunty was clever.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — Twenty-five thousand lines to the square inch—could you draw them? No human being has been able to do such fine work, but Dr. Wilmer Souder, of the United States' Bureau of Standards, has devised a machine that will draw lines so fine. It will be of great value in many lines of engineering.

A Substitute Santa

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

In Six Parts—Part III

IN GERMANY WHERE CHRISTMAS IS JOY

In Germany Mrs. Saint Nicholas found
(For that is what Santa is called in some lands)
The whole country happy with song and good cheer,
And the markets all turned to great Christmas Tree stands.

For days, busy mothers had baked wondrous cakes
And shaped them like animals, people, and toys,
And trimmed joyous trees in a room with shut doors
To make a surprise for the girls and the boys.
Great baskets were packed with good food and warm clothes,
To take to the poor for a glad Christmas Day,
And everywhere Mrs. Saint Nicholas saw
The people give thanks as she passed on her way.
In certain fat provinces peasants were grouped
To witness the scene of a miracle play,
And they guarded the stables, for many believed
The cattle could talk quite like folk Christmas Day.
When supper was finished all over the land
The children went gayly to see each bright tree,
And each gave a gift to the folk who were there,
Midst dancing and singing and much jollity.
Then came old Saint Nicholas wearing a coat
Trimmed heavy with fur, and he bore a great switch,
('Twas dear Mrs. Santa, dressed like him, of course)
A-visiting children of poor and of rich.
The good ones he blessed and the bad ones he spanked
And warned them to heed and be better next year.
And while Mrs. Santa was busy this way,
Old Bok saw Kris Kringle was hovering near,
So to this small Christ Child in fairy-like dress
He gave all the presents for each German child,
And after Saint Nicholas' visit was passed
She gave out the gifts in her manner so mild.
When visits were done and the reindeer dashed on,
Mrs. Santa laughed softly and said, "Well, by Jove,
I'm glad I don't go down the chimneys here,
For most of the houses have only a stove."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

LET THIS BE WRITTEN

Let this be written when your race is run:
Whatever heights you missed or heights you won,
No man can say you shouldered from the path
Some weaker brother in some hour of wrath,
No man can say you crowded from the race
Some older man that you might take his place.
Whatever honors mortal men recall,
Let this be written highest of them all.

Let this be written when your work is through:
You sought for wealth, yet sought for something, too.
Men cannot measure with some rule of gold—
To do the good that never would be told,
To do the kindness to the world unknown,
The deeds unspoken and the love unshown,
Whatever fortune yours it was to win,
In life's great sum let this be written in.

Let this be written when your life is past,
For this will shine the brightest at the last
The laurel fades, the victory forgot,
But men remember who was fair or not.
The gold will dim, but still the world will heed
The endless radiance of some kindly deed.
Let this be written for eternity,
For this is all that God will ask to see.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

THAT public utilities, being the life of a community, it is strange that many cities allow them to be a football for politicians.

THAT too many citizens take too much for granted. They better take what politicians tell them with a grain of salt.

THAT municipally owned utilities, being in charge of people who are usually elected to office not on account of their ability and experience to manage a large business, but for their ability to get votes, it is not strange that they often fail to give the service required.

SHORT STORY

(By Jane Osborn.)

Dr. Kinmore looked out from is office window upon the carpet of green lawn that stretched from his house to the fine old white Maitland mansion next door. It was very smooth and very green—only five or six yellow dandelion blooms marring the perfect verdure. Dr. Kinmore sighed. He had seen a dozen or more patients in his office and he had a call to make at the hospital. A few years ago when he was juts beginning his practice there in Dunmere he would have envied any doctor with so brisk a practice. But now he sighed.

That afternoon, instead of going straight from the hospital to his home to see what messages awaited him, he turned his car toward the open country outside Dunmere. Presently he came to a green field richly dotted over with yellow and here and there patches of white mist between. He pulled to the side of the road, stopped his car and alighted. He spent the next quarter of an hour gathering the blows of dandelions. He pushed them into an envelope he produced from his pocket and then, getting back into his car, he drove home.

It was after nine that night when he had given a word of encouragement to his last office visitor. A moon gleamed faintly through the clouded sky, and, making sure that his housekeeper was in her room, Dr. Kinmore went stealthily out to his lawn and there proceeded to strew the dandelion blows that he had gathered. Having finished this task, he went to the garage, took out his car and drove away.

Early the next morning, while Dr. Kinmore was lingering over his breakfast before going into his office, he glanced out the window. And there he saw a girlish figure in pink bending down with a tiny, sharp trowel in her hand. Dr. Kenmore jumped up from the table and hurried through the long French window out to the lawn.

"There are only a few more dandelions left now," said the girl, looking up to him. "Aunt Nellie is delighted. But I certainly have worked hard getting them out."

"And now that they are all out," said the young doctor, "you won't be coming over here any more."

"I hope I haven't made a nuisance of myself," said Helen Maitland, archly.

Tom Kenmore did not answer the question. He was looking suddenly serious. "But of course there might be more dandelions," he said. "Sometimes the seeds blow from quite a distance, and at this time of year——" He paused and looked rather eagerly at her. "I shall miss seeing you more than I can tell. When I'm sitting there in my office, I look out and there I see you—now bending, now rising, now kneeling. It is very beautiful—and there is so little that is beautiful in my profession." Then looking at her, he said: "Do you remember the time last month when you and your aunt aclled to ask me about the dandelions? You were wearing a pink dress then—too."

Helen laughed. "Wasn't it funny—not the dress—but the way we came. We hadn't seen you. Aunt Nellie and I had just come from the city. Aunt Nellie hadn't been in the old house since quite a long time before you came. She's sent a gardener on to get the lawn and garden in order, and the gardener had said that so long as you were so careless about your place, letting the weeds grow so, he never could get the dandelions out of Aunt Nellie's lawn. So Aunt Nellie and I imagined you were a rough old thing with whiskers and at first we were afraid to come."

"And I was afraid of your Aunt Nellie," laughed Tom. "Still am, for that matter. Remember how she asked me whether I'd have my lawn fixed up and I said I didn't see twha difference it made to her? I don't believe I was very civil. And then she asked me if I'd mind having her gardener mow my lawn and having you dig out the dandelions in between? Well, at least I've had my own land mowed."

"And I've dug out the dandelions. But this," said Helen, lifting a long-rooted green weed with a bright yellow bloom, "this is the last of them."

"Then you won't come over to dig them any more?" asked the doctor wistfully.

"Not unless more come up," said Helen.

"I say, Miss Maitland," he called, as she started away. "I want to tell you something." He strode over to where she stood on her aunt's green sward. "Now that you are standing on your own territory I want to tell you something," he said. "I've planted a lot of dandelion seeds. There will be a big crop in a few weeks. You'll have to come back. Helen, I couldn't endure the thought of not seeing you out there—bending and kneeling and walking about—Helen, I love you."

Helen, standing there before him, was blushing deeply. "But ydon't ou think it is very, very unconventional telling me that here—without calling on me?"

"I haven't dared call," said the doctor. "Neither you nor your aunt have asked me. Helen, dear, I do love you—and I don't want to come and see you unless you think you could like me a little."

"But I do like you—love you—a great deal right now," said Helen, and then turned away her pretty face in confusion. "So please come injnd tell' my aunt you want to be friends.' Helen fled toward her own front door and as she went she called back: "But I'm not going to dig out the new crop of dandelions unless you help me."

OLD MASTERS

He that loves a rosy cheek
Or a coral lip admires,
Or from star-like eyes doth seek
Fuel to maintain his fires;
As old Time makes these decay,
So his flames must waste away.

But a smooth and steadfast mind,
Gentle thoughts and calm desires,
Hearts with equal love combined,
Kindle never-dying fires:
Where these are not, I despise
Lovely cheeks or lips or eyes.

More Value than the Price Suggests

In the year just drawing to a close the price of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars was materially lowered.

Yet during this period more important improvements were incorporated than in any year in Dodge Brothers history. Advances were made in engineering and body designs. The cars possess a greater degree of smoothness, silence and ease. They are more comfortable, more beautiful.

Current prices — made possible, of course, by constantly mounting sales — are therefore not an obvious measure of value. Prices, in fact, have never told the full story of Dodge Brothers dependability and basic worth.

But now, more than ever before, there is far more value than the price suggests.

Ty Cobb And Tris Speaker Named In New Baseball Scandal

FOUR AMERICAN LEAGUE PLAYERS CHARGED IN THROWN GAME PLOT

Were in Deal To Nose Cleveland Out of Second Place.

DENY CHARGES.

Had Discussed Ways of Getting Money on Arranged Plan.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 — Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Joe Wood and Dutch Leonard—four of the best known players in baseball — were named yesterday by Commissioner K. M. Landis in making public a new scandal in the National Pastime.

These four men, according to a statement Landis issued were involved in a deal wherein Cleveland was to "throw" a game to Detroit, September 25, 1919 : By so doing, it was pointed out, Cleveland could not be nosed out of second place in the American League and it would help Detroit to finish third.

In making public the voluminous testimony of the investigation, Commissioner Landis pointed out that Leonard had refused to face the accused men and said that 'with Leonard persisting in his refusal to face those men, his statement proves nothing as to them. It was put in the record only to aid in making intelligible the explanations the several witnesses who from the beginning have asked for a hearing at which Leonard would be present.

The allegations had their inception when Leonard attempted to press a claim against the Detroit club. He turned over two letters to Frank C. Navin, president of the Tigers, one from Cobb and the other from Wood; relating to the alleged misconduct of Speaker, Cobb and Wood. These communications were placed before a secret meeting of the board of directors of the American League and immediately turned over to Commissioner Landis.

In his letters turned over to Commissioner Landis, it was revealed that the amount of $3,500 had been figured to bet on the game, but only a comparatively small amount was actually risked, and that Leonard's share was only $130.

Commissioner Landis, in making public more than 100 pages testimony taken in the case, said t no decision would be made by him unless conditions were changed, because both Speaker and Cobb were no longer in baseball.

Both Cobb and Speaker severed their connections after the close of the 1926 season.

Landis quoted from a statement which he said was made by Leonard when the Commissioner interviewed him on his ranch near Sanger Calif. The quotations from Leonard, as set forth in Landis statement, follow:

Conversation Alleged

"After the first game (meaning the first game of the two regularly scheduled games to be played between Detroit and Cleveland, (Sept. 24 and 25, 1919), Cobb, Speaker, Wood and I happened to meet and get together under the stand, and of course the talk was about baseball, and that we meaning Detroit) wanted to finish third. Speaker said:

"Don't worry about to-morrow's game, we (meaning Cleveland) have got second place cinched and you will win to-morrow,' and everybody then agreed that if it was going to be a set-up that we might as well get some money on it.

Money Matters

"Then we talked about getting the money down on the game, that is, how to get up the 'dough' and how much we would put up, and Cobb said that he would send West down to us. I was to put up $1 500 and as I remember it, Cobb $2,000 and Wood and Speaker $1,000 each.

"I had pitched that day and was through for the season, and so I gave my check for $1,500 to Wood at the ball park and went to the hotel, packed my things, and left that night for Independence, Mo.

"Several days later on I received the Wood letter at Independence with a check for $1,630. He wrote that West was only able to get up part of the money and that my share of the winning was $130.

"During the talk under the stand about the next day's game, Speaker said he would go in and pitch himself if necessary.

"There was not very much talk and we did not stay there very long. There was just the four of us there, and no other player was in on it. When I met Wood the next spring I said to him:

Both Made Denials

"'What do you think, Cobb wrote me that he did not get any money up on that game?' And Wood says: 'He told me the same thing'."

In testimony taken from Cobb and Speaker, both denied implication in the deal, their depositions show.

Cobb admitted he knew a large sum of money was wagered on the game in question, but denied he had any connection with it.

Speaker denied that he was present at the alleged conference underneath the grandstand, and said he had heard that "Leonard was trying to implicate me in letters about a ball game that was fixed in 1919."

Portions of the letter written by Cobb to Leonard and dated Oct. 23 1919, follow:

"Put $2,000 In It"

"Wood and myself were considerably disappointed in our business proposition, as we had $2,000 to put into it, and the other side quoted us $1,400 and when we finally secured that much money, it was about two o'clock, and they refused to deal with us, as they had men in Chicago to take the matter up with and they had no time, so we completely fell down, and, of course, we felt badly over it. Everything was open to Wood, and he can tell you about it when we get together again. It was quite a responsibility and I don't care for it again, I can assure you."

A letter from Wood to Leonard, dated Cleveland Ohio, reads:

"Dear friend 'Dutch,' — Enclosed please find certified cheque for sixteen hundred and thirty ($1,630) dollars.

"Get Down Early"

"The only bet West could put up was $600 against $420 (ten to seven) Cobb did not get up a cent. He told us that, and I believe him. Could have put some at 5 to 2 on Detroit, but did not, as that would make us put up $1,000 to win $400.

"We won the $420. I gave West $30, leaving $390, or $130 for each of us. Would not have cashed your cheque at all, but West thought he could get it up at 10-7, and I was going to put it all up at those odds. We would have won $1,750 for the $2,500 if we could have placed it.

"If we ever have another chance like this we will know enough to try to get it down early.

"Let me hear from you, 'Dutch.' With all good wishes to ourself and Mrs. Leonard—Joe Wood."

Landis' Statement

Landis' statement on the situation follows:

"Late in September it was stated to me that there was under investigation an irregularity in connection with the Cleveland-Detroit game played at Detroit, Mich., September 25, 1919. President Navin, of the Detroit Club informed me in reply to my verbal inquiry that Hubert B. (Dutch) Leonard, one time pitcher on the Detroit Club, had presented a money claim against the Detroit Baseball Co. based on alleged infractions of his rights by that company and that in negotiation and settlement of that claim, Leonard had turned over two letters.

The letters are those which were quoted in preceding paragraphs.

Landis' statement closed with the following words: "These men being out of baseball, no decision will be made unless changed conditions in the future require it."

Questioned by Landis

Cobb said he had no particular recollection of the game. He identified a box score, however, and said that if the box score showed it, he evidently played in the game.

The box score showed that Detroit scored a 9-to-5 victory over Cleveland.

The transcript of Landis' questioning of Cobb shows:

Q—Mr. Cobb, I hand you a document, dated Augusta, Ga., Oct. 23, 1919, addressed to "Dear Dutch," and signed "Sincerely Ty," which will be marked exhibit 1. And I ask you to look at that document and tell me if you know who wrote that letter.

A.—It is my letter.

Shows Letter

Q.—I call your attention to the letter which you have just identified as having been written by you, and ask you if you recall the occasion of having written that letter.

A.—Yes, I wrote the letter.

Q.—And what was it about?

A.—It was in response to a request by Leonard that I ascertain from Wood (Joe Wood) the amount on money that was wagered on this game in question.

Q.—The amount of money that was wagered on what?

A.—On the game in question.

Q.—That is the game of September 25, 1919?

A.—Yes, sir. He stated — you want me to relate what he said?

Q.—Yes.

A.—He stated that he was leaving and wanted to check up on the amount that had been wagered.

On Ball Field

Q. — Do you recall where you were and where Leonard was at the time he made that request to you?

A.—On the ball field.

Q.—When was it that he made this request to you, as you say, with respect to the playing of that game, before or after the game?

A.—If my memory serves me right, it was the day of the game.

Q.—Well, before the game was played or after.

A.—Yes sir, before.

Q.—Give the conversation, as near as you can remember it, just what was said.

Bet On Game

A.—Well, he was leaving, could not be there after the game and he wanted to find out as quickly after the game as possible—he wanted me to ascertain from Wood the amount that was paid. That is to the best of my knowledge.

Q.—When did you first hear that a bet was to be put up on the ball game?

A.—Leonard came to me and wanted to know who would be a man they could trust, and that is where I figured that the—

Q.—What was your answer to him?

A.—I told him I would get a man for him.

Q.—And what did you do along that line?

Q.—Where was West at the time you pointed him out to Leonard?

A.—Well, to the best of my knowledge he was either close to the edge of the playing field or was inside the field.

Q.—At all events, this conversation between Leonard and yourself and your pointing West out was inside the ball park?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How long before the game was started?

Meaning of Question

A.—Well, I imagine it was around one o'clock.

Q.—What did you understand Leonard to mean when he asked you the name of somebody he could trust, or you could trust, whichever it was?

A.—Well, I figured that he wanted to bet on the ball game.

Q.—What made you think so?

A.—That is the only inference that I could gather from what he said.

Q.—Had you any conversations with him before about betting on ball games?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Or anything else?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Was there anything else in his inquiry to you that you have not mentioned here that would indicate to you the kind of trust he wished to repose in somebody?

What Was Amount?

A.—Well, there might have been other conversations. I am only relating what I can remember—away back there, and there might have been other things. For instance, he talked about ascertaining what amount of money would be put up by Wood, see? He wanted me to inquire of Wood the amount of money that had been put up.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 22—Cleveland sports writers divulged yesterday that the resignation of Tris Speaker as manager of the Cleveland Indians was due to impending scandal surrounding the game between Cleveland and Detroit in Detroit Sept. 25, 1919, and not on account of salary or friction in the management of the club.

Leonard Speaks

Fresno Calif., Dec. 22 — "I will neither confirm nor deny the commissioner's charges," said Dutch Leonard, former major league star, when informed yesterday by the United Press that he is named in the baseball scandal revealed in Chicago.

"I may have a statement later, but I prefer to keep quiet now," he said.

Leonard was deeply interested in Judge Landis' charges and asked to see the complete story.

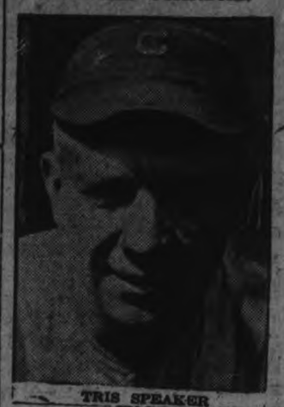
Judge Landis visited Leonard at his farm here last October. At that time the commissioner said he was here as Leonard's guest only and not for business reasons.

A Closed Incident

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 22—Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit baseball club, declared that he had nothing to say about the alleged "throwing."

"I believe the commissioner has fully covered the case," Navin told the United Press, when informed of the statement "So far as we are concerned, it is a closed incident."

IN BALL SCANDAL.



TRIS SPEAKER

Named by Commissioner Landis as one of the four in deal wherein Cleveland was to throw a game to Detroit on September 25th.

If the Detroit Baseball Club on September 25, 1919, was "thrown a game by the Cleveland Club in order to gain third place in the American League, the conspiracy was unsuccessful, New York finished third that year. After the game in dispute, the third and fourth clubs lined up as follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
New York. ..	76	59	.563
Detroit..	77	60	.562

Playing out the season, the first four clubs finished as follows:

Cleveland.. ..	84	55	.604

It Took Two Years To Uncover Scandal in 1919 What Can Be Done To Retain Public Confidence

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—It took more than two years to uncover the world's series scandal of 1919, in which the Chicago White Sox tossed the championship to the Cincinnati Reds, and it required more than seven years to uncover the bones of the Detroit-Cleveland affair. A scandal involving two of the greatest players in the history of the game—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker—and two other widely known and respected stars—Dutch Leonard and Joe Wood—is the most serious blow the integrity of baseball ever has offered

The terrific hitting Babe Ruth and the appointment of Federal Judge Landis to control the game saved baseball after the Chicago White Sox scandal, but baseball men were wondering yesterday what could be done now to combat skepticism about the honesty of all the players.

The only comeback baseball has is the argument that it is impossible to keep all the men involved in the playing game honest and that when guilty ones are found they are exposed. This scandal is far more serious than the 1919 world's series scandal because it involves a manager and the greatest star of all time.

COBB MAY STAY IN THE MAJORS

Still Remain in Big Time if Offered Proper Inducement.

NEVER IN MINORS.

NEW YORK, December 22.—Ty. Cobb will never be a minor leaguer. This is the positive announcement of the fiery Georgian who entertained baseball fans for twenty years before he recently severed connections with the Detroit Club.

The fact that Ty emphasized the minor leagues may be taken as an indication that he would not be averse to some more work along the big league trail if the proper inducements should ever be made.

Perhaps he has in mind the return of Fielder Jones, Frank Chance, Bill Carrigan and others, after years of retirement from the game.

"I will never swing a bat as a minor leaguer," Cobb remarked during a recent conversation. That is certain. What are my plans? I have leased a house in France and expect to go over there with my family and spend about two years. I have felt for some years that I would like to live in that country and now I have the opportunity."

Ty did not say he would never come back to baseball. He probably hopes to return some day and the fans hope the same.

CARSON STARS AS TEAM WINS

SCORE 5 TO 3.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 22.—St. Patrick's of Toronto defeated Boston in a fast and rugged game here last night, 5 to 3, in a National Hockey League fixture. The Irish showed no ill effects of Monday night's arduous game in New York and Day of St. Patrick's showed true Christmas spirit by tallying one of the three Boston goals himself.

Bill Carson was the pivot of the Irish attack, and he exhibited a style seldom surpassed in the Arena. He drove in three of the St. Patrick goals, while Day was responsible for two. Defensively and on attack the Irish had a clear advantage tonight.

Players in Fight

The game, warmly contested throughout, was marred by a fight in the third period. Cooper drove the rubber into St. Pat's net on an offside pass and Cleghorn disputed the decision of Referees O'Hara and O'Leary disallowing the goal. In the argument on the ice Cleghorn struck Bailey of Toronto in the face and knocked him down. The Boston captain got a minor penalty.

One other Boston goal was disallowed when the rubber nested in the net after the whistle had sounded for an offside pass. Shore scored one of the Boston goals in the first period and Keats added one in the second. Day's contribution came near the final bell.

There were thirteen penalties, of which Brydge of Toronto drew four. McCaffrey and Cleghorn were double offenders.

PRO FOOTBALL HERE TO STAY SAYS TIM MARA

New York Giants To Play Next Year Despite Losses.

LAYING PLANS.

Promoters Hope For Better Break in Weather For Opening.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — New York will witness professional football of the league variety again next season, announces Tim Mara, president of the New York National League Giants. This in spite of the fact that the Giants played through the last season at a loss of over $50,000. Brooklyn, which combined its National League Lions and Horsemen of the American League into the Brooklion Horsemen, also will play again on Ebbets Field, according to Humbert Fugazy and Eddie Butler, sponsors of the combined offering.

Like the Giants, both Brooklyn elevens lost much money, but the promoters express the hope that with a better break in the weather and only one team in the borough the game can be conducted at a profit. Plans are already being laid to organize for next season.

The status of the New York Yankees, at present playing in the South, and the American League is more or less uncertain owing to the fact that only the Philadelphia Quakers and the Chicago Bulls, in addition to the Yankees, finished their home seasons. Newark, Boston, Rock Island, Brooklyn and Cleveland failed to complete their American League schedule. George Wilson's Wildcats are now touring with the Yankees in the South and their schedule calls for games on the Pacific Coast.

While affairs in the American League were uncertain practically from the start, things in the National League also found no primrose path. Twenty-two clubs started the season. The National League with a stronger treasury, an older organization and more experienced teams and promoters, was able to weather most of its storms and brought practically every club in the league over the finish line.

The National League will hold its annual meeting and election of officers here the latter part of January, at which time it is proposed to weed out the weak clubs, strengthen the remaining elevens and to concentrate the organization. There is some agitation for a division of the league into Eastern and Western sections, with the victors getting together at the close of the season to contest for the championship.

Dr. Harry A. March, secretary of the Giants, announced that the attendance at both New York gridirons was about equal to that of last year's total of 274,500, which averaged about 25,000 for home games, the out-of-town games drawing about 37,000. This year's average at the Polo Grounds was about 15,000, according to Mr. March. The team last year won ten of its fourteen games and this season eight league games were won, four lost and one tied, the club placing seventh in the league standing. The club, however, ended its season with a brilliant 31 to 0 victory over the Philadelphia Quakers, winners of the American League championship.

President Tim Mara of the Giants in commenting on the Giants' season, said that he was not discouraged and that negotiations would be completed in the summer to strengthen the club in the line and the back field for next season, when a strong attempt would be made to get the league championship.

The Giants paid all of their players' expenses during the season and at the end of the campaign checks totalling more than $21,000 were paid out, the sums varying from $1,500 to $3,000. In addition, players who were injured were carried along with full salary and all medical expenses were paid.

CORONACH IS FIRST IN ENGLISH RACING

His Feats Enable Lord Woolavington To Head Winning List.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Lord Woolavington and Coronach are the outstanding figures on the English turf this year. Figures just announced show that Lord Woolavington had the good fortune to head the list of winning owners, the list of breeders and to own the horse which won something like a record in stakes and to own the sire whose progeny have won the most money in the flat racing season which began on March 22 and ended on Nov. 27.

Coronach on £39,624, which enabled Lord Woolavington to lead the winning owners with a total of £47,041. The closest to Lord Woolavington was Lord Derby, with £35,433, while Lord Astor and Lord Rosebery were third and fourth with £24,187 and £15,832 respectively. Coronach's successful campaign also enabled Lord Woolavington to be the topmost breeder with a total of £39,869, as well as the envied owner of the leading stallion, Hurry On, which sired Coronach, and whose progeny won £58,908 in stakes.

"A matter of deep regret is that the King should have experienced an excessively lean year," says Hotspur in The London Telegraph. "Of his horses in training, probably numbering over a score, only three could win three paltry races, worth in all £576. This is really very sad, especially when we reflect that the immediate outlook for the royal stable must be anything but bright.

"It is something to kno that His Majesty's horses lack for nothing in their management and training, and that the signal want of success is due to their lamentable shortcomings. A remedy, of course, would be to make a clean sweep of them and introduce a drastic cross over in blood at the Sandringham Stud; but the transition would involve heavy expense, which it may not be convenient to overtake. It must not be overlooked that rich men have made lavish outlays on breeding and young stock and fortune eludes them."

RANGERS WIN FROM PIRATES

New York Team Scores 1 - 0 Victory on Home Ice.

WORTERS GOOD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—A 1 to 0 victory over the Pittsburg Pirates last night sent New York Rangers back into first place in the American section of the National Hockey League. Only the brilliant work of Worters in the visiting net kept the Rangers' margin to one goal. The teams:—

Pittsburg—Worters, goal; Langlois and I. Smith, defence; Milks, centre; Darragh and Arbour, wings; Drury, White, Cotton, McCurry, McKinnon and McGuire, subs.

Referees—Dave Ritchie and Eddie Enright.

The Summary

First Period:

Final score—Rangers 1, Pitsburg 0.
Penalties — Langlois, Johnson, Milks.

Y.M.C.A. LEAGUE.

The last two or three weeks of the first series of the "Y" League developed into a close race, and the Royals lost their chance of finishing in first place in the League by dropping all three games to the Woollens two weeks ago. On the other hand, by taking the last game of the series from Barries by eight pins, the Royals eliminated Barries from the League race.

The finish of the series found the Teachers, led by Harry Graham and George Street, captained by Norm Routley, in a first place tie. So it is left for these two old rivals to fight out the tie after Christmas to see who will be the winners of the first series. Right behind George Street and Teachers, and only one game behind were Barries, captained by "Holly" McIllmoyle. Then four games behind were the Royals, captained by Vivien Milburn. Then finished the Northern Lights, captained by Fred Redpath, these two teams also finishing in a tie.

Altogether it has been the closest race in years and it is not unlikely a far different story will be told of the second series for the Northern Lights and the Woollens have improved rapidly of late and were taking games from the leaders when games counted, while the Royals and Barries, particularly the last team, were in the front ranks throughout. The final standing of the first series was as follows:

	Won	Lost
Teachers	20	10
George Street	20	10
Barries	19	11
Royals	15	15
Northern Lights	8	22
Woollens	8	22

NORTH TORONTO EXPECTS A WIN OVER THE PETES

Visitors Counting on Condition To Give Them the Verdict.

TO-MORROW'S GAME.

Senior O.H.A. Season Starts at the Brock St. Rink.

With Jack Cain and Tracey Shaw as a stout and well seasoned defence pair to steady a flying squadron of fast forwards, the North Toronto Seniors will be here to-morrow night as the Petes' opposition in the first Senior O.H.A. fixture of the season.

The North Toronto outfit has already tasted victory by reason of a shut-out win over Toronto Canoe Club and they are very hopeful of getting a flying start in the group race by taking Eddie Wright's team to-morrow night.

The visitors figure they will have the edge in condition and they expect to set such a hot pace from the first bell that the Petes will curl up before the proceedings are over.

However, the Blue and White line-up is in pretty fair condition and the local players expect to have somethin to say about speed themselves.

While Manager Wright has not definitely announced his line-up, the starting six will in all probability be Dwyer in the nets, McLeod and Rose on the defence, Collins centre, Bogardis right wing and Ranger left, with Kane and Williams as the most likely choices as subs.

The group race this year promises to be full of interest and tomorrow's game should be a fitting start to a thrilling campaign.

LATEST ENTRY THIRTY-FIRST SEEKING BOWL

Competition Began in 1900 With Duel Between America and Britain.

TENNIS HONORS.

Will Play Preliminary Rounds in the European Zone.

By LEWIS BURTON.

Its philosophers having been able to hold their own with America for several generations at least, Greece has decided upon a policy of expansion and will henceforth seek its glory in the noble field of tennis. Through Pan M. Pappadopoulo, Greece has filed a challenge with the United States for the Davis Cup electing to play the preliminary rounds in the European zone.

This is regarded as everlasting proof that times are changing. Two thousand years ago, such a challenge would have been regarded as a surprise.

Pappadoupoulo, who bears the modest designation of Delegue Hellene a la Federation Internationale de Lawn Tennis, sent the official notice of the Grecian decision to Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the United States Lawn Tennis Association Davis Cup Committee, thus:

"I have the pleasure to bring to your knowledge, on behalf of my association, that my country wishes to take part in the Davis Cup competition for the year 1927 and I would be grateful if you acknowledge receipt of the present in duplicate stating that all is in order. I confirm my previous correspondence in which I stated that we wished to compete in the European zone."

Greece becomes the thirty-first nation to write its name on the list of Davis Cup aspirants since play for the famous international trophy began in 1900 with a contest between the United States and the British Isles. Despite the large number of competitors, only Australasia, the British Isles and the United States have had possession of the trophy, though other nations have gained places of prominence in the challenge rounds.

A dozen years ago, a Grecian by birth, T. M. Mavrogordato, brought the likelihood of his country's eventual place in international competition a little nearer by performing notably as a Davis Cup player in the service of Britain.

TILDEN'S KNEE IS WELL AGAIN

Puts It To Severe Test in Match With Alsonso.

STAGES COME-BACK.

PHILADELPHIA, December 22.—William T. Tilden is showing signs of a great come-back. If he continues to play the sort of game that he flashed yesterday masters of the old world and the new are in for some hard battles in 1927.

Playing against Manuel Alonzo, the Spanish Davis Cup ace, Tilden rose to superb heights to win the final match of the Penn Athletic Club indoor tournament, 6-1, 6-3, 6-4. Not since 1925 has the dethroned six-times monarch of the courts displayed the dazzling tennis that he developed against the Spaniard.

Alonso, a fiery performer was at the top of his game but Big Bill won about as he pleased. When he needed a point he got it. With Alonso leading at four games to none in the last set, Tilden swept his opponent off his feet to win six straight games for the set and match.

In those six games Tilden went to the net only once. He relied almost entirely on his back court play darting to corners to return what ordinarily would have been placements. He put a tremendous strain on his knee that was injured last summer but the knee apparently did not trouble him in the slightest degree. His confidence was superb, his severity devasting and his accuracy almost uncanny.

Tilden plans to sail for Europe late in January to play in winter events on the Riviera. Later he will go after the worlds championship at Wimbledon and the lesser titles abroad, and return here for the supreme effort to capture the national singles championship.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

Featuring the story by Stewart Edward White, and some of the most striking scenic backgrounds ever used in making Westerns, Fred Thomson's latest F.B.O. release, "THE TWO-GUN MAN" will be shown here at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow for a three days run. This is probably the first time the work of as noted a writer as Mr. White has been utilized as Western material and the distinctively different treatment accorded the production makes it by far the best thing Thomson has yet done. The enire company spent several weeks in a remote part of the Sierras in making the film, and the superb mountain scenery furnishes one of the most glorious backgrounds for a strong story that could be imagined. The part which has been written in for Silver King gives that four-footed John Barrymore a real acting role—one of which he is quick to avail himself, and Fred Thomson's own part sparkles with the glittering touches characteristic of Stewart Edward White at his best. William E. Wing adapted the original story to the screen. David Kirkland's direction of a bood cast, which includes Olive Hasbrouck Sheldon Lewis, Frank Hagney, Joe Dowling, William Courtright and little Billy Butts—the latter appearing again in a Thomson production by popular demand—is all that his three previous pictures for this popular star has taught the public to expect.

AT THE REGENT

GLORIES OF WESTERN SCENERY IMPRESSIVE BACKGROUND OF FILM.

Ken Maynard's 'Unknown Cavalier' Shows Splendors of Deserts and Mountains Beautifully Photographed.

New York critics, previewing the "Unknown Cavalier," Ken Maynard picture coming to the Regent Thursday, declared the film had the most impressive backgrounds of any show this season.

"Picture - goers, often without realizing it, are influenced favorably or otherwise by the settings in which the action of a film drama takes place, and this applies not only to the interiors which are constructed in the studio, but also to the outdoor surroundings of the characters."

And so at the outset he instructed the director, Albert Rogell, and the supervisor, Harry J. Brown, to spare no expense in the matter of "locations."

Risked Lives.

The story, from a popular novel by Kenneth Perkins, has its climax in Death Valley, famed all over the world as an inferno of heat and thirst, and, although the picture was being made in midsummer, "Into the Valley of Death" rode the brave—not six hundred, but sixty—members of the Maynard company and staff.

After risking their lives, the company was rewarded by obtaining some very unusual backgrounds and scenic "shots."

They filmed one spot in particular which had never been visited before by a motion picture troupe, where cliffs tower a thousand feet over the lowest spot in the United States, the cellar of Death Valley, 250 feet below sea level, and from which is visible Mt. Whitney, the highest peak in the continental U.S.

McGraw Wants To Retire When Present Contract Expires.

TWO YEARS TO GO.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Rogers Hornsby as a possible successor to John McGraw at the helm of the New York Giants to-day loomed as the latest angle in baseball's most sensational deal since the purchase of Babe Ruth by the Yankees.

"I would like to feel that I can leave the management when my present contract expires two years from now," said the gray-haired New York leader. "I do not want to spend all my life running a ball club. Yes, there is a chance that if Hornsby fits in, he may inherit my job."

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE LVII—The Tower of Babel. by MAX HAHN

WHEN THE BABYLONIANS BUILT A TEMPLE THEY MADE IT UNUSUALLY TALL. THIS IS BECAUSE THEY WANTED THEIR GOD, WHOM THEY THOUGHT OF AS LIVING ON A MOUNTAIN, TO FEEL AT HOME IN THE LOW PLAIN COUNTRY.

PROFESSOR GOLDEWEY, AN AUTHORITY, SAID THAT THE TOWER OF BABEL RESEMBLED A CUBE AND WAS ABOUT 300 FEET HIGH. HALFWAY TO THE TOP THERE WAS A GREAT UNROOFED COURT WHERE THE WORSHIPPERS ASSEMBLED. © McClure Newspaper Syndicate

AT THE FOOT OF THE TEMPLE THE PRIEST RECEIVED THE OFFERINGS OF GOATS AND PALM BRANCHES BROUGHT BY PEASANTS.

THE TOWER OF BABEL WAS BUILT MORE DURABLY THAN THE HUTS. WHEN THE HUTS COLLAPSED AFTER A HEAVY RAIN THE FORMER OCCUPANTS LEVELED OFF THE WRECKAGE AND STARTED A NEW HOME.

Peterborough Is Not Disease Ridden

M.O.H. Denies Truth Of Lakefield Article Saying Hospital Full

Dr. Young Says No Lakefield Resident Was Denied Admission—Refused To Pay Regular Charge For Attendance and Returned to Village.

ONLY FIVE CASES UNDER TREATMENT WITH TWENTY-SEVEN BEDS UNOCCUPIED

Dr. T. W. H. Young, Medical Health Officer, indignantly denied today a story emanating from Lakefield to the effect that Peterborough Isolation Hospital is filled with patients. There are only fifteen cases of contagious disease in the city, he said, and of these five are confined in the Queen Mary Hospital. This leaves twenty-seven beds unoccupied out of 32, which is not by any means a congested condition.

The story, which is considered by the M.O.H. a slur on Peterborough, originated with The Lakefield News, which carried a front page article reading in part.

"Peterborough has enough to do to look after its own affairs in the line of contagious diseases, as the Isolation Hospital in that place is so overcrowded with cases that a Lakefield patient was refused admission only a few days ago."

This statement is completely denied by Dr. Young, who gives the following statement to The Examiner:

"A telephone call was received from Lakefield at the Isolation Hospital a little over a week ago, asking for a room for a patient suffering from small pox. The reply was, 'Yes, send him along.' In due course the man arrived. He was received and given a bed, but before occupying it he questioned the matron as to the charges per day, and on being informed he decided to go home and be quarantined in Lakefield.

"The hospital is by no means overcrowded, as this irresponsible Lakefield person has stated," Dr. Young

THE WEATHER.

Colder conditions are again with us. Lowest temperature last night, 5 degrees below zero. A brilliant rose-colored sky this morning at daybreak betokened some more snow, so a "white Christmas" is assured. A "green Christmas," or one without any snow on the ground, is a rare thing in this section, much rarer than I thought until I looked over old weather records for Peterboro. "A green Christmas makes a fat churchyard," or, in other words, is very unhealthy, is an old proverb—perhaps more ancient than truthful.—W. P.

HAVELOCK MAN DROPS DEAD AT C. P. R. STATION

HAD BEEN SHOPPING.

Seemed in Best of Health While Eating Supper.

Last night at the Canadian Pacific Railway station James Cronkrite, a resident of Havelock, dropped dead. Mr. and Mrs. Cronkrite came to Peterborough yesterday intent on doing their Christmas shopping. After they had this done they went to the home of a friend where they had supper. Mr. Cronkrite seemed in the best of health and after supper he told fortunes for a few minutes. They arrived at the C.P.R. station about 6.25 and Mr. Cronkrite went into the general waiting room and sat down. The night operator noticed him sitting there and in a few minutes he saw him lurch forward and when he got to him he was unconscious. Dr. Clark was summoned and he arrived in a very few minutes but life was extinct.

Dr. Young said there was no need of an inquest and gave the cause of death as heart failure.

Mr. Cronkrite was an elderly man and was a pensioner of the C.P.R. He was an old resident of Havelock, having resided there thirty-seven years. Mr. Cronkrite suffered a stroke some years ago and has always had to walk with a cane since. A few days ago Mr. Cronkrite fell while crossing the C.P.R. yard and he has been feeling ill at times since.

BRING CHILDREN FROM DUMMER

Lived in Rough Shack With Only One Room

Children's Aid Takes Control Until Father Supplies Suitable Living Quarters—Children Exclaim at Bright Lights, Street Car and Motor Bus.

FAMILY INCLUDED FOUR DOGS.

Three children brought in from Dummer are today happily at home in the Children's Shelter in Peterborough. They are Rose, Richard and Bertie Lindsay, aged 10, 6, and 4 respectively, the family of Richard Lindsay and his wife of the ninth line of Dummer. John Edgar, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, and Provincial Constable N. F. Maker descended yesterday evening on the shack where the family resided in a single room with four dogs and a cat, and carried off the children to better surroundings.

The spectacle that greeted The Examiner and the officers was almost unbelievable, comparable only to the destitution that marked the city case uncovered a few days ago. The shack, with another old building, forms the remnants of a deserted lumber camp It stands about two hundred feet from the roadway almost entirely hidden from view of passers-by by trees with which it is surrounded. It is situated about 20 miles from Peterborough and is about a mile north of the village of Centre Dummer. It is a rough square affair, measuring about fifteen feet, built of rough lumber. The roof slopes from a height of twelve feet at the front to about six feet at the back The only windows are two holes or slots, measuring about two and a half inches by five inches; no larger than the letter boxes in the doors of many of the houses in Peterborough. The light entering the building is so meagre that it is impossible to distinguish any of the objects not directly in line with the door when it is opened. And when the door is closed the room is filled with slanting beams of sunlight that filter through the numerous cracks in the walls.

Makes Axe Handles.

The beds consisted of two bunks, built out of rough lumber and covered by remnants of quilts. Three of the family slept in one and two in the other.

The visitors found several axe handles, which Mr. Lindsay stated, were the sole means of his earning a livelihood for the family. He makes them from rough lumber, whittling them into shape with an ordinary knife. His average was about six a day, he said.

Mrs. Lindsay is still in a weak condition following her discharge from Nicholls Hospital, where she was a patient ten days.

Outside the shack stood several pieces of furniture for which evidently there was no room inside, as the stove and the bunks occupied most of the available space.

Children Wanted to Stay.

The children cried bitterly when they were told they would be taken to Peterboro, but were gradually consoled when Mr. Edgar and Constable Maker assured them they would soon see a real Christmas, and all sorts of toys. During the trip to the city the little girl sat between her two small brothers, with her arms around their necks, and speaking to them in motherly fashion, all of them munching chocolate bars in a contented manner.

Richard and Bertie talked about horses and wondered if Santa Claus would bring them one. Once in a while they would mention their dogs, "Teddy" and "Daisy." The little girl interrupted their prattling several times to talk about her cat, and to tell about the wonders of the Christmas tree she had seen at the school yesterday morning.

Never Before In City.

The trio, never having seen a city before, were amazed by the bright lights on Hunter Street when they arrived about 7.30 last night. On George Street they saw their first street car and a motor 'bus, and ejaculations of surprise and wonder escaped them. They had not known that such things existed.

In a few minutes after their arrival they were safely in the care of the matron at the Shelter, and after being bathed and fed they were introduced to the luxury of white sheets probably for the first time in their young lives.

They will be kept at the Children's Shelter until their father provides a suitable home for them. It is believed that they were sufficiently fed, and it is only because of the utterly inadequate nature of the home provided that they are brought to the charge of the Children's Aid.

CHES. WALTERS RUMORED FOR CUSTOMS POST

Capital Hears He Will Be Appointed Deputy Minister of Customs.

HAS QUALIFICATIONS.

Cabinet Has Long List of Important Vacancies To Fill Up.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23—The cabinet is likely to have a new year honors list as long as his majesty's. There are a number of judgeships and other important posts to be filled, and reports are that the appointments are all to be made within a week or ten days.

Reports here are that Chester S. Walters, of Hamilton, is to be named deputy minister of customs, this week, in succession of R. R. Farrow, who retired from the service last summer. Mr. Walters is at present federal income tax commissioner in Hamilton. He served as alderman, controller and mayor of the Ambitious City, and some years ago distinguished himself by conducting a civic inquiry which rocked civic officialdom and resulted in wholesale dismissals and some criminal charges.

It was for his brilliant work in this inquiry that he was rewarded with preferment by the electors.

Mr. Walters is a chartered accountant, in his early forties, and is regarded as particularly qualified to clean up the mess which was uncovered by the customs probe last session.

Hon. Mr. Macdonald

Hon. E. M. MacDonald is at present worrying the cabinet. He is regarded as due for some good post, but the difficulty is to find one suitable. Some talk of making him chairman of the international joint waterways commission is heard, but this is regarded as a post that should go to Quebec, owing to its great interest in the St. Lawrence channel proposals now before the commission. Ontario is represented by Sir William Hearst, former premier of the province.

Can Grow Hair On Mice Holds Hope For Humans

TAUNTON, Eng., Dec. 23.—(A.P.)— Bald mice have been made to grow hair in experiments designed to discover a cure for baldness among humans.

To grow hair on mice is easy, scientists explain, but the trick was to make the mice bald.

Dr. F. A. E. Crew, principal of the Animal Breeding Institute of the Edinburgh University, has discovered that mice may be made to shed their coats by extracting certain gland substances. Dr. Crew also says that by extracting a substance from normal mice and grafting it on the bald ones, he has been able to promote the growth of the coat again either completely or partially, according to the amount applied.

The experiments are being continued with a view of ascertaining if human baldness may not be due to the same glandular deficiency, and therefore curable in a similar way.

Shaw Repeats His Attack On Christmas As Nuisance

LONDON, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—George Bernard Shaw refuses to withdraw his assertion that Christmas as "an unbearable nuisance" ought to be abolished.

To a Daly Express man who tried to get him to qualify his anathematization, the famous writer redenounced the Yuletide celebration as a "horrible pagan carnival."

"Not that I object to being pagan—quite the contrary," he added. "I have no quarrel with the Christmas feeling, but I think it should be spread over the whole year. There may, of course, be some who by nature are in such an entirely miserable condition that they require to be made merry at Christmas. I don't.

Speeches of appreciation were given by several of the candidates.

Mayor W. T. Holloway

"It's needless to say that I fully appreciate this second term you have given me," declared the Mayor. "The last year has been a busy one but I never enjoyed work any better than I did this. The perfect harmony that prevailed has been an inspiration to me and I look forward to the coming year with equal pleasure."

Frederick Hills

"There is a big field and a wide variety of candidates from whom the citizens should be able to make a good choice," declared Mr. Hills. "If elected I will do my utmost to carry out the wishes of the public."

George H. Duncan

"In running for the Utilities Commission, I feel with my experience in the Council and as Mayor, also as a member of the Board of Health that I would be able to serve efficiently on the Commission," said Mr. Duncan.

"During the three or four months I served as a member of the Commission when I occupied the place of a deceased member I became

CANADA NEGOTIATES FIRST TRADE TREATY WITH CZECHO-SLOVAKIA SINCE OBTAINING RECENT POWERS

List of Seventy-one Commodities Comprising Important Canadian Exports.

LOWEST RATES.

Grants Czecho-Slovakia Goods Benefits of Canadian Interemdiate Tariff.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23, — Canadian Press. — A commercial trade treaty between Canada and Czecho-Slovakia has been negotiated and approved by the cabinet, according to an announcement from the Department of Finance last night.

The statement issued by the department of finance, points out that it is the first commercial agreement to be concluded since Canada obtained new treaty making powers at the recent imperial conference.

Negotiations were conducted by James A. Russell, tariff commissioner, who is now in Europe.

The department of finance states that:

Canada obtains the lowest rates of duty given any country by Czecho-Slovakia on a list of some 71 commodities which comprise all the important Canadian exports to that country. In return, Canada grants Czecho-Slovakian goods the benefits of the Canadian intermediate tariff.

The new rates will become effective on January next. The agreement is of a temporary character, continuing for a period of 15 months, or until three months' notice of denunciation has been given by either party.

It is stated that before the expiration of the agreement negotiations will be begun for a more general and definite convention for the regulation of commercial relations between the two countries.

Canadian goods that are given the most favored national treatment on importation into Czecho-Slovaka are flour, wheat, hosiery, wrapping paper, Barley, oats, rye, buckwheat, malt, peas, fresh and dried apples, all kinds of fish, including canned fish, lard, butter, honey, cheese, canned fruits and vegetables, condensed milk, agricultural implements and agricultural tools, rubber footwear, rubber tires, lead, zinc, engines and motors, adding machines, automobiles and various other items.

The department's announcement states:

"The agreement preserves for Canada a trade in flour estimated by large Canadian milling companies as approaching a million and a half barrels of flour a year, worth in the neighborhood of $10,000,000. Had the agreement been concluded, a Czecho-Slovakian duty of 120 crown ($3.60) per 100 kilos (220 pounds), would

Skull Of Missing Link May Be Elephant's Leg

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—The "missing link" skull, which was reported to have been discovered at Trinil, Java, in September, by the Dutch professor, Dr. C. J. E. Heberlein, may not be a skull after all.

Prof. Eugene Dubois, who in 1892 unearthed part of an apeman's skull in the Trinil region, writes to the papers that recently received photographs of Prof. Heberlein's find lead him to believe that part of a leg bone of a stegodon (a prehistoric species of elephant) has been mistaken for a skull.

Remains of these animals, he says are often found in Java.

SMUGGLE LIQUOR IN FAST PLANES

Vancouver Hears Tale of New Method of Quick Distribution.

LARGE SYNDICATE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 22. — (Associated Press).—The Vancouver Daily Province yesterday carried the following:

"Liquor enforcement officers of the Pacific states and Customs officers of British Columbia are on the qui vive following the receipt of information to the effect that a large syndicate in Washington and other coast states is about to use a fleet of airplanes for rapid smuggling of liquor.

"Norman DeGraves, special officer of the Customs Preventive Department, states that his department had received the information, but details are vague, and as yet no proof of the existence of the 'sky' smugglers is in his hands.

UTILITIES COMMISSION

interested in the work. I ask my friends to support me on my past record and if elected I will give the same service as in the past," he concluded.

E. R. Shirley

Mr. Shirley declared that in allowing his name to go forward for the Utilities Commission he did so knowing that his qualificatons were of an exceptional nature and he felt that it was his duty to place them at the disposal of the citizens.

The Utilities Commission and the industrial and economic life of this city go hand in hand. "We have the pumping and filtration plants with the distribution and sale of water to the various consumers. The city purchases electric power from the H.E.P.C. and must handle and sell this power, taking into consideration the various factors peculiar to the handling and sale of electric power," he said.

"These are engineering undertakings and as such demand, in my opinion, the presence of an engineer on the Utilities Commission."

"I am a graduate, with honors, from two universities. I have been a resident of Peterborough for a number of years. I was connected with the British Canadian Power Company as assistant superintendent. In this capacity I was responsible for the maintenance and operation of the various power houses of that company." He had designed, installed and maintained the sub-stations in use on various mines in the north country and had been actively engaged in electrical engineering since his graduation.

Michael Quinlan.

"If I am elected I will have the time at my disposal to devote to the duties of a Utilities Commissioner and I also possess the practical business ability to carry out the same," declared Mr. Quinlan.

M.O.H. DENIES

continued. "Had the writer of that article done what he says others should do; that is, confirm the report, we would not have to show the untruth of his statement. At present we have five cases under treatment in this hospital, leaving 27 beds unoccupied.

City Patients Pay

"As a matter of fact," the M.O.H. said, "city patients are not treated free at the Isolation Hospital, but pay $1.25 a day. The city maintains the hospital, and outside municipalities contributed nothing towards the building of this hospital and take no share of the upkeep. To non-residents of the city the charge is $3.50 a day. When there is room, we extend the courtesy to outside municipalities by receiving their contagious cases."

Another Denial

The same article to which Dr. Young objects expresses resentment that Canadian Press carried a mistaken report of the condition in Lakefield. The Examiner being the only newspaper within a radius of thirty miles that takes Canadian Press service, immediately investigated the allegation made by The Lakefield News. The statement was:

"According to a Canadian Press despatch published in the Toronto papers on Thursday last, Lakefield was in a state of quarantine owing to an outbreak of smallpox and diptheria. The despatch was sent from Peterborough. The facts of the case are that there are several cases of smallpox and diphtheria in village of a mild character, and the Board of Health, in taking precautions to prevent the spread of the disease, deemed it advisable to prohibit all public meetings, entertainments or gatherings until Friday, December 24. . . . The village is not under quarantine, and business is going on the same as usual. It is to be regretted that the Canadian Press should employ such an irresponsible person in Peterborough, who would send a despatch of that description out without first confirming it. Peterborough has enough to do to look after its own affairs in the line of contagious diseases." The Examiner is informed by the Canadian Press correspondent in Peterborough that the despatch originating here simply declared the facts as stated in the Lakefield article reproduced above. It was not said that the village was under quarantine, but only that church services, entertainment, and gatherings had been prohibited.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

GEORGE STREET S. S.

The cradle roll department of the Sunday School of George Street United Church held a pleasant Christmas party yesterday, with a large attendance of children and mothers. During the afternoon the following programme was given: Recitation by Bobby Parnell; vocal duett by the Misses Bertha Hill and Ida McBride, with accompaniment by Miss Alma Blanchard; reading by Mrs. V. Walker; a chorus, "Christmas Morn," by the children; vocal solo by Bertha Belleghem, and a chorus, "Old Jack Frost," by the boys. A cradle roll exercise for the enrollment of new babies, twelve of whom were enrolled yesterday, was also given, followed by the service of luncheon to the mothers, Mrs. J. E. Todd cutting the Christmas cake. Rev. Mr. Todd led in prayer during the devotional service.

CHILDREN'S SHELTER.

The annual Christmas entertainment and treat for the children at the Shelter was held last evening, when a number of the members of the Board of Management were present for the occasion. The Christmas tree was laden with gifts for each child, distributed by Santa Claus, and the programme for the evening included the following numbers: Reading by Mr. J. Johns; banjo solo by Mr. F. Clark, reading by Miss Lillian Simons, instrumental duet by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson and Miss Margaret McCabe, vocal trio by "Three Wise Men," impersonated by three small wards, Marjorie Fitzner, Pheobe Martin and Clara Dayton, and vocal duet by two little boys of the Shelter, Eddie and Ernie Hood. An appropriate Christmas address was given by the president of the Children's Aid Society, Rev. Dr. Blagrave.

BOMB KILLS TWO AND INJURES 12

BALDWIN, N.Y., Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Two persons were killed, about a dozen injured, and twelve wooden buildings destroyed to-day in an explosion authorities believe might have been caused by a bomb set off in the "shoemakers' war."

Last week District Attorney Edwards of Nashua County, learned that Samuel Acarbi, a shoemaker with a shop in the Baldwin tavern, received a letter threatening to blow up the hotel if the cobbler did not cease a house to house canvas for trade. This morning the tavern was torn almost board from board by an explosion that rocked the town, killed the shoemaker's wife and infant, and injured Acarbi himself.

ALIENS FOUND ON BARREN ISLE

Abandoned After Paying Smuggler To Take Them To U. S.

NEAR WINDSOR.

WINDSOR, Dec. 23—Marooned on Peche Island, where he and his wife and two young children were abandoned by an alien smuggler, John Farazyn, a native of Belgium, was found yesterday morning by John Frue, an employee of the Detroit & Windsor Ferry Company, by whom the island is owned.

Farazyn told Frue and Riverside police that he, with his family, came to the border from Montreal and had been induced to embark in the smuggler's motor boat under cover of darkness in the belief that they would be landed on the American shore. For this they paid $150. The smuggler, instead of landing Farazyn and his family at the other side of the international boundary, left them on the bleak and driftwood-strewn beach of the island. He told them to walk about a quarter of a mile, where they would find themselves on the outskirts of Detroit.

It was only after the distracted mother had become half-delirious with the darkness and the biting cold and the hopelessness of their situation that she began to scream. Her cries were heard by the caretaker, who went out and found the almost overcome family. It was 3 a.m. when they were found. He took them to warmth and food, and contrived to learn their story.

COUPLE KILLED AT ESPANOLA

SUDBURY, Ont., Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—Struck by a C. P. R. freight train at Espanola Station crossing, Albert Lamotte, 43, and his wife, aged 40, were killed instantly about 8 o'clock last evening.

The couple were driving with a horse and cutter and a dense fog prevailed at the time. The horse escaped harm. Lamotte was foreman of the flasher mill at the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills at Espanola, 65 miles west of here. Surviving are four children.

LEGION NOTES

Last night the G.W.V.A. Hall was crowded to capacity when the Canadian Legion euchre dance and draw was held. Some 1,500 people were present, some playing euchre and others indulging in dancing. One and all expressed satisfaction at the accommodation provided for the occasion.

The effects of the new steam heating plant just installed by Messrs. Wallace and Smith was noticed, the building now being comfortably heated. This is a decided improvement, and the officers of the Legion are to be congratulated upon the improvements effected at the present quarters which are being readily appreciated both by members of the Legion and the general public who use the hall from time to time for various social activities.

The decorations for last night's occasion were very pretty and gave a decidedly seasonable effect, the whole interior of the building being very tastefully decorated, and great credit is due to the chairman of the committee, Comrade N. C. Rowe, ably assisted by Comrades Hurley, McGill, and Payne, who were responsible for organizing and carrying out the greatest enterprise of its kind ever attempted since the inception of the returned soldier movement in the city.

A feature of the evening was the draw for ten geese, which took place at the conclusion of the euchre game. The draw was made by the vice-president, J. A. Abraham, who thanked the many patrons for their support, remarking that it was by their efforts that the Legion was able to carry on its relief work, reminding them that the entire proceeds were used solely for relief purposes.

He concluded his remarks by expressing a wish that everybody present would enjoy a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year. The result of the draw is published on another column of The Examiner.

CANADA SETTING POST-WAR PACE SAYS MINISTER

Hon. James Malcolm Addresses Commercial Travellers' Association.

NO PESSIMISM.

Says No Nation Has Approached Dominion's Recent Expansion.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—That Canada's per capita favorable trade balance was greater than that of any other country in the world, and that Canada's trade in the past few years was making tremendous strides, which ought to dispel all thoughts of pessimism, were facts forcibly brought home to the members of the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada last night by the Hon. James Malcolm, Minister of Trade and Commerce. The occasion was the annual banquet of the association, and the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward was crowded to capacity with men enthusiastically entering into the spirit of their annual festivity.

Predominating Note.

"Canada" was the predominating note of each of the speeches, for the subjects of the addresses were all in some manner related to the welfare of the Dominion. Dr. A. L. McCrimmon, proposing a toast to Canada, urged the development of a great manhood and close association with the British Empire, as the means for overcoming the national problems. Very Rev. Dean L. Norman Tucker of London, responding to the toast, declared that Canada stood in the most strategic position of all countries in the world; Hon. James Malcolm, also replying, delivered an optimistic review of Canada's trade: E. A. Lapierre, M.P. for Nipissing, proposing the toast to transportation, urged the necessity of solving the railway problems, and W. D. Robb, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, declared that the solution of those problems lay in the bringing of immigrants and settlers to the Dominion.

Briefly outlining the work that his department was doing in an effort to develop Canada's foreign trade, Hon. James Malcolm said that it had been no unimportant factor in bringing about the very satisfactory state of the trade with the world. The fact that the Dominion's trade balance was greater per capita than any other country in the world, he believed, was extremely significant.

Quarter Billion Dollars.

He pointed out that the export trade for the last year had totalled one and one-quarter billions of dollars, approximately eight times greater than that of 1900, while the imports for the year were $927,500,000, or nearly six times that of 1900.

"This," Mr. Malcolm said, "is good business. It is but stating the simple fact to say that no country in the world has approached the Dominion in trade expansion during the post-war period."

Pointing out that some critics claimed Canada to be almost entirely dependent upon her trade with Great Britain for her trade prosperity, he said that that was as it should be, but that nevertheless out of 31 countries with which the Dominion traded during the past year, she had had a favorable trade balance with all but six. Another significant fact stressed by Mr. Malcolm was the reduction in the unfavorable trade balance with the United States, a reduction of some $75,000,000 since 1921. While in 1921-22 it was $211,000,000, he said, in 1925-26, it was only $134,000,000.

There had also been a substantial decrease in the importation of manufactured and semi-manufactured goods, according to Mr. Malcolm, and, quoting figures, he showed that there was a favorable balance in manufactured and semi-manufactured goods amounting to $16,000,000.

"Pessimists, I think, have gone quite out of fashion," he said.

Turning to trade treaties which had been negotiated within the last few years, he said that the greater part of the unfavorable comment they had excited were chiefly of a factional or sectional nature. He said that, while exports were important, it was equally important to know where and how to buy, and it was here that treaties were valuable.

Concluding, he urged the support of the commercial travellers in the work of his department, for, he said, he needed the support of all to be able to play his part to the full in the development of the country and the enhancement of its prosperity.

Despite the fact that Canadian railways faced the greatest possible problem — that of possessing more railway mileage, as compared with population, than any other country in the world, W. D. Robb, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, said that they were doing exceptionally well, and were fast becoming paying concerns.

Pointing out that the surplus over operating expenses of the Canadian National Railways last year had been $32,000,000 Mr. Robb said that there was every indication that the net surplus for 1926 would be $45,000,000.

Turning from transportation to colonization, Mr. Robb declared that greater population was the solution to the problem facing the railways. It was of the utmost importance in his opinion that the population remains as far as possible, of British extraction. He suggested that instead of the present regulation permitting one farm-inexperienced immigrant to every five agriculturists, the railways should be authorized to bring but five inexperienced men for every one agriculturist. Quoting statistics Mr. Robb said that there was no doubt but that Canada was able to assimilate a greaer influx of population than at present.

During the evening E. A. Lapierre, M.P., was presented with an associate membership in the Commercial Travellers' Association by J. Harry Dodgson, past president. Following the addresses an extensive musical and entertainment programme was carried out. F. J. Zammers, president, presided at the banquet, and acted as toastmaster.

Marie Tempest, the talented actress who in her long career on the stage has made the acquaintance of celebrities the world over, is writing her autobiography. In one respect, says Miss Tempest, the work will be absolutely unique, in that it will contain no unkind reference to anyone.

WEDDING BELLS.

FROST—DUSTIN.

On December 18th, at 1.30 o'clock, St. Paul's United Church, Avenue road, Toronto, was the scene of an extremely pretty wedding when Velma Frances, only daughter of Mrs. Bertha Ames Dustin, Oakwood avenue, Toronto, became the bride of Mr. Harold Raeberne Frost, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Frost, Aylmer street, Peterboro. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. W. Harold Young, M.A., B.D., while Mr. F. A. Watson presided at the organ. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her uncle, Mr. Gordon J. Dunbar, of Sherbrooke, Que., and looked charming in a French frock of poudre blue georgette over rose petal pink, trimmed with scalloped Swiss lace in natural shade. A hat of poudre blue with gold lace was worn, and the bride carried a bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley. During the signing of the register "Because" was rendered very beautifully by Mr. Albert David. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Wisteria room at the Carls-Rite, where a splendid dinner was served to a large number of guests.

Immediately after the reception the bride and groom left for a short trip, the bride travelling in a frock of cocoa brown georgette, with hat to match, and Persian lamb wrap. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Frost will reside in Sudbury, where Mr. Frost has been appointed manager of the Bell Telephone Co.

A CONCRETE THAT'S LIKE CORAL.

"Gassing" concrete to give it added lightness is a novel idea recently developed in Sweden. While the concrete, a mixture of sand, gravel and cement, is still soft, gas is introduced into the mixture. This, says Popular Science Monthly, has the same effect on the concrete as yeast does on bread, filling it with small holes. The concrete so produced is said to be just as strong as the ordinary product, but much lighter, requiring less steel to support it.

have gone into effect on Jan. 1, as against a duty of only 70 crowns $2.10 on flour from countries having most-favored nation treatment. The higher duty would have effectually killed the large flour trade Canada has built up in Czecho-Slovakia since the war. The agreement will also be of great value to the Canadian agricultural implement, automobile, fish and rubber goods industries.

"Imports of Czecho-Slovakian goods into Canada last year were valued at $1,272,045. They consist of a large number of items, mostly manufactured goods, no one of which in itself runs into a large amount. It is of interest to note that the intermediate tariff granted to these goods is in many cases the same as the general tariff which heretofore applied, and in many other items only about 2½ per cent less. For instance, china tableware, which is one of the largest Czecho-Slovakian imports into Canada, pays a duty of 27½ per cent. under the intermediate tariff, exactly the same as under the general tariff. Likewise worsteds, another of the larger items of Czecho-Slovakian goods imported, pay 35 per cent duty under both general and intermediate tariffs, while serges pay 25 per cent. under the general tariff, and but 2½ per cent. less under the intermediate. Many articles of glassware imported from Czecho-Slovakia also pay the same rate under both general and intermediate tariffs and others pay only 2½ per cent. less under the intermediate.

"The treaty is therefore considered to be a very favorable one from the Canadian point of view. In addition it protects Canada on all goods now free but on which Czecho-Slovakia may later impose a duty and and insures that Canada will participate equally with other countries in import quotas imposed to restrict imports of certain goods. This latter is of special value to Canadian automobile manufacturers.

Consular Offices

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 23 (Canadian Press)—Two new consular offices, one in Fort William and one in Winnipeg, will be opened by the Czecho Slovakian government, on January 1, it was announced by the Czecho Slovakia Consulate General here yesterday.

John H. Pallek, a merchant of Fort William, is the appointee for the Great Lake district which will be composed of Rainy River, Kenora Thunder Bay, the Algoma districts, and the county of Sudbury, while the Winnipeg post will be held by Max Steinkoff, a Winnipeg barrister. The provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and the Yukon territory will be covered by the Western Consul.

The duties of the new consuls will be to promote trade between Canada and Czecho Slovakia, vise passports, legalize documents, and look after the welfare of Czecho Slovakia immigrants.

THURSDAY, DEC. 23, 1926.

. . . UPBUILDER OF THE HOME . . . NOURISHER OF THE COMMUNITY SPIRIT . . . ART LETTERS AND SCIENCE OF THE COMMON PEOPLE.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Congratulations are in order for His Worship Mayor Holloway upon being returned to office without a contest for a second term in the Mayor's chair.

Although there have been several departures from the custom, it has usually been the practice in Peterboro to accord a Mayor the courtesy of a second term unopposed, and so long as the duties of the office are as well filled as they have been in the case of the present chief magistrate no one will be inclined to cavil.

Mayor Holloway has given excellent service.

He has interested himself in public activities generally, has represented his fellow-citizens with dignity in meeting visiting delegations, has proven a capable presiding officer at the deliberations of the Council, and has earned the confidence that is indicated by his re-election by acclamation.

His Worship will undoubtedly endeavour to repay the people of Peterboro for their handsome Christmas gift by another twelve months of good service as Mayor of the city.

ALDERMANIC MATERIAL.

Nominations for the Council will be held this evening, and it is to be hoped that out of the proceedings will come a field of good candidates.

The Utilities Commission race, as was expected, has brought out a strong list of aspirants, but making full allowance for the important duties carried on by the Commission, it can truthfully be said that the Council offers a wider field of service and has to deal with a much more varied agenda than have the members of the Utilities Commission.

The citizen who is in a position to offer his services to the community should remember that fact, and realize that the work undertaken by the Mayor and Aldermen affects the citizens generally and is of importance to everyone.

Doubtless there will be men nominated tonight who have up to the present had no thought of becoming candidates, and whose first inclination will be to refrain from qualifying for the aldermanic race.

May The Examiner suggest to them that there is an opportunity before them of doing a very real work on behalf of Peterboro, and that such an opportunity should not be discarded as something of little value and moment.

THE BASEBALL SCANDAL.

Peterboro lovers of baseball—and they are legion—will share in the general feeling of sorrow that the black shadow of scandal has fallen upon such highly regarded baseball celebrities as Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, two of the greatest players of all time.

Particularly in the case of Speaker will local regret be great, inasmuch as the former Cleveland manager had for a number of years visited this district and won the regard and liking of many Peterboro people.

There will be a widespread hope that the two famous exponents of baseball will be able to establish their innocence and refute the charge that they conspired to "throw" a game upon which heavy bets were to be made.

So far as Speaker is concerned, the only evidence against him is the story of Player Leonard, who has refused to face the ex-Cleveland manager, despite the request of the latter for a hearing.

Judge Landis in publishing the evidence in the case has discounted the value of the testimony of Leonard on this account, and there is natural wonder why, under the circumstances, the Commissioner allowed the name of Speaker to be besmirched by the publication of a story which he himself apparently does not accept.

His many friends here will hope that "Spoke" will be able to vindicate himself as he declares that he will do.

MOTOR TOURIST TRAFFIC.

Motor tourist traffic from the United States into Canada is providing a considerable source of revenue which promises to increase rapidly. According to an estimate by A. W. Campbell, Dominion Commissioner of Highways, the expenditures of American motor visitors amounted to $194,000,000 for the first ten months of this year, as compared with an estimate of $188,555,400 for the full twelve months of last year.

These figures, it is asserted, are based on conservative estimates. They indicate the great value of the tourist traffic, which is growing yearly and which promises to reach very large proportions as the tourist attractions of Canada become more generally known, highways are extended and improved and greater tourist facilities provided. Against them must be placed a fairly large expenditure by the increasing numbers of Canadians who pay holiday visits to the United States. Estimates of these by Secretary Hoover of the United States, published some weeks ago, show, as is to be expected, that they are greatly lower in the aggregate than those of Americans in Canada, and that there is a large balance in favor of Canada.

Figures of the numbers of cars crossing at different points in 1925 emphasize the advantages of points along the water boundary where bridges exist. At Niagara Falls and Bridgeburg 820,000 cars entered, as against 290,000 at Windsor, the next highest figure, and 50,000 at Sarnia and Port Huron. The ferry crossings at Sault Ste. Marie and on the St. Lawrence fall greatly below these numbers, the total for Kingston, Brockville and Prescott together being only about 13,000. It is surprising to find that the entries at Quebec points exceeded the latter figure by only 1,000 cars. New Brunswick entries reached the high figure of 460,000 cars, and those over the Los Angeles-Vancouver highway into British Columbia 70,000.

NOT MUCH CHANCE OF THIS.

Hon. E. C. Drury probably did the United Farmers of Ontario a good turn when he succeeded in securing the tabling of a resolution before the recent convention calling for a drastic change in the present form of government.

The resolution aimed at doing away with party politics and establishing a sort of magnified County Council in which all the Ministers would be elected by Parliament.

Under this system there would be no such a thing as a Government bill.

Measures introduced would be departmental bills, and the interested Minister would have to stand upon his own responsibility.

The party system is far from perfect; it can be attacked from many angles, but at its worst it is more satisfactory than the scheme proposed in this half-baked resolution could possibly be.

Under such a plan no one would know what he was voting for.

A candidate might outline a certain policy he favoured, but that would mean nothing if he happened to be the only member elected with such an opinion.

Parties, as we know them under the present system, are committed to certain lines of action, and the candidates are pledged to support such policies.

The elector is given a choice of policies and votes accordingly.

He would be voting in complete darkness if any such system as proposed in this U.F.O. resolution were to be adopted.

THE PETERBORO-MARMORA ROAD.

A summer's shuttling over the roads of three counties—Peterboro, Northumberland and Hastings—confirmed the opinion that the Ontario Government should assume as Provincial highways the road from Peterboro to Marmora, as well as the road from Peterboro to Belleville by way of Hastings, Campbellford and Stirling. With the Peterboro-Lindsay highway laid down for construction this year, there is no hope that these eastern roads might be undertaken at an early date, but if they are completed within the four years of the new Government the people of this district will no doubt be well satisfied.

There should be no suggestion of an alternative between these two proposed highways easterly from Peterboro. If the one to Belleville recommends itself on the ground of economy and convenience, the other to Marmora may be urged upon the additional reason of moral obligation to a barren, neglected, poverty-infested part of the Province that lies adjacent to this road in both Peterboro and Hastings Counties. Unpleasant headlines in the newspapers from time to time have reminded the people of Ontario of the problem within those sterile sections, as as a remedy of the conditions, which have more than once flared out in shame and scandal to the whole Province, a large appropriation by the Highways Department would undoubtedly prove of valuable assistance.

It is a mere platitude to say that highways have been the arteries of civilization, but it is relevant to call the public horror last winter at the lack of even civilizing influences in and around home a few miles of the present Peterboro-Marmora road. The moral necessity of providing first-rate traffic conditions [illegible] through these two counties tends to elicit sharper phrases than are used in this survey.

Central Ontario needs more than one trunk road east and west. The Government's program has been up to the present to build a thoroughly modern highway along the old Kingston road, with improved roads branching northerly up into the counties. Such is the Peterboro-Port Hope road, and in Hastings County Tweed, Marmora and Madoc have adequate traffic routes south to Belleville and other lake towns, but another east-west highway is needed paralleling the lakeshore road. Its natural course is through Tweed, Madoc, Marmora, Havelock, Norwood, Peterboro, Lindsay and "points west." It would link up these towns and the intervening rural communities, and would invite tourists to the lake regions of Hastings, Peterboro and Victoria Counties.

Hon. J. R. Cooke, of North Hastings, and W. H. Bradburn, of Peterboro, have the opportunity, and also the duty, of emphasizing in the Provincial Government's councils the planning and undertaking of this highway, and they have the next four years to advocate it until it is assumed for construction.

NO CREDIT TO US.

Sufficient evidence has been produced in the customs investigation at Vancouver to make one thing, at least, definitely clear. It is that there can be no legitimate excuse for the granting of Dominion license to wholesale liquor companies in any Canadian Province where the Provincial Government is in control of the liquor business. The Vancouver evidence proved to the hilt that such liquor companies, at least where they are located in Provinces bordering on the United States, depend for their success upon their ability to smuggle liquor into the Republic. Also, as sometimes happens, ship it out of Canada, consigned to some foreign port which it never reaches, though it frequently finds its way back into Canada and into the hands of the bootleggers. It has yet to be shown that there is any necessity for such companies in Government liqur control Provinces. In these Provinces the Government is the only agency having a legal right to purchase liquors by wholesale and to distribute at retail. The Governments buy their liquors from the manufacturers or their agents. The wholesale jobber has no place in the system. While he may not be breaking the laws of Canada or of any of the Provinces in which he happens to be located, he makes his living by breaking the laws of the United States. I maintain that it is an unneighborly act on the part of the Canadian Government to license businesses that flourish only by breaking United States law. Moreover, as has been proven, we endanger our own peace by so doing. The concern that is careless about observing United States law is liable to be just as careless in obeying Canadian law. Thus we have cargoes of liquor from these Canadian concerns shipped elsewhere, and mysteriously arriving back in Canada to be bootlegged illegally. The best thing we can do for our peace of mind and for our honor's sake as a country is to put all these doubtful export liquor houses out of business for good. For the most part their business is illegal and they are no credit to us. —Alberta Farmer.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again very quiet and the volume of business transacted was small. The trade in cash grain on the domestic market was also inactive, but the feeling was steady.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were well maintained under a moderate demand.

The volume of business done in all lines of millfeed was fairly large and prices ruled steady. A good steady trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and values were unchanged.

The undertone to the egg market was strong and indications are that prices will go higher in the near future owing to the good demand. The receipts were 169 cases.

There was little demand for potatoes and the tone of the market continued easy. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.70 to $1.75 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.55 per bag, and Quebec White stock at $1.40 per bag of 90 pounds, in bulk, ex-track.

Only a small trade is done in butter, but prices were steady. The receipts were 40 packages.

The cheese market was without any new feature to note, business being quiet in all directions, and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 42 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).— Grain prices underwent a general setback yesterday owing mainly to the bearish influence of the government report telling of enlarged acreage of domestic winter wheat. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1 1-8 to 1 7-8c net lower; with corn 1 3-8 to 1 1-2c down; oats 1-4 to 3-4 and 7-8c off, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Prospects of colder weather tended to pull down the corn market. Oats give way to sympathy with declines in other grain.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.85.

Sterling cables $4.85 5-8.

A PREACHER'S CONFESSION.

Editor Examiner:

The following is a partial copy of a confession made by a preacher over one hundred miles from Peterboro:

"We ministers have been preaching on a large variety of subjects these late years. When our audience dwindled we ascribed the fact to every cause under the sun except the topic and contents of our sermons. We tried to hold our people together by occasional get-together meetings, by banquets, by rallies by pageants, by talented choirs, and by soloists of national repute. The sight of those long rows of vacant pews every Sunday began to affect our nerves, and at times made us desperate; and we ransacked our libraries and studios for sermon topics that were more unusual, more sensational, more outlandish, and freakish, than those of the past; and we added new features to our church service. This up-to-date modern preaching has proven to be a miserable failure, and the only remedy is back to the gospel." The undersigned withholds comment.

ROASTED PEANUTS GOOD FOR REGULAR FOOD

The peanut is really a legume and not a nut. It is one of the class of legumes which bury their pods in the earth to ripen instead of raising them in the air. It is a native of Tropical America, but is also grown extensively in the southern part of the United States, and even as far north as Virginia, where the crop produced is the largest in the United States. Over thirty million bushels of peanuts are sold each year in this country alone.

The use of the peanut as a food started about the time of the Civil War when the Northern Soldiers found it growing wild in the South and learned that it made good food. Most people do not consider the peanut a food, but rather a delicacy, similar to confections, to be used on circus days or holidays.

The raw peanut contains such a combination of starch proteid and fat that it is a very hearty food and difficult to digest, but when it is roasted the starch is converted into dextrose and it is then quite easily digested.

A very large amount of proteid is found in the peanut, even as high as 30%, also 45% fat.

Peanuts may be purchased already roasted, or they may be roasted in the oven at home, as soon as you experiment to find how much roasting is necessary to properly dextronize the starch. Moderate roasting for a long time is the best method, for if the peanuts are too well roasted, the proteid is destroyed and the dextrose turned into ash.

Peanut butter may also be made at home by simply grinding the roasted peanuts, after the skin has been removed from the nuts. It is necessary to use a good grinder that has a pulverizing attachment.

Peanut butter that is purchased in the stores often contains a large amount of flour, so you should only purchase your peanut butter where you are sure that it is made only from peanuts.

A small amount of peanut butter may be used with any meal without interfering with the digestion of other foods, but you will find it an agreeable change to make peanuts the principal part of a meal in place of meat, eggs, fish or any of the other proteids, using along with the peanuts a salad and non-starchy vegetables.

Peanut butter makes a delicious filling for sandwiches. Use only real whole wheat bread, adding butter and a leaf of lettuce, if desired.

The oil found in the peanut is very desirable to use as food, having a very agreeable taste and being easily digested. This peanut oil may be purchased in any large city, although all stores do not handle it, and it may be necessary to call up several before you find one that carries it in stock.

Try this peanut oil in place of olive oil. Use it as a dressing for salads without the addition of anything, such as vinegar, lemon juice or salt, simply using the plain oil, and you will find the flavor a pleasing addition to your salad. Another dressing can be made by mixing the peanut butter with cream and spreading this on the salad.

Probably the worst way to use peanuts is between meals, which is the way you have been using them. Try adding them as an important part of your every-day diet.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

APPLES

By Dr. Frank Crane.

We have just had a national apple week.

Millions of apples were given to orphan asylums, public schools and other institutions.

There was a bumper apple crop this year.

The government report says that the production of apples this year was more than seventy-eight million barrels. This means about three hundred and twenty apples per person.

The favorable weather this year is responsible for the finest crop on record and prices were very low.

The apple is the first fruit to be mentioned in the history of the world. It was an apple that Eve ate.

Most other kinds of fruit are called some sort of apple. Potatoes are earth apples—pommes de terre—oranges are apples of China, tomatoes are love apples, and so on.

The apple contains a mild acid which is very beneficial to most systems, although some people cannot eat them.

So healthful is the apple as an article of steady diet that we have a proverb "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

Many people eat an apple just before going to bed.

It has been noted that those who do not drink or have given up the drinking habit are very fond of apples.

They seem to be in some way a substitute for liquor.

The apple is the friend of man and the ideal food. It not only contains nourishment and vitamines, but it has sufficient bulk to be of value in the intestines.

Every encouragement should be given to the production of apples and to the wide consumption. They are not only a pleasant, but a health-giving, food.

Children eat them at all times and their consumption does not seem to take away their appetite for other foods.

The only thing that seems to be against their popularity is that they are common and can easily be procured. If every apple cost a dollar apiece and was hard to get there would be discovered in them wonderful medicinal values. But things like water and air and apples, though so vital and necessary to life, are disregarded simply because they are so common.

Truly Wholesome

A baking powder may be a fairly efficient leavening agent and yet contain ingredients that make it unwholesome. If you use any baking powder containing alum, food products baked with it are apt to have a bitter taste, and, according to scientists, will not be good for the health. Far better to use a truly wholesome baking powder, even if it does cost a few cents more per can.

Magic Baking Powder "contains no alum"

Nor has it any other harmful ingredient. It contains only phosphate, starch and soda—all of the very finest grades, expertly blended. It never adds a bitter taste to the nice things you bake, but makes them light, white and truly wholesome. Insist on "Magic" and refuse all substitutes.

LONDON PAPERS DISCUSS BACK DEBT MANIFESTO

Minimize Danger of a European Coalition Against States.

GAIN IN LENIENCY.

Doubt That There Will Be Any Change in Policy.

LONDON, December 22. — Columbia professors' manifesto on war debts is generally welcomed by British newspapers, but th ..how little disposition to inte.pret it as indicative of a real change in the attitude of the American people. That they say, will alter only with t..e, but the manifesto is called a step in the right direction.

London papers also take pains to minimize the danger—foreseen in the manifesto—of a European coalition against the United States; they say the document exaggerates the degree of odium incurred by the United States, at least in this country.

"The real value of the memorandum," says the London Times, "lies in the evidence it affords that a section of educated opinion in the Eastern States accepts the views and arguments which have been continuously pressed upon America by her European creditors. The signatories of the memorandum lay great stress, a much exaggerated stress, as far as Britain is concerned, upon the 'growing odium' which their country has incurred in Europe. Reinforced, as they assuredly will be by the steady and growing pressure of economic factors, from which there is no escape, the views expressed in the manifesto may gradually permeate the masses and politician:. But the process must be slow, while for the present it is to be feared that this interesting excursion of the faculty into the domain of high politics may be misinterpreted and misused to support conflicting continental policies."

The Daily Telegraph, commenting on the alleged danger of a European coalition against the United States, observes:

"That is an argument which we are less inclined to discuss because we can hardly conceive the notion of such a coalition being seriously put forward in this country."

"The manifesto should not be taken, at any rate at the present juncture as vitally indicative of American opinion as a whole," says the Daily News, 'but there is hope now, for the professors do not base their case exclusively on sentimental considerations. They emphasize the growing dangers to American trade resultant from America turning herself into a debt-collecting corporation.

"This fresh warning may well have salutary results in quarters where sentiment finds an impassable barrier. The manifesto is important, not in the actual expression of opinion converted but in its effect on the mind of the infidel."

The Star says the manifesto is an acceptable Christmas gesture, but there is small chance of its being turned into a Christmas present.

"America is only starting to face the facts," the paper adds. "She drove a hard bargain with those who helped her win the war—in, of course a subsidiary capacity—and she very quickly discovered that she was wielding a double edged weapon. Cancellation or modification of the war debts will not come yet, but the inevitable force of circumstances will drive America to it in the long run."

The Westminster Gazette says the fostering of opinion in favor of debt cancellation must come from within, and deprecates any appeals by Britain against the funding arrangement she entered into deliberately.

FIRE DESTROYS WINDSOR CHURCH

Anglican Church of Ascension Damaged To Extent of $75,000.

CHIEF OVERCOME.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—Fire Chief Clarence J. Defields and two of his men were temporarily overcome by smoke when fire did approximately $75,000 damage to the Anglican Church of the Ascension at noon yesterday.

The fire started from an overheated furnace in the basement and rapidly spread through the church building. The church itself is a complete loss, but heroic efforts on the part of the firemen saved the parish house, which is connected with the main building by a passage way.

The loss included the destruction of a fine pipe organ and several valuable memorial windows.

The rector, Rev. Harry B. Ashby, dashed into the church and made his way through dense smoke to the altar, where he secured his clerical vestments, the altar linen, imported from Ireland just this year and the valuable Communion vessels. These he was able to carry to safety.

The church was one of the finest structures of its kind in the border cities and was built in 1907. Insurance to the amount of about one-third of the loss is carried.

NEW RECTOR TAKES CHARGE OF CHURCH

Marmora Anglicans Hear Rev. A. B. Caldwell With Great Attention.

MARMORA, Dec. 22.—The Rev. Arthur B. Caldwell, rector of Wyebridge for the past six years and now rector of Marmora, took his first services in the parish on Sunday, officiating at St. Paul's morning and evening and at Holy Trinity in the afternoon. The new rector, who is a Sunday school enthusiast, gave an inspirational talk at the morning session of St. Paul's Sunday school. At the morning service he also expressed his thanks to the congregation for their confidence in inviting him to be rector At this service, the choir, augmented for the occasion, gave a magnificent rendition of the anthem, "Prepare ye the way" by Charles Garratt. The reverend gentleman chose as his text Philippians 4:4, "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say Rejoice." He remarked at the outset that St. Paul did not bid us to rejoice in wealth, strength, pleasures or other good things of life but in the Lord. We should rejoice in the Lord as a real brother. All our trials and struggles have been undergone and understood by our Lord Jesus Christ, therefore we can cast ourselves upon Him. Again we should rejoice in Him as our Saviour. God likes us to see that a full redemption was wrought for us through our Saviour. If we believe our sins are forgiven, why shouldn't we be happy? If we find in Him all we need, if we find pardon, comfort, peace and joy, well may we rejoice. God gives us guidance, too, through Jesus Christ. He who begun a good work in us will carry us on to its triumphant end. He took upon Himself our human nature that the life He should live might guide us. We should rejoice also in the prospect Jesus gives of future happiness. Rev. Caldwell here pictured the delight with which children expected the approaching Christmas and continued, "Day by day we are drawing nearer to Him who gave His life for us, who will give the happiest ending to our life's journey? No one but Jesus, for no one else has prepared for it. We find it easy to rejoice when the heart is light but hard when the heart is heavy. We must bear our trials and sufferings with patience. Often we find that the greatest sufferer is the brightest Christian and such examples make us feel ashamed at our complainings. Let us at this approaching Christmas learn to rejoice more and more in the Lord.

The large congregation present followed the very earnest discourse with marked attention. At evensong the Rev. Caldwell delivered another earnest discourse on the enjoyment of salvation.

W. T. WOOD ASPIRES FOR WARDENSHIP

Millbrook's Reeve Seeks the Honor For Durham.

The warden of the counties of Northumberland and Durham next year will be either William T. Wood, reeve of Millbrook, or Milton J. Elliott, reeve of Bowmanville. Both are expected to be re-elected and although they may not have the Council arena entirely to themselves at the opening of the January sessions, it is probable that the final choice will be confined to them. Mr. Wood has been chairman of the Finance committee this year and Mr. Elliott has presided over the Property committee. They are capable and popular and experienced in the details of municpal affairs.

Reeve Wood as Fmance minister had to his credit this year the suggestion for the funding of the counties road debt which was approved by the Council and the Ontario Department of Highways. By this agreement the Council paid $60,000 to the Government this year toward the cost of provincial highways, and will pay the same amount annually for the next three years.

The wardenship in 1927 reverts to the Durham group in the Council.

This year Reeve McCubbin of Percy township received the honor in Northumberland's turn and in retiring leaves two strong candidates in Messrs. Wood and Elliott.

PRE-WAR FLEET OF THE EMPIRE IS DISAPPEARING

First Time Left Without Reserve Force of Line Ships.

FOUR SCRAPPED.

Two Super-Dreadnoughts Under Construction To Replace Discarded Vessels.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press)—With the exception of four battleships of the Iron Duke class, Great Britain's pre-war fleet has disappeared, and for the first time in 200 years the British navy is left without a reserve force of ships of the line.

Four of the costly monsters that formed the backbone of the grand fleet at Jutland and cost nearly eight million pounds to build, are now being prepared for discard, says the naval correspondent of the Westminster Gazette.

They are the Centurion, King George V, Thunderer, and Ajax and, though they are outclassed by the post-Jutland ships which are to replace them, they are far superior to many vessels which are being retained by foreign powers. Their passing is in accordance with the naval treaty signed at Washington five years ago.

Super-Dreadnoughts

To replace these discarded ships the super-dreadnoughts Nelson and Rodney have been built and will be ready to join the British fleet during the summer of 1927. These huge vessels, considered far and away the most powerful fighting ships in the world, says the correspondent, carry nine 16-inch guns in three turrets.

They are the first British ships to have their guns disposed in this way, and in many other respects will be unique.

PROTEST RULING AGAINST LANDING

Passengers on Olympic Not Allowed To Leave For Canada.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—At a meeting of representative Canadian citizens held on board the steamer Olympic to-day in New York Harbor, a resolution was passed requesting the Canadian Government, through its Washington representative, to make representation to the United States Government, with a view to exempting Canadian citizens from the regulations of the United States immigration laws, whereby, when Canadians arrive at American ports after 5.30 in the afternoon, en route to Canada, they are treated as aliens and not allowed to land until the following day.

Several passengers on the Olympic to-day had relatives who had come from Canada to meet them, but were unable to communicate with them.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

To Faith, the quiet of that Saturday evening seemed like the lull between storms, but her tired nerves were grateful for it. Joy sat close beside her at the cleared table, her tow head bent low over her arithmetic. Across the table, Mr. Lane sat tilted back in the wicker chair, dragged in from the living room, his tired, shoeless feet crossed upon a dining chair, his evening paper folded at the editorial page, which he scanned with tired eyes that looked wise behind their spectacles.

"I just can't get this old problem," Joy tapped angrily with her pencil upon her tablet. "The answer in the back of the book must be wrong! I've worked it three times, and it just won't come out right."

"Let me see it," Faith smiled into the angry, knotted up little face, the tide of affection flowing out upon the child for whom no one ever seemed to have much time. She took Joy's pencil and ran with expert swiftness down the columns of figures. "Oh, here's your mistake. What is seven times nine?"

"Fifty-six!" Joy answered promptly.

When the problem had been corrected, and five minutes of that precious peace between storms had been expended in drilling Joy in the "seven times" table, Faith relaxed over her sewing again. She was making shorter and smaller a lovely white crepe de chine costume slip, trimmed at the camisole top with real lace, which Cherry had bought for her trousseau, charging it to Mr. Cluny.

For Cherry. Always something for Cherry. But there was no bitterness in the thought now. That warm tide of affection rose higher in her throat at the very thought of Cherry. Of course she had given up her date with Bob so that Cherry might have her one last fling.

Not that Bob looked as if he would collaborate in making it a real "fling," for he had been almost sullen, his blue eyes hard and angry when Faith had told him that her mother, tired out from her afternoon of curiosity-ridden, malicious callers, needed her. And not even the sight of Cherry, incredibly beautiful in a new gold-colored chiffon, trimmed with metal lace, that exactly matched the gold strands among the copper of her curls, and the gold of her eyes, had wiped the frown from his handsome, lean, brown face.

"Mighty foolish of you to let Cherry run off with Bob Hathaway this evening," Jim Lane lowered his paper and glanced at his daughter over the top of his glasses, as if he had picked up her thought waves like a human radio receiving station. "I wouldn't trust her with a man as far as I could throw a bull by the tail."

Faith caught her breath sharply, but she smiled on him with misty-eyed fondness. "I care more about Cherry than about anything else. Dad. If she can get him, it would solve a big problem for us, wouldn't it? Bob used to—to be in love with Cherry. I'm hoping—" She stopped, reminded of Joy's presence by the magnetic power of the child's wide, curious eyes upon her.

"Don't make a fool of yourself, daughter," Jim Lane said gruffly. "It don't pay to go around playing God for folks. Well, guess I'll go see if your Ma wants anything."

"Faith, why didn't you let Chester Hart come over, like Cherry wanted you to?" Joy closed her arithmetic with a bang. "He's always brings a box of candy."

"Because I don't like Chester Hart very much, honey," Faith smiled. "But for heaven's sake, don't tell all Myrtle Street and the kids at your school that I said so. I know you don't mean any harm, honey, but it can cause a lot of trouble that you don't understand."

"All right," Joy yawned indifferently. "I don't have to go to bed at nine tonight, do I? Tomorrow's Sunday."

"Yes, you do," Faith was firm. "And it's five minutes after nine now. Take a bath and put on those clean flannelette pajamas. I mended them yesterday."

Nine thirty. Joy had gone to bed. Mr. Lane was pottering about the house on bedtime chores. Faith finished her work on the costume slip for Cherry, and took up a book that George Pruitt had sent her—Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage." Poor, lonely little Phillip, with his club foot—

Ten o'clock. What was Cherry and Bob doing? Bob had sworn that he would not take her to a restaurant to dance. Were they driving all these long hours? She shifted in her chair, read on. How could Philip love that terrible, common little Mildred? But Mildred was pathetic, too, only the author didn't seem to think so—Eleven o'clock. She was so engrossed with the story that she had not heard the car stop, or the front door open.

But the sound of voices jerked her eyes from the book. Could that be Bob Hathaway's voice, that cold, hard, angry voice, that' ripped the silence of the night like a rusty knife?"

"You'll tell Faith? Do you think for a minute I'd leave this house tonight without telling her myself? If Uncle Ralph throws you over, I'll not be the goat! It was a trick—and you know it was a trick!"

Faith dropped her book and sprang from her chair, her heart beating so wildly that her voice sounded strange and far away as she struggled to call out to them. "Cherry! Bob!"

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

PONTYPOOL, Dec. 22. —A red letter night in the history of Carscadden's S. S. No. 14 was held on Friday, Dec. 17th. It is practically a quarter of a century since any entertainment was held at night in this school. The event was a united affair, the day school and Sunday school taking part. Mr. Lorne Warman, teacher, was in charge of the day school concert and Mr. T. Malcomson and Mrs. Parker were in charge of the Sunday school part of the concert.

While the thermometer registered 15 below zero a large crowd gathered in the school, some of them walking from Pontypool, which is 2 1-2 miles away, to listen to a fine concert, consisting of dialogues, readings, recitations, drills, choruses, solos and speeches.

The chairman for the evening was Rev. A. J. Terril, who walked down from Pontypool in the extreme cold. The audience was welcomed on behalf of the Sunday school by Mr. R. Henderson, superintendent, and on behalf of the school section by Mr. John Payne, chairman of the trustee board. The dialogue, "Two Santas" was well given by the young people. Probably what made the occasion more historical was the use of benches belonging to the old Sandy Hook church, which has not been in use for many years. The arrival of Santa Claus brought the evening to a happy termination.

Mr. Cecil Lowins is still in very poor health and has a small chance for recovery.

AT ORANGE CORNERS.

ORANGE CORNERS, Dec. 23.—On Monday evening, Dec. 20, the pupils and teacher, Miss Parker, of S. S. No. 10, Emily, held their annual Christmas tree. The school was tastefully decorated in green and red paper, red bells, evergreens and holly. A large Christmas tree held many beautiful gifts, which were given out on the arrival of Santa Claus later in the evening.

Quite a lengthy programme was enjoyed by all present. It consisted of choruses, recitations, solos, drills and dialogues. The dialogues, "Ting Tung Versus O'Hafferty," "Christmas Plots" and "Uncle Hiram's Cold" were much enjoyed. An Indian drill by twelve of the pupils, after which they sat around a camp fire and sang, "Red Wing," was one of the many numbers. A Japanese love song was beautifully rendered by Miss Mildred Magee.

Telegrams were received during the evening from Santa Claus, and he arrived in plenty of time to help with the presentations of the gifts from the Christmas tree.

WOMAN TELLS ABOUT ATTACK

Gives Evidence Against "King" Benjamin of House of David.

COURT ADJOURNS.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press). — Allegations that Benjamin Purnell, "King" of the House of David Colony, criminally assaulted Mrs. Bessie Woodworth, a former member of the Colony, when she was 15 years of age, under the guise of "blood purifying" rites, were recited before Mr. Justice Weldon when the ageing leader of the cult was arraigned here today. On the stand Mrs. Woodworth retold her story, detailing the charges that Purnell attacked her and that other young girl inmates were similarly treated.

Mrs. Woodworth said she was first approached by Benjamin on February 5, 1921. She testified that she was only 15 years old at the time and was employed in the House of David Park refreshment stand. Benjamin, she said, influenced her to accompany him to his chambers and that she was there subjected to his caresses. She then proceeded to relate the details of the alleged occurrence. At the conclusion of Mrs. Woodworth's testimony the hearing was adjourned until December 30 when the record will be signed and the prosecuting atterney will ask that Purnell be bound over to Circuit Court.

A. L. KILLALY GIVES ADDRESS

Tells Kiwanians About the Growth of Canada's Canal System.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITY.

The Christmas spirit prevailed to its fullest extent at the Kiwanis Club luncheon held to-day. Doug. Paterson, as Santa Claus, presided over the Christmas tree.

A. L. Killaly, Superintendent of the Trent Canal, adressed the members, explaining in detail the growth of the system of canals from its beginning until the present day.

Phyllis Moore, of Stewart Hall, a young elocutionist, charmed her listeners with two appropriate numbers and received hearty applause for her efforts.

C. McDonald, a new member, was introduced to the members by J. John, who in an eloquent manner informed him what duties he owed to the organization of which he now was a member.

The boosters for the occasion were Art Kimmel and W. S. Merrell. The prize winners were C. McDonald, A. Moffat, I. Lillico, Hugh Niven, H. Perry and C. Saunders.

The vote of thanks to the elocutionist and the speaker was moved by J. J. Turner.

A. L. Killaly.

"In 1763, when Canada was ceded to the British by the French, there was only one canal in Canada," declared Mr. Killaly. By 1779 there were four canals. During 1817 these canals were enlarged to a width of twelve feet and to a depth of three and a half feet, as a result of the war of 1812 still being fresh in the minds of the people and a constant fear of invasion.

The legislature was petitioned to construct the Welland Canal during 1816 and again during 1818 and 1820, but rejected the petition on each occasion. However, in 1924, a private company was organized to start the work which was finished in 1829.

During 1821 an Act was passed by the Government appointing a Commission to investigate the internal navigation of Canada.

A man named Stewart, the representative for Douro, appealed to the legislature for the construction of the Trent Waterway. In 1833 a commission was appointed and they ordered the construction of a lock at Bobcaygeon.

The speaker paid tribute to the engineer, Baird, who, he declared, had, without the use of townships maps and instruments, estimated the length of the canal from Trenton to Rice Lake as being 61 miles long, with a 365 feet lift. The actual measurements, made with the use of modern instruments, show the distance to be 57 miles, with a 367 feet lift, showing very little difference.

The same engineer, he said, estimated the distance from Rice Lake to Lake Simcoe to be 110 miles with a 343 feet lift. The actual distance, measured by the modern instruments, showed the distance to be 111 miles with a 350 feet lift. "That a man could go out in those days with the equipment at his disposal that was then in vogue and get results as close as this, proved him to be a very capable man," he declared.

In 1837 a start was made on the Trent Waterway, but it was left unfinished owing to financial stringency at that time. In 1869 the Province of Ontario built locks at Young's Point and Rosedale. At this time there were five separate detached pieces of navigation.

Surveys were started in 1880 and between 1883 and 1887 locks were built at Burleigh, Lovesick, Buckhorn, and Fenelon Falls.

It was decided to construct the canal from Peterborough to Lakefield and from Balsam Lake to Lake Simcoe in 1896, the work being completed in 1904 and 1907 respectively. The completion of a lock at Couchiching in 1920 gave a through route measuring 240 miles.

THE MARKETS

Mining Trade Lighter With Tone Irregular

TORONTO, Dec. 23.— (Canadian Press.)— The mining market steadied down with lighter trading on the standard mining exchange this morning. The tone was irregular, but on the whole the market was firm. Laval Quebec strengthened 1 1-4 at 36 1-4. Argonaut eased a point at 54 and the active Consolidated West Dome was down 3-4 at 17 1-2.

Price Trend Irregular On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press.) — Gooderham and Worts, Industrial Alcohol and British Columbia Fishing were the big three on the Toronto stock exchange this morning. The first two were active and strong, but Fishing underwent a decline somewhat similar to yesterday, reaching a low of 88 and recovering to 89, a net loss of four and a half points. Alcohol strengthened a point at 29 3-8 and Gooderham and Worts finished with a gain of 7-8 at 45, after touching 46 1-8 in the session. The trend of prices was irregular. On the firm side Canners Common reached a new high at 22, up 1 1-2, and Atlantic Sugar improved one at 30. British American Oil softened two points at 80 and Davies A lost two at 29.

Wheat Prices Go Up On Low Yield Reports

CHICAGO, Dec. 23. Canadian Press. — With reduced unofficial estimates of the wheat yield in the prairie provinces confirmed, wheat prices averaged a little higher to-day. Talk was also current that for some weeks no likelihood was apparent of a burdensome accumulation of wheat in any domestic market. Opening at 1-4c off to 1-4 up, wheat soon scored a slight general advance. Corn, oats and provisions were easy, corn starting unchanged to 1-4c higher, but then undergoing a sag.

Opening prices were: Wheat, Dec., 141 1-8; May 140 5-8; corn, Dec., 74; May 82 3-8; oats, Dec., unquoted; May 50 3-8.

PRESENTATION TO F. W. MILLER

Claims of Separate School Boards Are Not Upheld.

RECEIVING GRANTS.

F. W. Miller, who for the past 30 years has been relief officer for the Central Charity Board, was presented with a beautiful walking cane by his fellow employees at the City Hall last night.

S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk, made the presentation. He spoke of the regret they all felt at the retirement of Mr. Miller but expressed pleasure at the thought that the severance of the friendship would only be an official one. Mr. Miller's relations, he said, had always been most amicable, and due to his retirement, the city would be minus a valuable officer.

Mr. Miller, in responding, thanked those present, for their beautiful gift, telling too of his regret at severing his official connection with the work.

CONDEMNED MAN UNDER ORDEAL

John Barty Given Three Weeks' Lease of Life.

HANGMAN LEAVES.

HAMILTON, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—With three weeks more of life granted him through the stay of his execution obtained from Mr. Justice Lennox at Toronto yesterday afternoon, John Barty, under sentence of death for the murder of Mrs. Nancy Cook last June, is again under an ordeal of suspense. Receipt of a message from Ottawa last evening announcing that the Minister of Justice had refused clemency to Barty placed Sheriff Regan in a quandary, but he concluded that the execution would not be held this morning. Hangman Ellis left last night for Montreal when told by the Sheriff that the execution would not take place.

Two of the jurors for the inquest which would have followed in the event of the execution turned up at the jail this morning, claiming that they had not been notified of the delay.

OBITUARY.

CHARLES RICHARD COTTON

GANANOQUE, Dec. 23. — The late Charles Richard Cotton, whose death occurred at his home on Hickory Street, Saturday, was born in Bromsgrove, England, in 1844, but most of his childhood was spent in Scotland where he received his early education. When of an age he was apprenticed as cadet in the British navy. After passing through this and receiving his discharge he came to Canada fifty-eight years ago, the first two years of which he spent in Kingston and Garden Island, being employed with the Calvin and Donnelly shipping interests. Fifty-six years ago he came to Gananoque and one year later joined the staff of the Gananoque Water Power Company. A few years later he became its superintendent, a position he has held since.

The late Mr. Cotton was a member of the Masonic order for sixty-one years, having joined the order in England before coming to Canada and at the time of his death was the oldest member of Leeds Lodge, A.F. & A.M., of this town. He was also a charter member of Gananoque Lodge, No. 114, Independent Order of Oddfellows and was for many years agent for the Oddfellows' Relief Association. He was not merely a member of these organizations, but always took an active part in promoting their interests. He was instrumental in the organization of the Gananoque fire brigade and was the active head of the fire department for 40 years. The late Mr. Cotton, who was eighty-two years of age, was one of the most honored and beloved citizens of this town. His whole hearted genial disposition made him friends wherever he went.

He is survived by his widow, four sons and three daughters, and one step-daughter; Charles T. Cotton, Vancouver, B.C.; Alderman Robert S. Cotton, Power Superintendent of the General Electric Company plant, Peterborough; William D. Cotton, Gananoque; Walter E. Cotton, Hammond, Ind.; Mrs. W. W. Durant, New York; Mrs. R. L. Hanton, New York; Mrs. D. A. Mitchell, Gananoque; and Mrs. William Tinney, Toronto, who mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate husband and father.

The funeral, which was held on Monday to the Gananoque cemetery, with Masonic honors, was a very large one, the members of Leeds Lodge, A.F. & A.M., headed by the Citizens Band, playing the Dead March, formed an escort. The honorary pallbearers were directors of the Gananoque Water Power Company, F. J. Skinner, A. W. Taylor, Oscar Henne, Capt. Rackman, W. T. Sampson and Mayor Wilson and Dr. J. J. Davis. The active pallbearers were Wilbur Crow, John Hubbard, Joseph Mills, W. Woods, A. D. Brown and Geo. R. Gardner. The funeral service was conducted at the house by Rev. C. E. Kidd, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, of which deceased was a member for many years. The Masonic burial service was also carried out by the officers of the Leeds Lodge, A.F. & A.M. Many floral tributes from the civic and fraternal bodies of the town, as well as from many friends, were placed on or about the casket, testifying to the high esteem in which deceased was held.

WOOD ASSERTS HIS INNOCENCE

NEW HAVEN, Con., Dec. 23.— (Canadian Press.)— Innocence of any wrong-doing and that he never bet on a "fixed" ball game in his life, were the claims to-day of "Smoky" Joe Wood, Yale baseball coach who has been connected by Commissioner K. M. Landis with the latest scandal in professional baseball. Wood said that he had bet on the game played between Detroit and Cleveland on September 25, 1919, but there was no agreement as to which team should win as charged by "Dutch" Leonard.

WORKMAN DROWNS BENEATH ICE CAKES

Employee of Power Company Swept Down St. Mary's River.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 23.—Buried in great cakes of ice, Martin Shemoski, aged 40, an employee of the Michigan Northern Power Company, was drowned yesterday, and his body carried out into St. Mary's River under the ice.

Shemoski was working with a pike pole at No. 1 spillway at the east end of the power house, pushing ice through to the river, when his pole caught in an ice cake and the swift current jerked him into the water. He was seen for an instant near the surface at the spot where the sluice empties into the river, but was quickly carried under the river ice by the rushing water. It will be impossible to recover the body.

CARDINAL URGES MORAL ADVANCE

Archbishop of New York Denounces "Filth Now Smearing State."

RE-DEDICATION.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23 (United News).—Sex literature, bigotry and "the filth now smearing our state," were denounced by Cardinal Hayes in a talk yesterday before the New York Electrical League. He lamented that America's moral growth did not keep pace with its material development and said, "We must devote ourselves to promoting the moral, spiritual, and intellectual forces in our beloved land."

"Let us re-dedicate ouselves to what is eternal in our constitution—justice, charity, reverence to God, recognition of the rights of our fellow men, a fair American chance for every man," he said.

BRITISH BUDGET DEFICIT LARGE

Experts Say Last Three Months Best For Tax Collections.

LOSS EXPECTED.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—The British treasury budget deficit for the end of the third quarter of 1926 was £14,753,300, an amount which the treasury experts consider normal as the final months of the year are most productive for tax collection. Last year's deficit at the end of the third quarter was £16,35,442.

Treasury officials stated that the total budget deficit of 1925 was expected to be exceeded this year because of the long coal tie-up and other industrial conditions. It was added, however, that the expected increase in the deficit was not such as to alarm treasury officials.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1926
(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

This is read as a fortunate day for the Sun, Mars and Jupiter are all in a benefic aspect.

Under this sway the note of human brotherhood finds response from all who represent the power and wealth of the world.

There is a sign read as indicating that the peace message will this year have a strong influence against war.

As a Christmas gift for America the stars promise great prosperity. Trade and manufactures are to be marvelously profitable.

There is indication that the forces of law and order are to gain strength, for with the Sun, Mars and Jupiter all in benefic sway evil must be largely eliminated, the seers declare.

New forms of philanthropy are presaged for the coming years when poverty will be greatly diminished through scientific economic policies.

Leaders in politics, philosophy and education are to rise among young men and young women in 1927, it is prognosticated, and they are to exercise great influence.

Congress comes under a government of the stars making for bitter clashes between opposing factions, but results are to be beneficial to the people, astrologers predict.

Saturn is in a place that is held to foreshadow for Washington, D.C., and American statesmen severe tests of wisdom and diplomacy.

A period of great expansion is dawning for Australia and the United States will benefit from it, astrologers foretell.

The sign which is read as presaging for science and invention supreme achievement also foreshadows the production of a secret device for war more terrible than any previously conceived.

With the close of the year there is an aspect favoring the power of kings and encouraging financial trusts.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a busy year in which there will be gain from speculation. Building should be lucky.

Children born on this day have the possibility of attaining the heights of success. They should be guarded against domestic tragedy.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The dinner frock, at left, of black panne velvet shows the introduction of flesh-colored inset or guimpe which has been employed by some of the smart dressmakers. The frock at right, the original of which was worn in one of the new plays is of black lace with little "trains" of black net. A flesh-colored chiffon yoke or guimpe is a distinguishing feature.

Lucien Belong has made an evening gown very simply contrived of black panne velvet which is cut out in a deep U at back and front. At first sight you might be struck with the very low cut of this decolletage, but on second sight you would realize that the space almost to the collar bone was decorously filled in with a guimpe of chiffon in a tone slightly deeper than flesh.

In a recent play one of the leading actresses displays the same fashion in a rather close-fitting black lace gown with a decolletage that shows a rounded line at either side dipping down into a V in the center. But here again the deep decolletage is only apparent for there is the same flesh-colored guimpe or yoke that extends up almost to the collar bone.

Once there would have been nothing at all noteworthy about such devices. It was the rule rather than the exception for afternoon frocks to be mounted on some sort of a transparent yoke or dicky—and frequently evening frocks showed the same maneuvering.

One very decided advantage about the new yoke is that while the effect of the deep decolletage can be given, the new suggestion of snugness can be achieved by means of the yoke. Then, too, the shoulder strap may be dispensed with, as in the case of the stage frock described above—since the yoke serves the purpose of holding the frock securely over the shoulders. Possibly also these little yokes may give the sense of greater modesty to some women.

Queen Believes in Clocks As Gifts This Christmas

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Queen Mary is saying it with clocks this Christmas. She completed her Christmas shopping yesterday, and among the purchases were 70 clocks of all shapes, sizes and sounds, for royal servants, tenants and friends to whom she regularly sends useful gifts.

The holiday enthusiasm in London and other parts of England has not diminished for a moment. Never have the stores been more crowded than this year, nor housewives busier at the pre-Christmas pastime of putting the finishing touches on millions of puddings for the Christmas feast.

MAN AND WIFE KILLED BY TRAIN

Drive Car on Crossing Right in Front of Express.

CAR WRECKED.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 2. — Mrs. W. E. Maedel of Norwich, was instantly killed, and her husband W. E. Maedel, received injuries from which he died several hours later, when their automobile was struck by a C.N.R. passenger train at the level crossing on the provincial highway, between Eastwood and Gobles, six miles east of Woodstock, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Maedel left their home in Norwich shortly after noon, and were proceeding east to spend the Christmas holidays with friends and relatives when the accident occurred. They had just got on to the crossing, when the passenger express train came roaring up behind them, the engine striking the rear end of their car. Both were thrown out of the car, which landed in the ditch a mass of wreckage. Mrs. Maedel's head struck a heavy fence and she was dead when picked up by the train crew. Mr. Maedel also landed alongside the fence, and his head was seriously injured. He was taken to the Woodstock general hospital, where he died about five o'clock with out regaining consciousness. An inquest is to be held this afternoon.

Mr. Maedel was a well known business man in the village of Norwich, having lived there practically all his life. He had for many years been in business as a baker and was also for many years a member of the Norwich town council. He is survived by four sons. He was between 55 and 60 years of age, and Mrs. Maedel was about the same age.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The moonstone is today's talismanic gem and also its natal stone; symbolic of youth and beauty, it brings good fortune and constant lasting love to those who wear it. Its good qualities are especially potent if it is given by a young lover to his sweetheart, particularly if it is her natal stone.

Violet is a significant color today to wear, it is believed to give one extraordinary, almost physic insight into the minds of others.

The oak leaf is a luck declaration on this day when it adorns a household. It is a sign of hospitality and the ready latch string.

Christmas Day Steamer Excursion On Otonabee River Recalled By Old Timers— Ploughing Done All Winter

This actually took place around the year 1878. The exact year could not be verified but several residents of the city still remember the occasion. That winter was a remarkably open one. Ploughing could be done and was done in practically every week throughout the winter.

Looking back from 1896 up until the present, a period of thirty years we have had 29 white Christmases and only one green one. This was just three years ago, in 1923.

On some of the 29 years the snowfall on the ground was light being insufficient for sleighing, but in the majority of cases the snow fall was quite heavy.

American League Players Seeking Higher Wage Increase

PLAYERS TO ASK FOR HIGHER PAY

Landis and Other Baseball Officials Given Raises on Contracts.

RUTH HOLDING OUT.

NEW YORK, Dei. 23.—Baseball's gracious gesture in telling Commissioner Landis how much was thought of his regime by handing him a new seven-year contract with a salary increase of $15,000 and a raise to his secretary may bounce back into the faces of the magnates.

The Commissioner was working on a seven-year contract, expiring next November, for $50,000 a year, so a new seven-year contract at $65,000 a year will represent almost a half-million dollars.

Leslie O'Connor, the Commissioner's secretary, had his salary raised to $12,500 a year, and over a seven-year period that will mean $87,500.

Cullen Cain received a new contract as the director of the National League's service bureau at an increased salary.

Another Side to It.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, had his salary boosted last year, and John A. Heydler, president of the National League, got a substantial increase on his last contract.

There is no intention to question the merirt of the increases as the magnates are big business men and ought to know best how to handle their own business, but the ball players will ask:

"Where do we come in?"

All of the club owners have ball players that have to be signed to new contracts in February and their ball players no doubt will want to know where their hunk of the melon is.

The National League ball players also can refer to the financial statement of the league president that a new record of 5,000,000 in attendance, 600,000 more than previous records, was made this year.

Troubles of Winners.

They have championship teams and players of pennant winners always want a kick in salary on new contracts although they must admit that the magnates do not get the best of the financial breaks in a world's series.

Col. Ruppert has his Babe Ruth to sign to a new contract. The Babe, busy counting up the cheques from his vaudeville tour, hasn't had time to discuss his new contract but he has discreetly let out the statement that he ought to be worth $150,000 a year to the Yankees next year.

He has a part of the public—a very large part of it—pleading his case. He has been drawing $52,000 a year and no one will deny that he was worth every cent of it and the game that he played this year was a very big factor in enabling the Yankees to win the American League pennant.

Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, conditioned himself for the climb to the pugilistic ladder by working as a lumberjack in the Ontario woods in the winter of 1921.

American League President Admits Two Men Dropped From Baseball.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23 (United Press)—The greatest of organized American sports tottered yesterday on the very foundation, which made it great — the confidence of men and boys, in baseball's most illustrious heroes.

When the names of Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker — grandest of baseball's grand old men—were drawn into the whirlpool of a betting scandal Tuesday, by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, none could believe it. To the average baseball fan, the charges could be nothing less than "lies, frame-ups, and sacrileges."

But as bulletin followed bulletin from the office of baseball's high commissioner, the idol worshippers began to question.

For from the lips of Byron Bancroft Johnson, president of the American League, in which Cobb and Speaker had played so long, came the admission that the two men had been "dropped from baseball."

Thought of Families

"We thought of Cobb's family and of Tris Speaker's mother," Johnson said.

"We thought of Joe Wood's sns at Yale University. We did not wish to punish those, who were innocent and we thought Cobb and Speaker sufficiently punished, when they were dropped from baseball."

That from Ban Johnson, was taken to mean that even the American League president was inclined to believe the charges of Herbert "Dutch" Leonard, that Cobb and Speaker had conspired to "frame" a baseball game and bet on its result.

It also served as explanation for the sudden resignation of Cobb as manager of the Detroit Tigers, and the resignation of Speaker as pilot of the Cleveland Indians, less than a month ago.

And even Ty Cobb, in entering his denial of participation in the alleged plot, admitted that "it was no uncommon thing for a ball player to bet on a game in those days."

One thing is certain—baseball has been put to its severest test by the revelations of its own ruler, Commissioner Landis. If it can hurdle this scandal, and still hold public confidence, it will have proved its tremendous grip upon the hearts and imagination of American youth, for it will have proved that baseball is greater than any of its stars. No other men have been idolized by American boys as have Cobb and Speaker.

Knew of Betting

Cobb's testimony, and that of "Smoky Joe" Wood, another one-time idol of the diamond, shows that there was betting and that Cobb knew of it. Both, however, denied "throwing" a ball game.

All the testators agreed that Speaker had no knowledge of the betting on the game, and Wood, his roommate at the time, says he failed to even mention it to him.

Speaker stands accused by Leonard alone.

Cobb and Wood and even Leonard himself, say the motive for "Dutch's" revelations is the fact that Cobb tossed him out of big league baseball.

Cobb called Leonard a "bolshevik" on the club, whereas Leonard complains that the Georgia peach was tyrannical and tried to overwork him.

Cobb interviewed here last night before he left for his home in Augusta, Ga., was a broken man. Tears streamed down his cheeks, as he called Leonard's charge "the —— thing that was ever pulled on a man."

DISCLOSE DEAL IN BALL SCANDAL

Attorney Purchased Evidence When Settling Leonard's Claim Against Detroit.

WOULD NOT RETURN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23 (Canadian Press).—The deal that brought about baseball's most astounding scandal, surpassing even the 'Black Sox' crooked world series of 1919, because of the fame of the players involved, was disclosed yesterday.

Henry Killilea, Milwaukee attorney for the American League, revealed that he had purchased the evidence of betting and game-throwing against Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker last June when he settled the claim which Dutch Leonard, the one-time Tiger pitcher, held against the Detroit club.

Killelea negotiated for the sale of the letters which clouded the names of Speaker and Cobb, but declined to name the sum paid Leonard for "selling out," although the amount was reported to have been $20,000. Killelea said he turned the letters over to Ban Johnson, president of the American League, who started an immediate investigation, finally turning the evidence over to Commissioner K. M. Landis. President Johnson refused to make a formal statement concerning the newest scandal, but said he would issue one after he had time to digest fully the mass of evidence which was prepared in Commissioner Landis' office.

"I am not over the shock yet," was the American League executive's comment.

Johnson did not hesitate to say, however, that he regretted the breaking of the story at this time, because of the families of Cobb and Speaker.

He said the guilty had been punished and that neither Cobb nor Speaker would ever return to the American League in any capacity.

Johnson hinted that Cobb and Speaker saw the impending crash coming and resigned before the scandal became public. He declared, furthermore, that his campaign against gambling would be carried on with increasing vigor, and any players found guilty of any infraction of baseball laws or conduct would be immediately driven out of the game.

"This thing of betting on ball games was a common practice previous to the world's series of 1919," Johnson said. "Now, we have got most of that type of players out of the major leagues and we will not tolerate any wagering again if we know about it. I know that the club owners of the American League are back of me in this regard."

The explosion revealed that baseball now has a police or surveillance system that keeps players constantly under observation. This system has been in operation since Commissioner Landis assumed control of the national sport.

It has not been generally known among the fans, although suspected among the players for some time, that Commissioner Landis was keeping every player in the major leagues under observation. Players guilty of minor infractions, much to their surprise, occasionally have been called before the Commissioner and warned that a repetition of their particular offence would result in drastic action.

The reverberations of the scandal, some tending to show Cobb and Speaker blameless and others indicating that Leonard's charges eventually may be substantiated, echoed from coast to coast.

Leonard refused to be seen at his home in Fresno, Calif., but there were intimations that eventually he would have more to say. Joe Wood, former Tiger pitcher, also named in the betting charges, denied any knowledge of the alleged bets on the game of September 25, 1919, but admitted he knew of betting on other occasions. The whole Washington team went broke betting on Walter Johnson to defeat him once, Wood said.

Friends of Speaker suggest that he was willing to retire from the game in order to protect Wood's name from any stigma in the scandal, which was known to a few baseball men as early as last fall.

The chief evidence in the Commissioner's hands was the letters from Cobb to Wood and Leonard, which the latter admittedly turned over to President Johnson "to get revenge" on Cobb for his release from the major leagues. Years ago Leonard was a member of the Boston Red Sox with Speaker, but the inclusion of the name of Tris in the scandal which Leonard exposed to get revenge on Cobb, was the chief enigna of the case.

WELLS CANNOT PLAY IN STATE TOURNEYS

Former Golf Champion For Michigan Will Tour in Europe.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Dec. 23.—Golf took its last news fling of the year here yesterday in the announcement of Carleton Wells, three times State champion, that he would not compete in 1927 tournaments, and the presence here of Tom Bendelow to look over an added nine holes for the Huron Hills Golf Club.

Wells, who has played Michigan's best golf in the last half dozen years, going to the third round of the national tournament one year will be in Europe next summer at the head of an open road tour taken by a party of Michigan students. He will leave almost immediately after commencement.

Bendelow, who laid out the first nine holes over the deeply ravined Huron Hills, has an easier task this time in laying out a course on slightly undulating ground leading down to the Huron River. The new nine holes probably not opened for play for a year or two will give the local club one nine that is a test of most of the shots of the game from difficult stances and another nine holes that is almost level.

COURT SAVES FARM FOR FREDDY WELSH

Former Lightweight Champion Fights Plan To Foreclose Mortgage.

NEWARK, N.J., Dec. 23.—Frederick Hall Thomas who gained fame as Freddy Welsh, lightweight boxing champion of the world, yesterday won a point in his legal fight to save his health farm at Chatham, when Vice-Chancellor Backes issued an order restraining George E. Brown, Florida real estate operator from selling the property purchased by Brown, after foreclosure of a $30,000 mortgage.

The former pugilist alleged the property was valued at $150,000 While he was away in training as an officer in the Army Reserve Corps the papers set forth, subpoenas foreclosing the mortgage were served on a Negro servant, the lone occupant of the place.

Welsh said he intended to pay of the mortgage by selling part of the property and asked the court to compel Brown to accept what is due him and return the farm.

REDSKINS MAY RACE FOR NATIONAL TITLE

Two Zuni Indians From Mexico Wanted in Boston Marathon.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.— The Zuni tribe of Indians in New Mexico will furnish two headliners in the Boston Athletic Association's annual marathon run here next spring if present plans of B.A.A. and National A.A.U. officials are successful. The race an annual fixture on April 19, will carry the 1927 national title with it.

Tom Kanaly, who handles the entry blanks for the B.A.A., said yesterday that he intends to ask Andrew Cehimony and Ross Shack to run if he can locate them in New Mexico. The two finished 1st and 2nd respectively in a full distance marathon last August during a series of inter-tribal Indian ceremonies at Gallup, N.M. Cehimony covered the 26 miles and 385 yards in 2 hours, 51 minutes 50 3-5 seconds and Schack in 2:58: 58 4-5

The National A.A.U. heard of the performance, learned that Mike Kirk, of Manuelito, N.M., was in charge of the affair and suggested that an attempt be made to sign up the Indians for the Ashland to Boston grind. Kanalay says he plans to communicate with Kirk as soon as general preparation for the distance classic gets under way.

AGENTS CLOSE UP MANY NIGHT CLUBS

Get Evidence By Frequenting Clubs, Posing as Wealthy Sports.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—A string of padlock summonses that extended from the roaring Forties to a Greenwich Village today adorned the managerial desks of fifty-eight of New York's most popular night clubs and restaurants and told of sweeping Federal prohibition raids on Broadway.

Complain bills and temporary personal injunctions were served on the club owners early today by seven raiding parties from the office of Federal Attorney Emory R. Buckner, who started out at midnight.

Included among the places raided were some of the most glittering centres of New York night life. The raids were carried out quietly and caused no disturbance of guests. Evidence against the establishments was obtained by Federal agents who were declared to have "lived the life of Broadway from midnight until dawn for the last fortnight."

Some posed as idle sons of wealthy London widows, others as big cotton brokers from the South, some as exiled Russian noblemen of the late Czar's bodyguard, and still others as wealthy real estate promoters from Florida. They are said to have been introduced into the clubs by prominent Broadwayites and popular actress who took the agents' word that they really were what they pretended to be.

CANADIENS WIN FROM CHIHAWKS

Far Too Clever For Chicago Team—Better Than Ottawa, Say Critics.

SCORE 3-1.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Canadiens, of Montreal, were too clever and fast for Chicago's Black Hawks here last night, and took Major McLaughlin's team into camp by the score of 3 to 1. Canadiens scored in every period, while the only Chicago tally came in the last session, when Dye batted in a short pass from Irvin in a mix-up in front of the net.

Joliat was the main cog on the attack for the visitors, followed closely by Morenz. These two gave Chicago fans the greatest exhibition of stick-handling and all-around class shown here this season. The work of Hainsworth, Canadien goalie, was wonderful. The visitors were far more impressive than the Ottawa Senators, and looked like the best team in the National League.

VARSITY GRADS WIN FIRST GAME

Outclass Marlboros in Every Way, To Win 6-1.

FINISHED HOCKEY.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—University of Toronto Grads made their debut in the O.H.A. Senior series with a clean-cut 6 to 1 victory over Marlboros at the Arena Gardens last night. Showing more speed than they did last season when as the U. of T. Intercollegiates they reached the Allan Cup finals, the Grads outskated their opponents, gave a marvellous exhibition of stick wizardry, and not at any stage of the contest did they appear in danger of going down to defeat.

Connie Smythe has taught the Grads how to take advantage of the rule which says "no offside for the defending team inside the 60-foot line," and they, in turn, gave the Marlboros a lesson on how to take a pass from the goalkeeper at the blue line and break fast for a foray into the other team's territory.

A stop by Joe Sullivan following a Marlboro attack, then a fast pass to Hugh Plaxton, Hudson, Trotter or some other Varsity player, and the puck-carrier dashed unmolested for the other end, and more often than not he carried a team-mate sometimes two along, leaving opponents for in the rear.

Finished Display

The Varsity attacks seldom had more than two men to beat. A bit of tricky stick-handling and a perfect pass and Joe Stark would have to hustle to stop a wicked shot from a Grad's stick And the Grads lost little time getting the puck away. It was a finished display by a well-coached team, and but for some wonderful goal tending by Stark the winners' margin would have been greater

On their display last night the Grads will be a mighty hard team to beat for O.H.A. and Allan Cup honors. They will be better after they have played a few more games, and with a host of valuable substitutes should develop into a stronger aggregation than the Varsity Allan Cup finalists of last season. The teams:

Marlboros—Goal, Stark; defence, Hedges and Crompton; centre, Primeau; wings, McPherson and Heintzman; subs., Cook and Sanders.

Referee—Herb Matthews.

HOCKEY RESULTS

Hockey games played last night resulted as follows:

Senior O.H.A.
Varsity Grads 6, Marlboros 1.
National League
Canadiens 3, Chicago 1.
Canadian League
Stratford 3, London 2

Like many other players who have climbed the ladder of golf fame, Frank Dolp, the young Oregonian who now holds the Western Golf Association championship, never took a lesson from a professional but learned the game while caddying.

FAST ICE FOR TO-NIGHT'S SENIOR O. H. A. FIXTURE

Cold Dip Made It Possible To Play Under Ideal Conditions.

VISITORS CONFIDENT.

Expect To Repeat T. C. C. Win at Expense of the Petes.

The below-zero dip early this morning, made it possible for the Brock street rink staff to guarantee a fast sheet of ice for to-night's opening O.H.A. senior fixture with North Toronto, and the fixture will be played under ideal conditions.

Prospects last evening did not look good, but the arrival of colder weather saved the situation.

The Petes had a lively practice last night and are in fairly good shape for their first O.H.A. test of the season. The North Toronto crew has had the advantage of steady practice and stimulated by their clean cut win over Toronto Canoe Club, the team lead by Jack Cain and Tracey Shaw, will be worthy adversaries of the blue and white to-night.

With fast ice assured the fans can look forward to a battle all along the line.

A big crowd is expected for the opening of the O. H. A. season.

O. H. A. BULLETIN

Mike Rodden will referee the North Toronto at Peterborough Senior O.H.A. game to-night. Lindsay plays an Intermediate scheduled fixture at Port Perry, with Harold Farlow as referee.

Marlboro Juniors play an exhibition game in Midland Thursday, December 30, not to-night as first announced.

Buck Bowman of Preston, has been appointed referee for the Elmira-at Kitchener Intermediate game scheduled for Christmas night.

CONDEMNED MAN GIVEN REPRIEVE TO JANUARY 12

Counsel Has Opportunity To Appeal On Question of Law.

JURY MISDIRECTED.

Execution of John Barty Had Been Set For To-day.

TORONTO, December 23. — John Barty, who was convicted in the Court of Assize at Hamilton recently on a charge of murder, and upon whom the death penalty was imposed by Mr. Justice Mowat, has been granted a reprieve until January 12, to enable the defence counsel to carry an appeal on a question of law to the Minister of Justice at Ottawa.

The execution of the prisoner, who lies in the condemned cell of the Hamilton jail, was to have taken place this morning, but the last minute application to Mr. Justice Lennox in Weekly Court yesterday was crowned with success, and Barty was literally snatched from the hangman's hands.

In granting the reprieve Mr. Justice Lennox explained that while he did not feel that there was any strong grounds for making the order, he found himself in a position of doubt, and realized that to refuse the application might result in doing a wrong to the prisoner which could not be righted.

The application for a reprieve was first made to the First Divisional Court at Osgoode Hall, but their Lordships held that the court had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter and that the motion ought to have been made to the trial judge, or to some other justice of the high court. It was pointed out by Mr. Justice Ferguson that an appeal might also be carried to the Minister of Justice, who possessed the power to grant either a reprieve or a new trial.

The argument as to the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court was terminated by Chief Justice Mulock, who pointed out that valuable time was being lost. "It seems we have no jurisdiction," he said; "why don't you hurry to some single judge or communicate to the department?"

Mr. Hassard and G. R. Fourneret, for the accused, accompanied by Deputy Attorney-General Bayley then made an attempt to get into touch with Mr. Justice Mowat, the trial judge, but finding him absent from his office, the application was taken to Mr. Justice Lennox in Weekly Court.

Question of Law.

Mr. Hassard asked for a two weeks reprieve so that defence might emphasize a point of law alleged to have developed during the trial. Mr. Fourneret said that there had been no plea for mercy to the Minister of Justice, as the facts of the case did not warrant such a proceding. The appeal would be based on a question of law, he said, as it was contended that there had been a misdirection of the jury.

In opposing the application, Mr. Bayly, for the Attorney-General, pointed out that the murder was of a particularly brutal nature, and the accused had been found to be sane. Barty, he said, entered the store in which the woman was killed, and pushing past his victim, walked in the direction of the cash register. When she objected he hit her with a hammer. The explanation offered by the accused was that he wanted to reach an outhouse at the rear of the premises.

"I don't think that there is any strong ground for my granting the reprieve," said Mr. Justice Lennox. "I don't think that the basis of it is at all substantial or likely to be substantial, and I don't think the matter is at present particularly clearly set out."

Continuing, His Lordship explained that he found himself in the position of some doubt, and that to refuse might involve a possible wrong to the prisoner. He therefore decided grant the reprieve, thereby staying the execution until Wednesday, Jan. 12th.

PANIC STOPPED AT G.W.V.A. HALL

Member of Committee Calms Dancers When Firemen Enter.

FALSE ALARM.

What turned out to be a false alarm last night was rung in from Box 27. A card party and dance was in progress at the Great War Veterans' Hall last evening and about 10.30 the card party in the upper storey broke up. The doors were opened and as the room was very hot, steam which looked like smoke poured out in waves over the balcony. A citizen who was passing noticed the steam, thought the building was on fire and turned in the alarm.

The firemen arrived, much to the surprise of the dancers, and began running up the stairs to the upper storey. A panic soon arose among the dancers, but a clear-cut voice arose above the noise of the panic, "Wait a minute, it is only an inspection." This prompt action on the part of the committee in charge allayed the fears of the large gathering.

DRAFT SCREEN FOR THE BATH

Builders have a habit of planning a bathroom so that the tub is located under the window. On windy nights a cold breeze is apt to blow through the cracks on the bather. To shut out this draft in such a bathroom, a removable screen can be made of canvas. The piece is hemmed, and four tent or awning grommets are riveted in the ends. These are hooked on brass-headed nails driven in the edge of the window casing. — Popular Science Monthly.

PORT HOPE MAN DIVES IN RIVER DODGING POLICE

Finds Water Too Cold For Swimming and Comes Ashore.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

C.N.R. Officers Accuse Him of Stealing Goods From Cars.

PORT HOPE, Ont., December 23. —A thrilling tale of midnight marauders, gun shots in the dark, blackjacks and a daring attempt by the chief actor in the piece to escape by diving into the freezing cold waters of the Ganeraska River, was unfolded in the police court yesterday, when John Lewis, Cavan street, faced a vagrancy charge, one of attempted theft and a third for stealing a quantity of goods from a Canadian National Railways freight car, on a siding near here.

Lewis was given suspended sentence for vagrancy and was committed for trial on the other charges.

According to two C.N.R. special agents, J. J. Graham, Lindsay, and Fred Chapman, Belleville, they discovered Lewis prowling about a freight train on the Midland division just north of Port Hope at midnight, on Monday, struck him over the head with a baton as he thrust his head into the door of the freight car in which they were hiding, and then chased him along the banks of the Generaska river, until he dived into the water.

Firing their revolvers into the air, the officers ordered Lewis to return to shore, and after several unsuccessful attempts to swim to solid ice at the other side of the water he was forced to surrender. Lewis' head was badly cut where he was struck.

Search of the home of Mrs. Eliza Ling, Cavan street, revealed a quantity of butter which the officers allege was stolen from a freight car on December 10 and given to Mrs. Ling by Lewis.

Lewis, a Port Hope man, was recently released from a United States prison, where he was serving a sentence.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

KEN'S STUNT RIDING HAS CIRCUS THRILLS

Trip to "Unknown Cavalier" at Regent as Exciting as Big Tent

If you missed the circus this summer, you needn't mind—just go to see "The Unknown Cavalier" at the Regent.

For in this First National picture produced by Chas. R. Rogers you will not only see a former Ringling Brothers circus star, Ken Maynard, now a star of the screen, but you will see one of the most exciting "Roman rides" that you ever witnessed.

In one sequence of the picture Maynard, as the hero, Tom Drury, offers to do some Roman riding for four ruffians whom he wishes to "shake." He starts stunt riding one horse, adding another to his team at each turn of the course, until he is standing on the outside steeds of four horses abreast.

Then, with a "Yip-p-p-e-e-e-e-eee" in his best cowboy style, he rides off across the desert to the rescue of the heroine, leaving the thick-headed bandits gaping at each other, with only "shanks' mare" to use in pursuit.

These scenes were taken on the edge of the far-famed (for heat and thirst) Death Valley, and if it had not been for the August heat, Ken would have enjoyed the riding thoroughly, as it took him back to the days of the "big top" and the cheering throngs to which he used to play "in person." "The Unknown Cavalier" was directed by Albert Rogell.

SLOW WITH 'PHONE.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—London has fewer telephones in proportion to its population than 14 other countries, including Iceland and Hawaii. The United States has six times as many teleuphones per 1,000 population as Great Britain, said a recent statement of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, which urged that the telephone and telegraph be separated from the postal services.

WEDDING BELLS.

ELLIOTT—CAMPBELL.

The marriage took place at six o'clock in the evening on Saturday last, in All Saints' church, of Muriel Noble, youngest daughter of Mrs. A. E. Campbell of this city, and the late Thomas Campbell, and Mr. Claude V. Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Elliott, Shenton, Nuneaton, Warwickshire, England. The rector, Rev. J. D. Paterson, performed the ceremony, and Mr. R. J. Devey played the wedding music.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Herbert S. Routley, wore a sleeveless gown of champagne georgette, black and gold picture hat and gold shoes and stockings. She carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

Miss Marjorie McGowan, of Detroit, and Miss Marjorie McGregor, of Albany, N.Y., were bridesmaids, wearing respectively sleeveless gowns of coral and peach georgette, with black picture hats and carrying arm bouquets of bronze and rose chrysanthemums.

The bridegrooms brother, Mr. Charles H. Elliott, acted as best man, and ushers were Mr. A. Barton and Mr. Noble Swain.

After a reception held at the home of the bride's mother, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott left on the evening train for Montreal, later proceeding to Boston, Massachusetts and other points in the New England States. On their return they will reside in Peterborough. Mrs. Elliott travelled in an ensemble of Havana brown and top coat of needlepoint, with shawl collar and Isabella fox fur.

ORDE—JOHNSTON.

A pretty wedding was solemnized on December 22nd, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Johnson, 251 George street, when their youngest daughter, Alma Mabel, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Royden Reginald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Orde, McClennan street.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. I. Brown in the presence of about 35 guests.

The bride was given in marriage by her father to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Etta Finley, and was attired in a dress of peach georgette and satin, and carried a bouquet of flowers.

The sister of the bride, Mis Eida Johnson, was bridesmaid, and was dressed in pale blue silk. The groom was supported by Mr. Jack Godfrey, brother-in-law of the bride.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Orde will reside at 521 Aylmer street.

JOSEPH H. BURNS.

The funeral will leave the above-named residence on Friday, Dec. 24th and proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment. Service at the house at 10.30.

GEORGE PRATLEY.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at his home, 155 River Road, of George Pratley. The late Mr. Pratley, who was in his 83rd year, had been a resident of Peterborough forty years, coming here from his birthplace, Fullbrook, Oxfordshire, England. He was an Anglican and a member of Court Peterborough, C.O.F.

There remain to mourn his loss two sons, C. G., of Toronto and A. E. of Belmont, Mass., and two daughters, Mrs. M. E. Wills of Peterborough and Mrs. John Beverley, of Methuen, Mass.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon from the family residence to Little Lake cemetery. The service will be conducted by the Rev. G. J. Bousfield, of St. Luke's church, of which Mr. Pratley was a member for many years.

KILLED BY FALL FROM WINDOW

Montreal Man Fatally Injured in Accident in Vancouver.

COMPANION HELD.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 23. — Canadian Press. — Kenneth McLeod, aged 24, of Montreal, was instantly killed here last night when he fell from the eighth floor of Hotel Vancouver, to the roof of the hotel's laundry building.

Reginald Burdick, secretary of the Pacific Salvage Company, McLeod's room mate, is held by the police, pending an investigation into the fatality.

McLeod is said to be the son of a prominent Montreal family. Both were registered at the hotel and occupied the same room.

Burdick told the police that about 7.30 he left the room and returned a few minutes later to find his companion missing. He raised a window and, seeing a body lying on the roof of the laundry building, notified the management.

Both young men, it is stated, were fellow students at the Royal Military College, Kingston.

CHIEF WARNS ABOUT FIRES

Danger From Use of Inflammable Christmas Decorations.

ADVISES CASE.

Fire Chief George Gimblett at this time of year issues a warning to all citizens to be careful of fires.

Christmas decorations are very inflammable and at this time of year these add greatly to the ordinary risks of fire and the following are a few suggestions which he offers:

See that inflammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steam pipes, stove pipes, electric light bulbs, etc.

See that your electric circuits are properly fused and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights.

Examine your fire extinguishing appliances and see that they are sufficient, in good order and readily accessible.

See that all exits are plainly marked and not obstructed.

Have all temporary decorations removed and safely disposed of as soon as they have served their purpose.

Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are not to mar the festive season vigilance and care must be exercised.

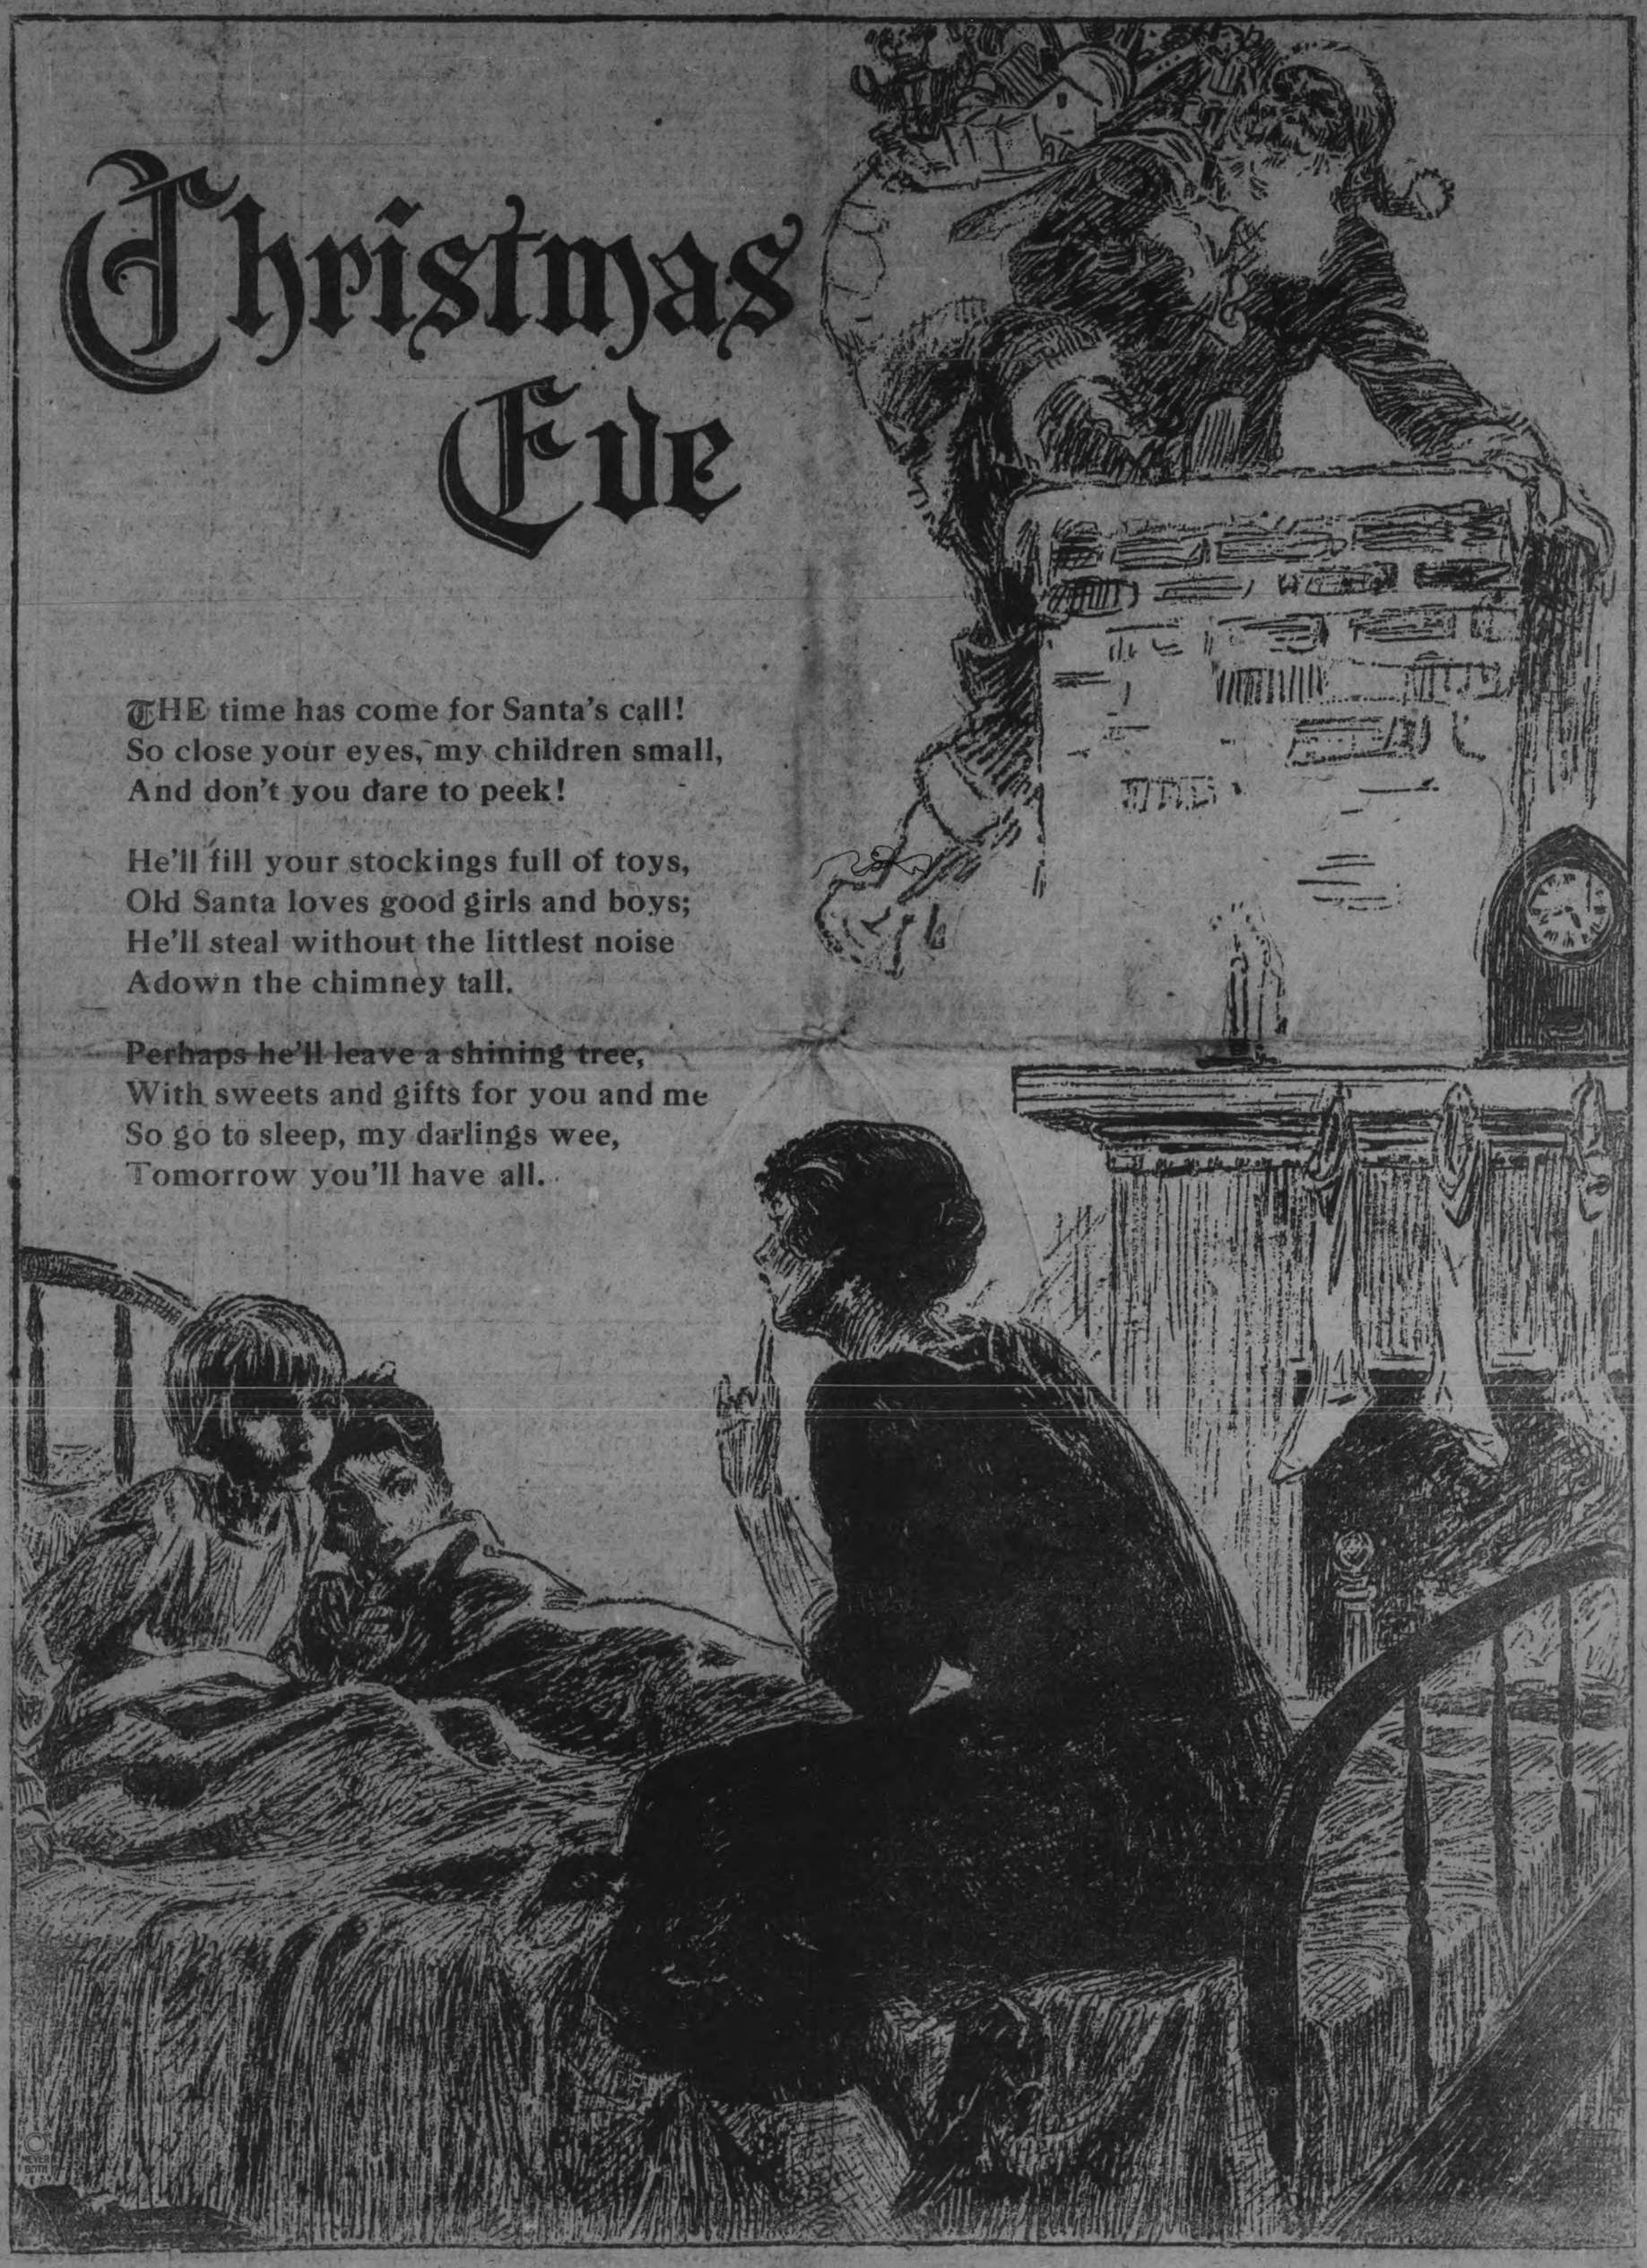
Christmas Eve



THE time has come for Santa's call!
So close your eyes, my children small,
And don't you dare to peek!

He'll fill your stockings full of toys,
Old Santa loves good girls and boys;
He'll steal without the littlest noise
Adown the chimney tall.

Perhaps he'll leave a shining tree,
With sweets and gifts for you and me
So go to sleep, my darlings wee,
Tomorrow you'll have all.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

FROM REV. J. A. HUGHES, ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.

Advent, crowned with Christmas, shows God coming to claim us, and to reveal Himself to us in every part of our lowly lives. He does not despise our low estate. "The dayspring from on high hath visited us." Let us not think we are too unimportant for such attention on God's part. The manger scene at Bethlehem was a tiny thing in the great world of rolling circumstance. Yet really the whole world was prepared for it; and the whole course of history led up to it. And, our world is prepared for us by God's Providence. We have, each one, a real place to fill, we are not to regard ourselves as of no importance.

The incarnation claims, and is intended to win, a response from us; God has sent His Son to the end that the spirit in our hearts may say, "Abba, Father."

Christmas is the festival of the Dayspring—and of "the kindness and love of God to man appearing," and because the Incarnation was the manifestation of Eternal, Divine Love and Sacrifice, it supplies a test as to the reality of our faith and gives us the foundation of life; Divine Fatherhood, obedient Sonship.

"He stooped to bless,
And in stooping raised us;
And the tenderness which looked in pity on a world of sin
Long years ago,
Still waits to call the nations in,
That all may know how men may rise in Him
Because He stooped so low."

EIGHTEEN KILLED

Corey's fireman was unaccounted for.

Engineer S. J. Keith, of the north-bound train, was blinded and severely burned, and could not furnish an account. R. M. Pierce, a travelling engineer riding in the cab, also was seriously injured. H. H. Moss, the fireman, was killed.

Orders Overlooked

The head on collision apparently was caused by the Ponce de Leon's engineer overlooking the order to take the siding, to pass the Royal Palm, officials of the Southern Railway said in a statement issued at Atlanta. An investigation already has been started to determine why the order was not observed. The official statement revealed that S. J. Keith, the regular engineer of the Ponce de Leon, was not at the throttle when his train crashed into the Royal Palm which was idling along on the main track, awaiting the Ponce de Leon's passage on the siding. J. M. Pearce, the road foreman, or travelling engineer, had relieved him at McPherson, twelve miles from the scene of the crash, but it was emphasized that he bore complete authority for it and that he understood the orders fully.

Keith was seriously injured and Pearce probably fatally hurt. H. R. Moss, the fireman, was killed. Pearce has been in the service since 1912.

Going to Bowmanville

TORONTO, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press)—Hazel, aged seven, and Kenneth, aged five, are the two children of Mrs. Georgia Hardy, travelling from Miami, who were among those killed in the collision between crack passenger trains at Rockmart, Ga., last evening. Mrs. Hardy resided for some time at Bowmanville. With her children, she was returning for Christmas.

CHAIRMAN FALLS FROM PLATFORM

FOUR MONTHS' TERM.

Woman Sentenced For Obtaining Goods By False Pretenses.

COBOURG, Dec. 24. — Four months in jail was the sentence meted out to a woman by Magistrate Floyd when she came before him on Monday, charged with false pretenses or fraud. It was alleged that the accused ordered a load of coal from Mr. Hanna, of Garden Hill, and asked to have change for a $20 bill brought so that she might pay the driver upon delivery. When the coal was delivered she is staed to have said she would pay when she had the money.

The children in the home have been taken in charge by the Children's Aid Society of the United Counties.

Eighteen Nominated For City Council Seats

Many Names Placed On Aldermanic List For 1927 Election

All Retiring Members of 1926 Council Named as Candidates—Several Former Members and Some New Men in Race.

THREE MAKE DECLARATIONS IMMEDIATELY AFTER MEETING

Eighteen nominations for five seats in the City Council were received last night by City Clerk S. R. Armstrong in his capacity of Returning Officer for the municipal elections. Three of those nominated signed their declarations of qualification immediately after the close of the meeting, while a number of those who spoke asked the support of the electors in case they decided to run. None of those who were present at the meeting declined the nomination.

The papers of Stanley A. Lowe, of the firm of Lowe and Outram, wholesale confectioners, were the first handed in, coming as soon as Mr. Armstrong was ready to receive them. They were signed by J. F. Strickland and E. A. Stinson. Four other nominations were received in the next few minutes, and then there was a lull. New arrivals brought new nominations, and soon there were ten on the Returning Officer's list. From then on the nominations came singly, the last coming about fifteen minutes before the list was closed at 8:30.

When the list was closed opportunity was given those candidates who wished to speak to lay their claims before the electors present. Mr. Armstrong acted as chairman, calling on the men in the order in which they were nominated.

Elias Arthur Stinson

The first to speak was Elias Arthur Stinson. He said that he hadn't decided whether or not he would be a candidate, but if he stood for election and were elected he would do all he could for the advancement of the city. The obtaining of new industries to provide more employment and people to fill the empty houses would be his chief effort. Peterboro, he said, is as fine a city as there is in Canada, and if an effort were made by the citizens the present backward tendency would be corrected. In conclusion he said he would stand for economy and a greater Peterborough.

Ald. Nagle E. Phelan

One of the 1926 Council seeking re-election. Alderman Nagle E. Phelan said his record of seven years' service in the Council, six of them as chairman of the Finance Committee, was before the electors. He said the City was in good shape financially and that any debentures sold recently had been sought by many of the foremost banking houses. As a result the City had secured the best price paid any small city in the past two years. Much credit for this was due to the way in which the City Trust had handled the sinking funds and interest, but credit was also due to the efficient government by the various councils. In conclusion he asked the support of the electors in his campaign for re-election.

Ald. J. O. Fife

Also seeking re-election, Alderman J. O. Fife spoke of his regard for the four years he has spent in the Council. He said that he had tried to serve the city faithfully and honestly, and asked the citizens, if they thought he had served well enough to re-elect him to help solve the problems facing the city in the next few years. He recalled that four years ago, when he was first nominated, he had given as his platform the construction of the sewage disposal plant, arrangements to finance the installation of sanitary conveniences, preventing the emptying of sewage in the river in the centre of the City, and

John Is a Gentleman; He Prefers a Blonde

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Parsons are sure John M. Aaron is a gentleman.

In order that there might be no mix-ups in the plans for the wedding of Aaron and their daughter, Hazel, the Parsons sent a note to the probate judge here, telling him their daughter, who is 16, had their permission to marry, and that Aaron, 21, "is a gentleman, we are sure, because Hazel is a blond."

"They have our consent to marry so please sell them a permit," the note added.

CITY IS LIABLE FOR INJURIES ON ICY STREETS

Gross Negligence Found in Suit For Damages From Falls.

ANCIENT PRINCIPLE.

Payment of Damages For Loss Through Neglect Ordered By Moses.

What constitutes gross negligence on the part of any person or corporation is a question which has to be decided quite often these days by the courts of this country when sidewalks are so icy.

Gross negligence has been so defined in the courts that all cities and towns and municipalities have been forced to carry accident insurance to prevent them from being the losers in cases for damages.

The principle of an owner's liability for injury or damage caused by the maintenance of a dangerous piece of property dates back to 1491 B.C. when the children of Israel were told:

'And if a man shall open a pit or if a man shall dig a pit, and cover it, and if an ox or ass fall therein;

'The owner of the pit shall make it good and give money unto the owner of them."—Exodus xxi:33-34

The streets in this city are owned by the corporation of the city of Peterborough and it is the duty of those who have charge of the administration of the affairs in the city to see that the sidewalks are properly sanded when they become slippery. If the officials fail to do this the city will likely be held responsible for gross negligence if any person falls and injures his body.

This morning there was a typical example of very slippery streets but the city engineer had all the men available at work early sprinkling the icy sidewalks.

The city engages men to plough the snow off the streets and keep them clear, but every merchant is forced by a by-law to clean the snow off the full width of the sidewalk in front of his store before nine o'clock in the morning when there has been a snow fall in the night.

Protection of the individual is the foremost thing in every city to-day as it was of old when Moses gave the laws to the Children of Israel.

Antique Shops Haunted By Manuel Of Portugal

LONDON, Dec. 24. — (Associated Press). — Former King Manuel of Portugal who, like George of Greece, still cherishes a strong hope that he again may sit on his throne some day, spends much of his odd hours seeking bargains in London antique shops. Queen Augusta Victoria, too, has a keen eye for old time furniture and often accompanies her husband on these trips. King Street, St James, the mecca of connoisseurs, oddly enough, is one of the thoroughfares where King Manuel is seen frequently.

King Manuel lives rather a retired life during the summer, spending much time in the country, but with the opening of the opera season, he returns to the city. Both the ex-King and his wife are inveterate opera goers.

FOUR NOMINATED FOR REEVESHIP OF N. MONAGHAN

Reeve Rye and T. M. Hunter Decline to Seek Election.

THREE FOR DEPUTY

Several of Nine Nominated for Council Are Still Undecided.

Four men were nominated for the position of reeve, three for deputy reeve, and nine for councillors at the municipal nominations of the township of North Monaghan held in May's school house yesterday afternoon.

Those nominated for reeve were:

H. B. Rye, who was proposed by J. H. Bell and Bert Arnott.

R. T. Lillico, proposed by John McIntosh and H. B. Rye.

T. M. Hunter, proposed by William Williamson and George Ward.

John Mervin, proposed by George Doig and William Faiers.

For deputy reeve:

R. A. Dobbin, proposed by William Robson and and Sydney Hall.

Fred Wilson, proposed by Robert Colin and T. B. Henry.

G. A. Wood, proposed by Bert Arnott and J. H. Bell.

For councilmen:

W. T. Byers, proposed by George Patton and John McIntosh.

K. M. Denoon, proposed by J. H. Bell and Bert Arnott.

William Faiers, proposed by Geo. Doig and William Connor.

W. G. Waterman, proposed by Bert Cunningham and T. M. Hunter.

James Deline, proposed by George Doig and William Faiers.

R. A. Dobbin, proposed by George Ward and William Williamson.

T. M. Hunter, proposed by J. N. Lillico and Sydney Hall.

T. B. Henry, proposed by Fred Wilson and Tom Arnott.

Andrew Kent, proposed by James O'Keefe and K. Denoon.

In all probability R. T. Lillico will get the reeveship by acclamation but there is likely to be a contest for deputy and for councilmen.

Reeve H. B. Rye, the first speaker, announced his retirement from municipal affairs after five years as reeve in which time he has served as Warden of the county. He discussed the questions which are foremost before the electorate at the present time, such as sanitary conditions, fire protection and good roads. He said North Monaghan was a difficult town ship to run for there were so many new conditions cropping up each year. He made a plea to the electorate to get behind the sanitary by-law, for one thing he had feared for a good many years was the outbreak of a typhoid epidemic. This past year along with Medical Officer of Deceased, who was about 40 years of age, is survived by his widow, who is in Montreal.

Waiting Trial at Belleville For Attacking Deseronto Chief.

FOUR RELEASED.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press). — Leo Maracle, Peter Jaynes, Eddie Maracle, James Doren, and Jimmy and Robbie Brant appeared before Magistrate Bedford yesterday afternoon at Deseronto to answer charges in connection with the assaulting of the Chief of Police, George Wilkins, some time ago. At the consent of the Crown the last four named were allowed their freedom with a stiff reprimand from the Magistrate, and Leo Maracle and Peter Jaynes were committed for trial on a charge of assault and doing grievous bodily harm.

They were both charged with intoxication and on this charge they pleaded guilty and each was fined $10 and costs or in default sixty days in jail. The two men were brought to the Belleville Jail and will there await trial.

The only evidence taken on the assault charge was that of George Wilkins, the Chief of Police.

EIGHTEEN KILLED AND FIFTY HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

Two Fast Passenger Trains Collide Near Rockmart, Georgia.

HOLIDAY SEEKERS.

Frantic Efforts Made All Night To Get Injured Out.

ROCKMART, Ga., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Eighteen persons perished as a result of the head-on collision here last night between the Ponce De Leon, northbound from Miami to Chicago and the Royal Palm, southbound of the Southern Railway. The seriously injured numbered twenty-nine. Railroad officials said they did not believe more bodies would be found in the wreckage, which had been thoroughly searched.

The trains were the Royal Palm Limited, en route from Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland to Miami, and the Ponce De Leon special, north-bound from Jacksonville on the same route.

The dead include two small children of Mrs. Georgia Hardy, of Miami, Fla., who were travelling with their mother from Toronto, Ontario. Mrs. Hardy was injured.

Railroad officials and town people, armed with blow torches and crowbars, labored all night to extricate the bodies of those whose journey northward for the Christmas holidays was ended by the crash. Relief trains from Rome, twenty miles away, and Atlanta, fifty-two miles distant, were at the scene, and dawn found frantic efforts continuing to liberate the injured imprisoned in the debris as well as to free the bodies of those whose lives were crushed out.

Most of those dead and injured were at dinner on the north-bound train, which was making considerable speed as it rolled down an incline to the station.

Cars Telescope.

In the crash, the dining car telescoped the day coach ahead and rolled under the tender of the locomotive, while debris from the smashed day coach immediately behind piled upon it and through its side. Twelve of the dead are here and four were taken to Atlanta. Sixteen of the injured are in an Atlanta hospital.

Eight of these are in a serious condition. Eleven injured are in the Harbin Hospital at Rome, Ga., and two of the injured are in hospital at Cedartown.

Switch Blamed.

A new switch, gleaming in the pouring rain, is believed to have figured in the pile up of the car. The Ponce De Leon, north-bound from Jacksonville, Fla., with many passengers, roared past the switch at 6.45 o'clock last night, and half a mile further on crashed into the south-bound Royal Palm. The south-bound train had trailed along on the main line waiting for the other train to pass on the siding.

"I was waiting for the north-bound train to take the switch and pass us," said Engineer Corey of the south-bound Royal Palm. "Instead, she roared past. I grabbed the brake lever, yelled to my fireman to jump, and tied the whistle down. Then I jumped. I had cleared the fence and jumped the ditch when they crashed."

She Shingles Houses; Her Work Is In Demand

ZELZAH, Calif., Dec. 24.—About 10 new houses are started each day in San Fernando Valley, which is a rate so fast it is hard to find sufficient carpenters, painters and roof shinglers.

One of the latter, however, who always is on the job, is Mrs. Cora B. Williams, 35 years old, probably the only woman shingler in Southern California. While at work Mrs. Williams wears overalls, and can shin up and down a ladder or over a slippery roof quicker and better than many of the men workmen. She does her work so well, she always has jobs several weeks ahead. Mrs. Williams has been in the shingling business for the last seven years.

She says she adopted her trade because "there was more money in it than staying at home doing housework."

Black Shirt Outranks Foreign Dress Uniform

ROME, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—The black shirt henceforth will outrank the decorated dress uniform of foreign diplomats at the court of the house of Savoy, the ruling house of Italy.

Under the terms of a decree announced this morning, the secretary-general of the Fascist party will take precedence at all public functions over foreign ambassadors, ministers and special envoys. His title has been changed from plane "Mister' 'to "Your Excellency."

DIES OF PNEUMONIA.

EMPEROR YOSHIHITO

EMPEROR YOSHIHITO OF JAPAN
Who died of Pneumonia at 1.25 a.m., December 25th.

Crown Prince Hirohito, who has been Regent since November, 1921, succeeds to the Throne, becoming Japan's 124th Emperor.

Yoshihito's condition became desperate at 12.25 a.m. His respiration was 84; his pulse too fast to be to be counted; rattling in the windpipe was noticeable. The numerous physicians who had attended him for a fortnight did everything possible for the monarch but his condition was seen to be hopeless.

U. S. Ambasasdor May Protest "Oh U. S. A."

BERLIN, December 24. United News. — The United States has been satirized in such a broad manner in Berlin's latest revue, "Oh, U.S.A.," that it has been brought to the attention of American Ambassador Schurman, and may bring a protest to the foreign office.

The plot of "Oh, U.S.A.," denies that the United States is the home of freedom and progress, and liberalism.

One scene depicts a young Berliner newly arived in New York. He sees an attractive girl in Central Park, and doffs his hat. The blue coats threaten him with arrest until he promises to marry her.

Another depicts the passing of a law through Congress stipulating that citizens who refuse to believe the stork myth must be jailed or deported; and in another an intoxicated prohibition officer serenades his hip-pocket flask.

The American man is depicted throughout as a hen pecked individual, and instead of being referred to as "God's country," the nation is called "Women's own country."

The Masonic Brethern
of the City are reminded of the Annual Banquet, on Monday, December 27th, at the Empress Hotel, at 7.30 o'clock. Good programme and entertainment. Tickets can be secured from officers of the lodges.

FRENCH CABINET CONTROLS FRANC

Speculators Take Warning and Exchange Ceases To Fluctuate.

PARIS, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press) The Poincare government to-day decided to take control of the exchange situation and to maintain the French franc at a price between 121 and 123 to the pound sterling.

The government decision to intervene is understood to have been taken as a warning to speculators that they must get out of the market or take the risk of being punished if they go too far short in either francs or in foreign exchange. The entire movement is characterized in official circles as "prestabilization." The simple knowledge on the part of operators that the government was taking a hand in the market, either buying or selling dollars or sterling, had an immediate effect and the course of the exchange remained steady throughout official and unofficial trading at 122.25 and 25.194.

NO CONTEST HERE.

The experience of Messrs. J. F. Strickland, J. A. McKone, E. F. Reid and W. R. Turner, Jr., in connection with the Board of Education in being again elected by acclamation as the members of the same quartette were two years ago, is unique in local municipal history.

To have the same four men, after being elected without a contest for a two-year term, returned for two more years of office without an election is an incident that rarely happens.

The failure of the electors to nominate anyone in opposition to the retiring four members must be accepted as an indication that the citizens generally are satisfied with the policies inaugurated by the Board of Education, and convinced that the four members whose terms expire at the end of this year have proven capable members of the board and given good service thereon.

The members so honoured by the confidence of their fellow-citizens are to be congratulated upon their return to office without the trouble of an election.

PLENTY OF CHOICE.

The electors of Peterboro are to have an unusual experience in connection with the election of a member of the Utilities Commission at the coming election, inasmuch as the biggest field of candidates in the history of that body will appeal for the support of the people.

Six citizens were nominated yesterday, and while they have until 9 o'clock tonight to qualify and the final composition of the field will not be known until then, the probabilities are most of these candidates—if not all of them—will enter the race.

Three of those nominated have had previous municipal experience, two of them, Geo. H. Duncan and A. A. McIntyre, being ex-Mayors, while ex-Ald. E. M. Turner has resigned from the City Council to seek election to the Utilities Commission.

The other three, Fred. Hills, of the firm of Hill, Weddell and Hills; E. R. Shirley, electrical engineer, and M. H. Quinlan, are well-known citizens who have not hitherto offered themselves for public service.

Should the half dozen qualify the race for the Utilities Commission will be a record-breaker.

CHRISTMAS.

Christmas!

How many things are wrapped up in that one word!

Christmas!

The most joyous day, the most wonderful festival of the year.

Christmas!

The season of friendliness when the Christian world celebrates the birth of humanity's greatest Friend.

Christmas!

Think what it means—love, friends, home, sacrifice, thought of others.

Christmas!

Commercialized though it may be to some extent, time of worry though it may be to some people, period of extra work though it may represent to others, yet the happiest period to all.

Christmas!

The one time in the year when even the most calloused individual feels the urge to help others, when thought of self gives way to consideration for those about us, when loving hearts plan happiness for those held most dear, when, as Dickens has said somewhere, "of all times in the year the memory of every remediable sorrow, wrong and trouble in the world around us should be active with us."

A wonderful season!

May it mean to every citizen of Peterboro and district tomorrow a time of happiness, united families and evidence on all sides of love and friendship.

A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT.

When Christians speak of the divine plan of redemption and salvation, do they perceive a touch of divinity in the very humanity of the birth of Jesus and also of His death?

Could any scene be more intensely human than that which St. Luke presents of that inn at Bethlehem? And what tragedy could be more poignantly human than that which St. John describes in his narative of Calvary!

But is this gripping humanness human? What man, were he so commissioned, would conceive or employ two such scenes as symbols of his humanity? Neither of them is even approximately typical of the common lot of men. Companionship with the lowly, the obscure, the outcast! . . . Not typical, not characteristic of mankind, but permeated, nevertheless, with an overwhelming sense of humanity.

And to the Christian heart all the pitiful circumstances of the birth of Jesus—the plight of Mary and Joseph homeless in a strange place, the warmth of the animals in the stable, neglect and want—suggest in their quintessence of humanity not the inspired realism of man, but a divine anxiety to appear starkly, compellingly human.

Today there is a growing tendency to emphasize the humanity of Jesus and to minimize H[is] even to deny it. Some men would persuade themselves of novelty in a modernistic thought [that] is [but] an old heresy.

The Christian pausing tomorrow in meditation may perhaps glimpse in the SIMPLICITY AND TENDERNESS of Bethlehem (apart from the fact of Bethlehem) a revelation of God Himself. To some it may seem an expression even of divine irony, almost sardonic, as if the God-man realized, rather was showing he realized, that the awesome paradox of Himself was beyond the intelligence of most of His contemporary fellowmen.

So while Christmas, the anniversary of the birth of Jesus, accentuates His manhood, his kinship with the rest of men, may we see in His humanity, in the manner of His humanity, evidence of His divinity!

THE CHURCH IN POLITICS.

(From Willison's Monthly)

In all good faith many clergymen have made prohibition a religious question and have not hesitated to assert and maintain this position from the pulpit. A minister, whether he be Protestant or Catholic, has as much right to speak through the press or from the platform upon any public question as has any other citizen. These are, however, few political questions which can be wisely discussed from the pulpit in the heat of a general election. One imagines that the contest which has just closed has given additional force to this view. Tens of thousands of those who oppose prohibitory legislation are as moral and as religious as are its advocates and champions. This probably will not be denied by many of the clergymen who have been active in the election. To describe all opponents of prohibition as agents of the liquor interest is unjust and peculiarly unwise. The churches have no monopoly of wisdom in dealing with political problems, nor do ministers always set an example of discretion in speech or charity in judgment. Now, however, that the election is over, one can only hope that congregations which have been divided will be re-united and that even extreme political action in the pulpit will be overlooked. It is not particularly the fortunes of political parties over which we should be concerned. Governments come and Governments go and parties rise and fall, but the Christian church is so infinitely the best agency in human civilization that one regrets the appearance of any issue which tends to drive men away from the church and produces irritation and anger between clergy and laity.

CANADIAN INVESTORS AND FOREIGN SECURITIES.

The past few months have brought a great increase in Canadian interest in foreign securities, chiefly Government bonds. Good Canadian securities have advanced to such an extent as to divert attention elsewhere for higher yields.

This does not bring a fundamental change in our international relations, for the money loaned outside of this country by Canadians is a mere drop in the bucket as compared with investments of outsiders here. And there is no doubt but that the main outside interest of Canadians is still in United States stocks. It is only in stock market circles that the continuous and substantial holdings of stocks listed on the New York exchange are realized; but any of us can see the evidence by visiting stock brokerage houses and finding the New York board as prominent, and in many cases more prominent, than the Montreal and Toronto boards. Again, there is an established Canadian interest in a few enterprises that were developed before the war, notably Brazilian Traction, Barcelona Traction, Twin City Rapid Transit Company, and certain industrial enterprises such as American Cyanamid, American ales 3000 Shredded Wheat and a few others. The recently developed interest in foreign Government securities is of a different character, representing a straight investment demand.

The approach of these foreign Governments has been slow and cautious. As in the United States, it has taken a few years' time to convert people to the fact that foreign issues are not all fakes. Our sad experience with Russian roubles and with internal securities payable in francs, marks and lire made the conversion all the more difficult. But the fact remains that governmental credit, and more particularly that of an international character, is the best in the world, and, as in other things, the truth will ultimately prevail.

We have, therefore, an important change in viewpoint—a widening of the investor's outlook. Instead of the investment balance being nearly all debits, we have established a few new credits, however small in proportion they may be. Buying on the present scale can hardly be permanent. It has arisen from the fact that the recovery in security prices first made itself felt with securities best known and best regarded in the centres where money has accumulated rapidly, and since these centres are mainly on this continent, United States and Canadian securities advanced sharply. Great Britain, as usual, has been able to pretty well look after herself, but has not as yet had much surplus money to lend abroad. Thus it was left to the United States, and in a smaller and secondary way to Canada, to turn attention to the foreign Government and other well secured external issues.—Monetary Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

To every Examiner reader, a merry, merry Christmas.

The four retiring members of the Board of Education have received a nice Christmas box from the electors in the form of an election by acclamation.

There is a lot of joking about Christmas illness, but doubtless the individuals who left their Christmas scripts until the last moment and find the dispensaries slow in responding are really feeling sick.

The Toronto newspapers are busily engaged in trying to pick next year's Mayor. The contest gives them a chance to rip into each other, and the opportunity is not being neglected.

Judging by the anxiety there seems to be to serve on the Utilities Commission, it might be good business to charge a fee for membership instead of paying the Commissioners a salary.

Any unusual brightness in the atmosphere on Sunday can be charged up to the first day's wearing of the annual crop of Christmas ties.

Many a fond father gets his greatest thrill out of Christmas in anticipating the fun he is going to have in playing with the children's toys.

Eventually, doubtless, Canadians will discover what was accomplished at the Imperial Conference, but they'll have to wait until the argument over it has subsided.

The old joke about selling ice cream in Alaska will have to be dropped. The frozen delicacy has actually been sold there, and at $1.75 a quart, too.

The trading of Rogers Hornsby is just another proof of the fact that professional baseball is business—not sport.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—With only one car of hogs received at the Union Stock Yards yesterday it looks like a complete clean-up for the Christmas holiday. Nothing in the way of fresh receipts are looked for until Monday. The demand for lambs is not strong at present, but early in the new year an improvement is looked for. CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Persistent deliveries on December wheat contracts here, together with slowness of shipping demand, had a bearish effect yesterday on the wheat market as a whole. Last quotations on wheat were unsteady at the same as Wednesdays finish to 1 cent lower; corn 1-2 to 5-8c off; oats 1-4 to 5-8c down and provisions unchanged to a rise of 32 cents.

At first the wheat market showed something of an upward trend owing more or less to confirmation of reduced unofficial estimates of the wheat estimates of the Prairie provinces of Canada. Besides, there were reports of heavy rains in Argentine likely to delay the movement of Argentine crop.

Selling pressure on December wheat became of increased volume in the later dealings and with December quotations going to discount the distant months were also pulled down.

Offerings of December yesterday were considerably larger than has been the rule of late. Meanwhile cash demand here for wheat was very limited and export sales of North American wheat yesterday totalled but 300,000 to 400,000 bushels including a little hard winter wheat for shipment by way of the Gulf of Mexico. Some selling of wheat on the part of country mills in the southwest was noted.

Corn and oats showed independent weakness.

The government survey of the pig crop indicating comparatively small increase was a disappointment to friends of higher prices for feed grain.

Provisions were strengthened by the pig crop survey.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain here yesterday continued of a limited character. A moderate trade was done with local and country buyers on the domestic market, and prices were steady.

A feature of the spring wheat flour trade was the demand that developed from English importers, and a fair volume of business was transacted. The local demand was also good and prices were firm. The winter wheat trade was inactive but the undertone was steady.

Considerable business was again transacted in all lines of millfeed and values ruled firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was fairly good and prices were unchanged.

An active business continued in all grades of eggs, and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 431 cases.

The condition of the market for potatoes was unchanged, business being still quiet but prices were steady. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.70 to $1.75 per bag of 90 lbs. New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.55 per bag, and Quebec White stock at $1.40 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The tone of the market for beans was firm under a good demand.

Sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked were made at $2.75 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $3.00 per bushel.

The demand for butter was slow but prices were well maintained. The receipts were 63 packages.

The trade in cheese was also quiet, but the feeling was steady. The receipts were 206 boxes.

THE PRESBYTERIAN RECORD

To the Editor of The Examiner:
Sir:

Rev P. M. McDonald of Toronto has recently broadcasted in the Canadian Press, a letter concerning the Presbyterian Record and myself.

Mr. McDonald writes: "On June 4th, 1925, the Official Annual Report of the Presbyterian Record was submitted to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in which was a statement from Dr. Scott expressing his desire to retire from his position of Editor and Manager." . . . "On June 8th—the General Assembly—in harmony with his expressed wish relieved him of his duties. Dr. Scott's connection with the Presbyterian Record, the Official Organ of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, therefore ceased before the consummation of the Union on June 10th". . . . "The publication of the Presbyterian Record was continued by the Committee appointed for this purpose, until it was incorporated with other similar publications in the U.C.C. Record."

Mr. McDonald, to use his own words, "disregards the full facts of the case," May I state the facts, first, generally, then of the Assembly of 1925.

(1) The Presbyterian Record has been for fifty years officially registered by the Canadian Government as a periodical entitled to newspaper postal rates. I have published it for thirty-five years. Every month I receive from the Government Post Office an account for postage, a statement headed: "To the Presbyterian Record" There has never been hint of change. The Government never transferred these privileges to any other. The Government of Canada thus declares each month that the Presbyterian Record which I mail each month is the original, only Presbyterian Record.

(2) In sending my Annual Report to the Presbyterian Assembly of 1925, I knew there would be a defection from the Presbyterian Church, and in order to leave that Church free to make any desired change, I stated, regarding my work, "This trust so long held from this Assembly, comes, with the issue of June, 1925, to an end." See Assembly Minutes, 1925, page 248.

When Assembly met, June, 1925, the June issue of the Record was not completed. But on the afternoon of 8 June, without any notice to me as a party to the contract, the Assembly resolved: "The Assembly relieves him forthwith of his duties as Editor and Manager."

Next day, 9 June, a Committee, headed by Mr. P. M. McDonald, waited upon me, and demanded the books, accounts, mailing lists, everything belonging to the Presbyterian Record.

I told them that my appointment could not thus be cancelled, without notice, in the middle of an issue, and that I would surrender nothing until I had completed the June issue, then in preparation, as per the trust committed to me and as stated in my report.

Failing in this attempt to secure and destroy the Presbyterian Record, they went their way, and about three hours later, they withdrew from the Presbyterian Assembly; and the day following, June 10, they joined the U.C.C., and had henceforth no part nor lot in the Presbyterian Church in Canada, nor in its Official Organ the Presbyterian Record.

They could not take the Church with them, for the Presbyterian Church is not a Civil Corporation, but is simply the fellowship of those who accept the Presbyterian Standards of Doctrine and Polity with their freedom and rights of the people. They could not take away the charter of the Church for the Presbyterian Church in Canada never had a charter.

The Presbyterian Assembly, which continued in session for another week, after the defection on 10 June immediately rescinded the resolution 'relieving" me, and reappointed me as before, Editor and Manager of the Presbyterian Record.

Mr. McDonald and others, who were now in another Church, [I'll] attempted in various ways to get possession of the Record, but they obtained nothing at any time, either of the Record from myself, or of its mailing privileges from the government. And finally, all their efforts in vain, they printed a small pamphlet, an "Imitation Record", called it the Presbyterian Record, and then declared it incorporated in the U.C.C. Record The Presbyterian Record, meantime, with its government monthly acknowledgment, kept steadily on without pause break or change to this day.

The Record had never been copyrighted, and immediately after 10 June, 1925, I took steps to have it copyrighted in Ottawa not as a new publication, but as the one which had been registered there for fifty years, and I submitted issues of it authorized by the Presbyterian Assembly prior to June, 1925. Thus it stands today, with its monthly Government declaration that it is the original and only Presbyterian Record, and its Copyright as "The Official Monthly Record of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

What Mr. McDonald means in closing by my "innocently giving away my whole case"—I do not know. But this I know, I did not give away the Presbyterian Record, nor its government mailing privileges, nor its Official Government Copyright, nor anything else belonging to it. I know also that while it had in 1924, before the great betrayal, an average monthly issue of fifty-three thousand, it has had in 1926 an average monthly issue of forty thousand.

And I know further, from the above facts, that the statement "Continuing the Presbyterian Record" which appears on the title page of every issue of the U.C.U. Record is "illegal and untrue."

HABITS PF THOUGHT

The opinion is universal among psychologists that only a small portion of our mental powers are used in conscious thinking. Conscious thinking is accomplished by only a small percentage of thought force, while the great majority of our mental energy is used in the unconscious phase of the mind.

The memory of all past actions and learning, as well as our emotive forces, are at most times below the plane of consciousness, and constitute the vast ocean of mind of which the conscious is only as ripples on the surface of the mind.

Our every day actions are simply the results of habits of thinking, which become fixed by training. If we wish to awaken at 6:00 A.M. each day, the habit is soon developed in the memory mind, so that we do not need an alarm clock. We learn to walk and in a little while it is not necessary to think about the movements we must use and only the desire to walk starts our physical organism into motion and we walk miles with no conscious thought of the action of our muscles.

We are born with an unconscious knowledge of nutrition, and digestion goes on without thinking consciously about it. The heart has learned to beat before we are born and continues to do so without the direction of the will. The blood circulates through the body carrying nourishment to the cells and eliminating morbid material for which the body has no further use. From our first cry as a baby to the last gasp at death, our lungs go on with their work of supplying the system with oxygen and eliminating poisonous gases.

It is apparent that some hidden knowledge of the control of these organs is present, even before birth, and although the source of this knowledge is unknown and perhaps unknowable, yet we have discovered that organic function is stimulated or inhibited by our conscious and unconscious thinking.

We know that sudden fright will quicken the pulse and that grief will slow down the heart action. Desire for food makes the digestive juices flow more freely. Breathing becomes more rapid under the stimulation of certain emotions or passions.

As these acute manifestations of the power of thought can be so easily observed and experienced, it is likewise true that functional activity of the body is influenced by regular habits of thought. Our everyday thoughts will either stimulate or depress. Chronic thoughts of fear or grief are more insidious and harmful than sudden shocks.

Loss of appetite for one meal is surely not as harmful as never being really hungry for any food. A "good cry" is certainly depressing, but the tears of an occasional cry are only "drops in the bucket" to the unshed tears of one who suffers from chronic sadness.

Start in now to regulate your everyday thinking so that gladness takes the place of sadness and depressing thoughts give way to courage, hope, joy and tolerance. When you do this, you are half cured already.

DISCOVERIES

A new star was discovered the other day.

It had been there all the time, just waiting for a telescope big enough to reach it.

A new element was found in the laboratory of a large university.

It had been mixed up in the earth's compound from the beginning and only awaited instruments sensitive enough to record its presence.

Now, if we are honest, we admit that these discoveries are important, but that they mean little to us.

They are interesting, but they don't touch us.

Our lives go on just the same.

Neither ourselves nor our grandchildren will be greatly affected by the distant star of the elusive element.

The real discoveries—the discoveries that matter—are those that are made in that little world of activity which we call ourselves.

They are the times when suddenly we "wake up," are "converted," our eyes are opened, and we add something to our lives.

They are such times as when we suddenly see for ourselves the greatness of a classic piece of literature, a statue, a painting, or a piece of music.

We may have looked at them many times before and never have seen their full beauty, or have listened to them unnumerable times without appreciating their deep meaning.

And then—Presto!

Their greatness breaks upon us in a sudden discovery.

It matters not how long they have been in existence. For us they are just born.

Like the star and the element, they have been there all the time. It is we who have developed to the place where we are able to grasp their presence.

Such a day is an important one.

"Commonplace people do not see the greatest gifts of others," and when you find yourself falling in love with something of classic greatness you have the assurance of having grown yourself.

The world's progress is marked by the discovery of stars and elements; your own by the discovery of greatness in the great.

A Child was Born in Bethlehem

NEARLY two thousand years have passed since the Wise Men of the East presented gifts and the humble shepherds paid their tributes of devotion to Mother and Child.

Christian civilization dates from that event and since then has raised motherhood and childhood to the highest plane in the estimation of the western world.

For the sake of mothers and their children, men toil and plan, sacrifice and endure. For the sake of mothers and children, men established the great institution of Life Insurance.

By Life Insurance—in Canada and the United States alone—the continued safety and comfort of women and children is secured to the extent of nearly eighty billions of dollars and this great institution is intimately connected with the Advent.

Could such a system as Life Insurance, with its primary motive the protection of women and children, be possible today had not the pagan ideals of decadent Greece and Rome been superseded by those of Christian civilization?

In the modern world mother and child constitute the two supreme reasons for Life Insurance.

CANADA FACING SERIOUS TROUBLE FAILING THE ADOPTION OF DUNCAN REPORT ON RIGHTS OF MARITIMES

Says Rielle Thompson in Luncheon Address at Lion's Club.

ARE DISCONTENTED.

Means of Ridding Dominion of Perilous Thorn in the Flesh.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Canada risks facing a sectional problem comparable with the Irish troubles in seriousness, failing the adoption of the Duncan report on Maritime Province rights, in the opinion of Rielle Thomsen, associate editor of The Financial Post. Addressing the Lions Club at luncheon yesterday, the speaker offered the recommendations of the report recently laid on the table at Ottawa, as the means of ridding the Dominion of a perilous thorn in the flesh.

He found the Maritime Provinces at present in such a state of discontent that he declared it impossible to conceive the results of rejection of the report. Their grievances he found in most cases substantially justifiable.

The speaker recited the cause of unrest in Eastern Canada, tracing its origin from the days of Confederation to conditions since the war. "It must not be forgotten, he pointed out, "that the Maritime Provinces did not want to enter the Confederations. All the overtures came from Central Canada. July 1, 1867, was not a day of rejoicing in the East—so much so that newspapers carried black-bordered announcements of the news and flags on buildings waved at half-mast.'

Reminding his hearers that at the time of Confederation the Maritime Provinces were very prosperous compared with Central Canada, which was "in dire straits," Mr. Thomson said that the East gave up much and got many promises in return.

Examining the various promises made at the time of Confederation, the speaker said few of them had been carried out. Definite promises anent diversion of traffic, tariff questions, canals and railway facilities had been, if at all, carried out in part only. The promise that traffic originating in Canada would flow outward from West to East by Canadian ports was a matter upon which he expatiated. Only one-third of the grain exports leave by Canadian ports, he declared, and of this figure only one-eighth flowed through Maritime ports.

"They therefore ask, with some right, I think, that the ports of Halifax and St John be nationalized and administered by a Federal Harbor Board as is Montreal," he said.

THREE LOST IN THEATRE FIRE

Trio of Firemen Killed by Falling Wall—Others Injured.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Tragedy yesterday overtook the homes of twelve Winnipeg families, whose plans for a gay Christmastide have given way to mourning and grief.

In the most disastrous fire, from the standpoint of human casualties, experienced here, three lives were lost and nine persons injured when the Winnipeg Theatre, on Notre Dame and Adelaide Street, was destroyed by fire early yesterday. The building, which was one of the landmarks of the city, is a total loss. The damage is estimated at $125,000.

The victims, all firemen, were buried beneath tons of debris when two of the walls and the ceiling collapsed under the force of several streams of water.

The dead:

Donald Melville, Robert Stewart, and R. S. Shearer.

The injured:

A. Smith, R. C. Kirk (both seriously), Alex. Brown, J. G. Brass, David Williamson, R. Turner, G. H. Gilmour, Arthur Stewart and J. Budge.

The bodies of the three victims were recovered from the ruins after several hours of search. Shearer and Stewart had been badly burned, while Melville was crushed beneath beams and masonry.

For three hours the firemen battled with the roaring flames which ate their way through the inflammable interior. Dense clouds of smoke repeatedly forced the men into the open, but a special squad eventually worked through the Chris Moeller Held at Victoria With Wet Goods Aboard.

VALUED AT $350,000.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— The application for a writ of mandamus to compel F. W. Davey, collector of customs at Victoria, to grant clearance of the liquor ship "Chris Moeller" and its valuable cargo, was refused yesterday by Chief Justice Hunter in the supreme court.

The "Chris Moeller," with a cargo of liquor aboard worth approximately $350,000, has been held at Victoria for some weeks. The cargo, according to the shippers, was destined for San Blas, Mexico.

FALLS TO DEATH FROM B. C. HOTEL

Mystery Surrounds Death of Young Montreal Man in Vancouver.

ROOM MATE HELD.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — Kenneth McLeod, 24, said to be a member of a prominent Montreal family, fell from the eighth floor of the Hotel Vancouver last night to his death. Reginald C. Burdick, 23, his roommate, is held by the police pending investigation. Both are said to have been fellow students at Royal Military College, Kingston.

McLeod and Burdick arrived here yesterday from Victoria, McLeod being on his way to Montreal. Both registered at the hotel and occupied the same room. When McLeod's body was secured from the roof of the hotel's laundry building, it was without coat, vest, collar or tie.

Window Broken.

Detective W. G. Grant, who investigated, reported that he found the window in the room occupied by the two men broken, but the hole too small for the body of a man to pass through. Beside the body the officer found a necktie, handkerchief and envelope, a piece of paper and a broken curtain cord.

Burdick, who appeared dazed by the tragedy, according to the police, said that about 7.30 p.m. he left the room, went to the ground floor, returned a few minutes later and found McLeode missing. He raised the window, looked out, and saw what appeared to be a body lying on the laundry roof. He then notified the management.

PIMENTOES FOR KANSAS.

ARKANSAS CITY, Dec. 24. — Spanish red peppers can be grown in this region in the opinion of D. R. Ranney, local merchant, who is urging that experiments be made with pimentoes here. He volunteered to give $50 to be spent for seed in order to see the experiment tried.

FALL-SINCLAIR TRAIL ON FEB. 2

Summon Former Officials of Continental Trading Company as Officials.

PLEAD NOT GUILTY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—The last legal manoeuvre to upset conspiracy indictments against Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, and Harry F. Sinclair, growing out of the leasing of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve to Sinclair's Mammoth Oil Company, failed yesterday and the trial was docketed to begin in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on February 2.

Fall and Sinclair both entered pleas of not guilty after Justice Jennings Bailey had denied two motions, one in behalf of each defendant, to quash the indictments.

The prosecution began final shaping of its trial plans by filing application for summons for Harry M. Blackmer and James E. O'Neil, former officials of the Continental Trading Company of Canada, who are now in France. They were inaccessible as witnesses last year in the Teapot Dome civil proceedings in the United States district court at Cheyenne, Wyo., but the government contended there that the Continental Company from which Sinclair bought crude products, was the instrumentality through which oil profits were shared with Fall.

Under an Act of Congress approved last July at the instance of Senator Walsh of Montana, prosecutor of the Senate oil inquiry of three years ago, Blackmer and O'Neil may be summoned for testimony before a United States consular court anywhere in the world.

FRENCH CABINET REFUSE REQUEST FOR NEW TRIAL

Impossible Unless Army Court Martial Had Erred in Procedure.

NOT RE-OPEN CASE.

Convicted Germans Had Come To Gemersheim Looking For Trouble.

PARIS, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press.)—German Ambassador von Hoesch, who yesterday requested a retrial of those involved in the Germersheim shooting incident or the pardon of the convicted Germans, got little if any satisfaction from the French foreign office.

Secretary-General Berthelot, of the foreign office, who received the ambassador, and listened to the German protest against the acquittal of Lieut. Roucier, of the French army, who was involved in the incident, said that a retrial was impossible unless the army court-martial had erred in its procedure.

Trouble Makers.

Discussing the merits of the case, M. Berthelot told Ambassador von Roesch that the relations of the French troops with the German population had always been excellent. As the convicted Germans were non-residents of the town, he said it was apparent that they had gone to Germersheim for the purpose of provoking trouble.

Roucier was cleared by a French court-martial of charges of killing one German and wounding two others, while several Germans were convicted for striking at him. The case occupies the newspapers, but opinions as to what ought to be done about the verdict are divided along party lines. Thus L'Ere Nouvelle insists that the duty of all "our Republicans in the government" is to liberate the sentenced Germans forthwith.

Local Incident.

The Righist organs and even those politically impartial, assert that it was merely a local incident; that Roucier acted in legitimate self-defense and that Germany, whose trials of war criminals by the Leipzig court, resulted in acquittals or "featherweight sentences," has no right to talk now.

Le Gaulois warns Germany that if the Locarno spirit exists, then the Berlin government should endeavor to calm the popular indignation. The newspaper adds: "European peace should be above such miserable polemics. If it is not, then it is not the peace that Germany wants."

FARMER FASTS 50 DAYS.

JONES CITY, Okla., Dec. 24.—After 50 days without food, Frank A. Wolfe, farmer, is again eating. Wolfe said he tried the fasting cure for an almost hopeless case of ulcerated stomach and intestinal trouble. He walks an average of 50 blocks a day and reports he has strength enough now to lift a 300-pound load.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press). — A force of United States bluejackets has been landed at Rio Grande Bar, Nicaragua, to protect foreign lives and property, the State Department announced yesterday.

In the absence of any explanation from the Admiral, State Department officials were inclined to believe that interference by the revolutionaries with the movement of hardwood lumber by the United States and other foreign companies had caused the naval commander to put ashore a bluejacket force.

The dog stole the pocketbook and ran to a nearby alley, where he was tearing the pocketbook apart when discovered.

The Church on Christmas Day

FOR unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Councillor, The Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

AS I LOOK out upon the landscape, all draped as it is in a mantle of white, there comes to my mind a question to be found in the Book of Job; where God says to His servant, "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?" What Job thought or said relative to this question I cannot say. But I have learned enough of his nature to be fairly confident that if he had never given any thought to the snow before he certainly would do some thinking after this question had been addressed to him. It was not put to him as an idle, aimless question. It was intended to make him think.

CHRISTMAS HERE AND THERE

To those of us who have been born in some northern part of the world, it seems most fitting that there should be snow at Christmas. To have the shades all down, logs burning brightly in the fireplace, the Christmas tree all draped and decked; with music or a good book and the company of those we love—we shall enjoy these all the better if, on the outside, there is frost and ice and snow. With these we have a perfect background for an ideal Christmas. In some measure we have entered into the treasures of the snow.

But what of those who live in some southern part of the earth? Remember that in far-off Australia, a world by itself, standing in the waters of the southern Pacific, Christmas comes when it is mid-summer. There, in that sunny clime, there is neither frost nor snow at Christmas. Yet, although they have not 'the treasures of the snow,' Christmas is enjoyed as much by them as it is by us.

CHRISTMAS PREPAREDNESS

Well might the question be asked:

"In our rush through the jostling crowds to buy Christmas gifts are we really preparing for Christmas? Our minds are clogged with lists of persons for whom we must buy presents with embarrassment about securing the money to pay for them and with perplexed calculating as to what these individuals would like us to give them. Are we over-doing the matter of buying and receiving of gifts and is it injurious to the Christmas spirit?

"We lay more stress upon getting ready for the Christmas tree instead of preparing Christmas hearts. Is not the most of our so-called preparedness for Christmas nothing more than preparedness for the Christmas tree? That is pagan not Christian. Spiritual provision for Christmas cannot be bought at any department store; it must come from the inner department of life in contact with God and Jesus Christ. Christmas is in danger of being spoiled by its best friends. The true Christmas spirit of goodwill is buried underneath an avalanche of gifts given and received."

COMMERCIALISM AND CHRISTMAS

The tendency at present is to make Christmas too material. We are slowly but surely sacrificing the spiritual for the merely physical. Why should we have so much hurry and worry in Christmas? Any thinking person can see that many are dreading it for the strain it entails, both physical and financial. The tragedy of it all is that we are forgetting that the first great Christmas gift was 'without money and without price,' as we try to outdo other givers in the expensiveness of our gifts which we really cannot afford.

The greatest gifts that life has are absolutely free; the air we breathe, the sunshine we bask in, health, happiness, friends and love. It has been well said that the greatest gifts you can make at Christmas time are friendliness, thoughtfulness and love. These cost nothing. But if you are worrying as to how much you have to spend, love and friendliness are not likely to be there, and the gifts you give will be worth little, no matter how much you pay for them. Commercialism has gotten into Christmas and driven Christ ou .

I am reminded of an incident wh[ich] was said to have happened in [Edi]nburgh toward the close of [the] Great War. It seems that [Chris]tmas had come to Edinburgh [and] the mothers of Scotland [had] the sacrifices they had made [in] the giving of their sons on the [field] of battle. The great building [in] which the King addressed [the] gathering of mothers and [wives] was beautifully decorated. [The] platform was one mass of [flow]ers and foliage. In speaking [of] the event an Edinburgh paper [said] could scarcely see the [King] for the decorations. That is [just] what is happening at Christmas. We can scarcely see the King for the decorations.

THE TREASURES OF THE SNOW

Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? Are we able to appraise and appreciate the value of the snowflakes?

"Silently, like thoughts that come and go, the snowflakes fall, each one a gem."

Surely there is an Artistic Value in the snow as Longfellow in a chaste paragraph suggests.—

"How beautiful it was, falling so silently all day long, all night long, on the mountains, on the meadows, on the roofs of the living, on the graves of the dead!"

J. T. Trowbridge paints a wonderful word picture in which he sets forth the artistic value of the snow in the followin; lines:

"The speckled sky is dim with snow,
The light flakes falter and fall slow;
Athwart the hill-top, rapt and pale,
Silently drops a silvery veil;
And all the valley is shut in
By flickering curtains gray and thin.

"On turf and curb and bower-roof
The snow-storm spreads its ivory woof;
It paves with pearl the garden-walk;
And lovingly around the tatter'd stalk
And shivering stem its magic weaves
A mantle fair as lily-leaves."

No doubt there is an agricultural value in the snow which is appreciated by those who plough the land, scatter the seed, and garner the golden grain. But it is not so much of these things that I am thinking at this Christmas season of the year. My thoughts are of Him Whose Blood can wash the sin-stained soul whiter than the snow with all its virgin whiteness.

CHRISTMAS WITHOUT CHRIST

Christmas without Christ would be an impossibility, although to multitudes that's all Christmas really is. At His birth He was crowded out of the inn. And in our round of festivities at this season we are crowding Him out again. I do not say that this crowding out is intentional, but it is just as effectual.

Maltbie Babcock says:

"We see Jesus in the manger. We adore Him; we worship Him; we glorify Him. We stand oppressed before such love—a love stronger than death—a love so strong that it did die that we might live. We thank Thee for the sweetness of human love, but how could we ever have dared to think that such love was in the heart of God for us! We look on nature and see Thy beauty and Thy ma esty, but we are afraid, for we have sinned. And then we learn that Thou hast sent Thy Son, to be bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh; and before such inconceivable love we can only worship and adore. We are so weary of our failures and our slow growth toward Thee. Cleanse us deeply from sin, strengthen our moral purposes."

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

If the spirit of Christmas be with us, as I trust it may be, then certain other things of a revolutionary nature will follow.

Selfishness will die a death of starvation as it ought to die. No one who really understands the meaning of the manger at Bethlehem can ever be so selfish again.

Avarice, which is a member of the same family as selfishness, would be hung higher than Haman, and be buried so deep that it would never have a resurrection. Foolish pride would go down in crushing defeat; while senseless strife and silly bickerings would shame each other to death. That unity for which Jesus prayed in His High Priestly prayer would become a fact and a force. Racial animosities, so anti-Christian, would be drowned in a sea of brotherhood; and war, with all its horrors, its brutality, its devilishness, would become an utter impossibility.

Some day, although it may seem a long way off now, "Peace on earth," will become a glorious possibility.

Meanwhile there is peace on earth to men of goodwill. It is the peace of God which passeth all understanding. It is the gift of God. We get it by virtue of that blood which washes whiter than snow—even the blood of Jesus whose birthday we now celebrate.

—Allan Fairbairn.

CHRISTMAS EVERY DAY

A SALVATION Army lassie, a successful worker in the slums, a girl whose only book was the Bible, and who was sadly ignorant of the things that go to make people "cultured," was asked on one occasion what was the secret of her success. Her eyes sparkled as she answered: "Oh, it's love; it's love in the heart. You let it come out and they feel it." Christ was continually re-born in her. To-day, to-morrow, every day, Christ must be born in us; that is to say, His Spirit must inspire us and shed the love of God abroad in our hearts. To have this means to have Christmas in our hearts every day of the year.

Mabel Ashton's Dream

By REV. COURTNEY H. FENN

AS THE guests came together in the brilliantly lighted parlors, at the home of Mabel Ashton, that crisp Winter evening, there was nothing unusual in the appearance of the rooms to indicate that the party to which they had been invited was to be, in any respect, different from the round of gaiety to which they had been devoting themselves for the greater part of the Winter.

Some of the guests, as they greeted their young hostess, noticed an unusual degree of nervousness in her manner, but, attributing it to the excitement of preparation and anticipation, thought no more of it, and all were soon engaged in conversation and in making up their cards for the various dances of the evening. The musicians were in their places, and the young people beginning to wonder why the signal was not given for the orchestra to strike up, when Mabel Ashton, her sweet face flushed and pale by turns, took her stand near the musicians, and, after closing her eyes for a moment, during which the room became perfectly still, in a voice at first trembling but soon clear and steady, she said:

"Friends, I know you will think me very queer, but before we do anything else I must tell you a little story. I had a dream last night, which has made such an impression on my mind and heart that I must tell it to you. I dreamed that to-night had arrived, and you had all assembled in these rooms, when there came to the door, and was ushered in, a guest who seemed strangely familiar and yet whom I could not recognise.

"He had a rare face, peaceful, yet a little sad in its expression, and his eyes were more penetrating than any I had ever before seen. He was dressed in neat yet very plain clothing, but there was something in his appearance which marked him as no ordinary man. While I was trying to think where I had seen him, he advanced to me, took my hand, and said, gently, 'You do not recognize me, Mabel?' Surprised at such a form of salutation from a stranger, I could only say: 'Your face, sir, seems familiar, yet I cannot recall your name.'

"'Yet I am one whom you have invited here this evening, or, I should rather say, one to whom both you and your parents have extended many invitations to be present here whenever I am able to come. You have even invited me to make my home here; and I have come to-night to join your little company.'

"'I beg a thousand pardons,' I replied, 'but you mystify me all the more, and I beg that you will relieve me whom I have the pleasure of greeting.' Then he offered to my view the palms of his hands in which were scars as of nail wounds, and looked me through and through with those piercing yet tender eyes, and I did not need that he should say to me: 'I am Jesus Christ, your Lord.'

"To say that I was startled would be to express only a small part of my feelings. For a moment I stood still, not knowing what to do or say. Why could I not fall at His feet and say with all my heart, 'I am filled with joy at seeing you here, Lord Jesus?'

"With those eyes looking into mine I could not say it, for it was not true. For some reason, on the instant only half comprehended by myself, I was sorry He had come. It was an awful thought, to be glad to have all the rest of you here yet sorry to see my Saviour and Lord!

"Could it be that I was ashamed of Him, or was I ashamed of something in myself? At length I recovered myself in a degree and said: 'You wish to speak to my parents, I am sure.' 'Yes, Mabel,' as He accompanied me to where my mother and father sat gazing and wondering at my evident confusion in greeting an unexpected guest; 'but I have come chiefly to be with you and your young friends, for I have often heard you speak enthusiastically in Christian Endeavor meetings about how delightful it would be if you could have Me visibly present with you.'

"Again the blush came to my cheeks as the thought flashed through my mind, to-morrow night is prayer-meeting night, I should have been delighted to see Him then. But why not to-night on this pleasant occasion? I led Him to my parents, and, in a somewhat shamefaced fashion introduced Him.

"They both gave a start of amazed surprise, but convinced by His appearance that there was no mistake, my father recovered a degree of self-possession, bade Him welcome, offered Him a seat, remarked that this was an unexpected pleasure, and then, after a somewhat lengthy pause, explained to Jesus that his daughter, Mabel, being very closely occupied with her studies, and having little variety in life, had been allowed to invite a few friends in for a social evening, with a quiet little dancing by way of healthful exercise. Her friends were all of the very choicest, and he felt that this was a very harmless amusement, which the Church had come to look upon in a somewhat different light from that in which it was viewed forty years ago. By removing the objectionable feature of bad company it had now made this pleasant pastime a safe indulgence for its young people.

"As my father stammered out, in the presence of Jesus, these words of apology, which had fallen from my own lips, I felt myself flush crimson with shame both for my dear father and myself. Why should he apologize at all for what he considered unquestionably right? And how hollow it all sounded there in the presence of the Lord! Did not Jesus know that my studies were not so pressing but that I could keep late hours, sometimes several nights in the week, at parties?

"Then father, anxious to relieve my evident embarrassment, said: 'I am sure we can leave these young people safely to themselves, and nothing would please me so well as to take You, my Lord Jesus, off into my study for a talk.'

"'No,' said Jesus, 'Mabel has often invited Me, and I came to-night especially to be with her. Will you introduce Me to your friends, Mabel? Some of them I know, but some I do not know.'

"Again that miserably uncomfortable feeling came over me. Why could I not reply: 'It will afford them and me the greatest pleasure.' Because, for some reason, I could not feel pleased. I feared you would not feel pleased, and I dared not in that Presence use the polite but untrue phrase. I simply said: 'Certainly, if You wish.'

"Of course all this you, friends, were looking much in our direction, wondering at our embarrassment, and, perhaps guessing that we had been made uncomfortable by the arrival of a not altogether welcome guest. I led Him first to some of the church members among you, and there was not one of you who looked as comfortable after the introduction as before.

"As it became known who the guest was faces changed color, and some of you looked very much as if you would like to leave the room. It really seemed as if the church members were quite as unwilling to meet Jesus as those who were not Christians.

"One of you came up quietly to me and whispered: 'Shall I tell the musicians not to play the dance music, but to look up some sacred pieces?' Jesus caught the question, and looking us both squarely in the face He simply asked, 'Why should you?' And we could not answer. Someone else suggested that we could have a very pleasant and profitable evening if we could change our original plans and invite Jesus to talk to us. Again he was met with that searching look and that searching question: 'Why should my presence change your plans?'

"After I had introduced the Lord Jesus to you all, and no one knew what to do next, Jesus turned to me and said: 'You were planning for dancing, were you not? It is high time you began, or you cannot complete your programme before daylight. Will you not give the word to the musicians, Mabel?' I was at my wits' end. If my original plan was all right, His presence ought only to add joy to the occasion; yet there were all my guests, as well as myself, made wretchedly uncomfortable by the presence of Him whom most of us called our best friend. Determined to throw off this feeling and be myself, at His word I ordered the musicians to play for the first dance.

"The young man with whom I was engaged for that dance did not come to claim me, and no one went upon the floor. This was still worse embarrassment. The orchestra played once more, and two or three couples, more to relieve me than for any other reason, began to dance in a rather formal fashion. I was almost beside myself with shame and confusion, when the Lord Jesus turned to me and said: 'Mabel, your guests do not seem at ease. Why do you not, as their hostess, relieve their embarrassment by dancing yourself? Would it help you any if I should offer to dance with you?'

"My confusion gave way to an expression almost of horror, as I looked into those tenderly sad eyes and cried: 'You dance! You cannot mean it!'

"'Why not, Mabel? If my disciples may dance, may not I? Did you think all this winter, when you and others of my disciples have gathered for the dance or the card party or at the theatre, that you left Me at home or in the church? You prayed for My presence in the prayer-meeting, you did not quite want it here; but why not, my dear child? Why have you not welcomed me to-night, Mabel? Why has my simple presence spoiled your pleasure? Though I am 'a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief,' yet I delight to share and increase all the pure joys of My disciples. Is it possible that you leave Me out of any of your pleasures, Mabel? If so, it is not because you feel that they do not help you to become like Me and to glorify Me; that they take your time and strength and thought to such an extent that you have less delight in My Word and in communion with Me? You have been asking, "What's the harm?" Have you asked, "What is the gain?" Have you done these things for the glory of God?"

"It was all plain to me now. Overcome with self-reproach and profound sorrow, I threw myself on the floor at His feet and sobbed out my repentance.

"With a 'Daughter, go in peace, thy sins be forgiven thee,' He was gone. I awoke and found that it was all a dream. And now I want to ask you, friends, shall we go on with the programme to-night, or shall we take these lists which we have prepared and discuss for a time with our partners the question: 'What can young people do having lived in it?'"

As the vote was unanimous in favor of the latter plan which was followed by other wholesome recreations, and as the social evening, closing promptly at midnight, was declared the most delightful of the Winter, it is safe to say that the Lord Jesus had sent them that dream for others beside Mabel Ashton.

What Think Ye of Christ?

THE death of Christ is a great mystery; but His birth is even a greater That He should live a human life at all, is stranger than that, so living He should die a human death. I can scarcely get past His cradle in my wondering, to wonder at His cross. The infant Jesus is, in some views, a greater marvel than Jesus with the purple robe and the crown of thorns. —Crichton.

NO MYTH

A MYTH! O, how far exalted above all human mythology is this representation of Christ! He who could create such a fiction is able also to create world, call spirits into being, inspire life and the highest blessedness by the simple power of his breath. The facts are conclusive that one has here not myth but overwhelming reality and truth.

CHURCHES and CHURCHMEN

A Spiritual Revival.

THE Bishop of Washington said some strong things recently when he said: "I venture to say that there is not an outstanding man in public affairs to-day who does not believe that hope for the future is not in material greatness but in a great spiritual awakening. The confusions of life grow out of our misappraisals in values. We have tried in our blundering way to regulate human habit by legislation, and we are failing. We have tried to improve our ethical standards by education, and we are failing.

"An age that is going nowhere at sixty miles an hour stands condemned beside one that went on foot but left behind it a cathedral or an epic. The time has come when we must look to our obligations, to the growing youth as well as the mature man. And the Church is not doing it. It is halting lamely while the world sweeps onward. The late Henry James, when he was in Washington more than fifty years ago, said: 'I found everywhere evidences of our nation's material progress and greatness, but I looked in vain for a sign of her spiritual life.'"

All that of course was addressed to the United States, but there is much in it to make Canada pause and ponder. It is just possible that we are far more occupied with the material than with the spiritual. A revival of real religion would be one of the greatest blessings that could possibly come to this Dominion at present.

Do Your Own Giving.

I HAVE been greatly interested in the report of an address which has filtered through to me. It was delivered in an Episcopal Church in New York City. The preacher was pleading for the personal touch in dispensing charity.

"Our present vogue in dispensing charity is to hire people to perform our benevolent acts, and our excuse for such a line of conduct is that we are so busy and that we would be so pestered by applicants in need that we resort to the modern device of professional experts and foundations for the alleviation of human need. How would we like to think of God forming a little trust in heaven to administer divine charity? Would the millionaire with a sick child or the dying wife or the broken heart like to feel that God was so busy as not to have time to hear their cries for help."

It is reported in the public press that Harry Thaw is helping an unfortunate young woman who committed a serious offense, goaded (if we are rightly informed by the press) by the most shocking circumstances. In this personal act of charity, Mr. Thaw will merit before his Creator the condemnation of 'well done.' In fact, in my humble opinion, his act of personal interest and personal charity will outweigh a thousand times the gift of millions made by proxy by some deluded soul too busy to personally hear the cry of human need.

What About Our Morality?

WE ARE becoming more refined, but the perfume of refinement does not cure diseases of society. We are becoming more clever and intelligent, but are we growing better and happier? Men are learning how to master the laws of gravity so that they can write their words in letters of smoke on the signboard of the sky, but are they equally well learning how to master the forces of sensuality so that they can lift their characters heavenward? We can not trust any escalator of inevitable progress to lift us from earthiness to Godlikeness. We can not expect to be whisked into the Kingdom of God on earth by the speed of our improved motor age. We can not count on our labor-saving machinery to manufacture any Utopia of peace and happiness. The only road is the old road of a purifying and redemptive religion.

These words were addressed to a fashionable congregation by a preacher who was not afraid to speak what he thought was a word in season, even if some present might not agree with him.

China Again

A CHRISTIAN Endeavor Society in Nodon, Hainan, China, made up of sixteen girls, offered as part of their program, to teach classes in a Children's Sunday School. One of the girls, sixteen years of age, teaches a class of fifty-eight little girls. There are some folks that I know who ought to be rebuked when they read this. With all the advantages of a Christian civilization they seem to have no sense of obligation to others; and so while teachers are needed in all our Sunday Schools the call comes to them in vain.

A Catholic Retreat.

CATHOLIC archbishops, bishops, priests and all in holy orders, make retreats at stated times. But a new movement has been started to be known as The St. Paul of the Cross United Retreat League, with William A. Ryan of Pittsburgh as president, and announces as its aim the creation, in the course of a few years, of the largest Catholic lay organization in the world. The nucleus of the movement consists of Retreat Leagues of Boston, Dunkirk, N. Y.; Jamaica, New York City; Scranton, Pa.; Springfield, Mass., and Pittsburgh. At a dinner accompanying the meeting for organization, and the founding of this league, more than six hundred men pledged themselves to work for its success. A leading member of the Passionist Fathers is the supreme moderator of the United League.

This new movement on the part of Catholic laity began a few years ago, and is a duplication of retreats made by ordained men. By uniting, the movement of these laymen now assume national scope. Most lay retreats succeed best, it is said, when very strict rules are made and enforced, such as the requirement of absolute silence, very plain food, beds not too soft, strictly spiritual instruction if any at all, and of course prohibition of smoking, even by the most confirmed users of the weed.

Heaven and Hell.

AT THE close of a long, interesting report of an evangelistic campaign in Australia by my old friend, Rev. W. P. Nicholson, the Rev. John Waugh says:

"One of the oustanding values of his Mission to me . . . is that he is leading us to a recognition of the fact that there is a great gulf fixed between heaven and hell (whatever and wherever these may be), that the Church has a commission to seek the lost, and that the way into eternal life is through a living faith in the living and eternal Christ."

Is He Right In Thinking It?

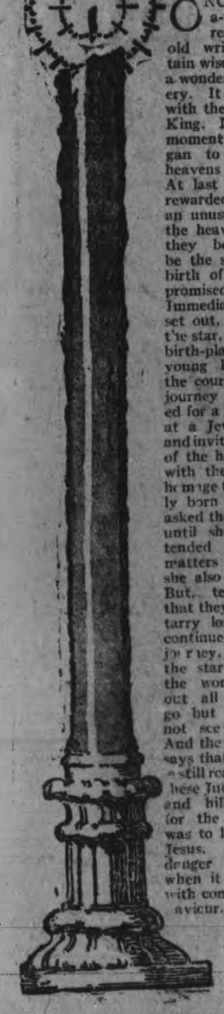
WRITING to his column in "The Toronto Star Weekly," R. E. Knowles, sometimes has difficulty in concealing his sympathy with Modernism. Recently he was writing about a new Presbyterian church of much beauty which is to be erected in Toronto. He says:

"The name of this new church, which is of classical design, is to be 'Calvin.' It will quite probably have the unique distinction of being the last to be so named in the history of the Christian world."

Why is it likely to be the last of that name to be built? Is it because we are more Biblical? Is it on account of our greater zeal in seeking to win men for Christ and His Church? No! I suppose it is because we are so up-to-date. Certainly the Modernists are not conspicuous for their humility or lack of conceit.

Then again, is he not out of harmony with the facts when he speaks of a 'Christian world.' Perhaps he meant to say the Christian Church.

I. Seewell.



ONCE - UPON - a - time, while reading some old writings, certain wise men made a wonderful discovery. It had to do with the birth of a King. From that moment they began to scan the heavens for a sign. At last they were rewarded by seeing an unusual star in the heavens which they believed to be the sign of the birth of the long-promised Messiah. Immediately they set out, guided by the star, to find the birth-place of the young King. In the course of their journey they paused for a little while at a Jewish home and invited the lady of the house to go with them to pay homage to the newly born child. She asked them to wait until she had attended to certain matters and then she also would go. But, telling her that they could not tarry longer, they continued their journey, following the star. At last the woman came out all ready to go but she could not see the star. And the old legend says that her spirit is still roaming over these Judean plains and hills looking for the star that was to lead her to Jesus. There is danger in delay when it has to do with coming to the Savior.

What's Matter With Britain

RAMSAY MUIR, M.P., in the Westminster Gazette, professes anxiety regarding the future of the British people. He says: "I don't often trouble my readers with statistics. But here are a few figures worth pondering, because they affect the future of our country."

Then, having given figures which are startling to every thoughtful person, he continues: "Every year there are fewer young people growing up to bear the nation's burden. Every year there are more old people living on beyond the time when they are able to give much active help."

It seems that after we have put the very best possible construction upon the situation, that we do not alter the outstanding fact that the young people are decreasing in number and the old people increasing!

Mr. Muir continues: "It is estimated that by 1940 our population will have become stationary; after that it will decline. But it will be, as it is now, a badly balanced population, with too few young people in proportion to the old."

In another place he says: "There are two other considerations which make me feel a little unhappy about this remarkable change in the movement of population.

One is that it seems to suggest a sort of fatty degeneration of the nation's moral fibre. We seem to be less willing to face the risks and responsibilities of life, the self-denial and thrift which the upbringing of a family imposes upon people of modest means. We exact a higher standard of comfort and enjoyment for ourselves, and we want to make quite sure beforehand that if we have children they shall have the way made easy for them. Without a doubt, the chief cause of the declining population is that our demand for a higher standard of life leads to the postponement or avoidance of marriage and children. I have used the phrase 'a higher standard of life.' But is that the right phrase? Should I not rather have said 'a higher level of ease and material comfort?' And does that, in any true sense, mean a higher standard in regard to the true values in life?

"A generation which funks responsibilities and possible hardships, and which places the flashy delights of motor-cycles and frequent kinemas before the pride of fatherhood and motherhood, is surely in some respects a decadent generation. Will the moral fibre of this generation be strong enough to enable it to bear the growingly heavy burden which Fate is imposing upon it?

"For more than a hundred and fifty years the British peoples have been the most prolific, the most adventurous, the most far-travelled of the white races, and they have played the chief part in carrying the white man's civilization and the institutions of freedom over the surface of the earth. Have we come almost to the end of that chapter? Is the expansion of the British stock now to be regarded as "a tale that is told?"

By every memory that rises out of the past, and every hope that links us with the future, let us at this Christmas season of the year take heed to these words. Where children are neither wanted nor appreciated, the birth of Jesus has failed to impress us with the value God places upon young life.

A Pen Picture

WE ARE standing in the immediate neighbourhood of an ancient city. The situation is picturesque, ranges of rocky hills are all around, and the narrow valley in which the city is situated runs north and south. A visitor stands among the townspeople who treat him with marked respect. He is evidently no stranger to them, although in the present instance he has not been living in their midst, but has travelled some distance for this important conference. His is a striking personality as he stands there; Kings ere now have fled before him, and his sword has taken captives and set captives free, but his is now no warlike mission; this princely looking man, this great leader and chief is himself a suppliant, but his mien is so noble, and the circumstances of the case so touching that the hearts of all are bowed in sympathy, and doubtless he will obtain his request.

Virgin Born

THE birth of Jesus Christ into the world was a miracle effected directly by the power of God. This truth must be accepted. To doubt this truth is to contradict the Word of God. To tell us that Christ's Birth could not have happened by miraculous power is unscientific, and degrading both to God and man. It is an arrogant assumption, supported always by a superficial and erroneous type of argument which has one fixed formula. First men make their god, with all necessary limitations; and then they declare what he can, or cannot do.

THE ROMANCE OF THE MESSIAH

ON A DRAB afternoon in the year 1741, a solitary man stood at a window in the city of London and watched a mob in the street below howl and jeer at him in derision.

Here was a splendid figure of a man, indeed—his great stature only emphasized by the elaborate fashion of the day. His features, just discernable in the gray light, were heavy, ponderous; his eyes deep-set in caverns beneath black brows; his massive forehead surmounted by a great, flowing peruke.

They were tearing down the posters of his concert. They were shaking their fists in the direction of his window.

"Foreigner!" they shouted. "Usurper—!"

The man leaning against the casement looked down a little sadly perhaps; but—if only one might have seen better in the semi-darkness!—with the glint of a certain proud determination in his eyes.

For almost thirty years he had laboured for these people. He had given his best work and the best years of his life to them. At first, when he had come from the continent, the young maestro of twenty-seven, they had been afraid of him, these English. Was he not the great Handel fresh from brilliant successes in Germany and in Italy?

The English musicians had been afraid of him, too. They said he had thrown a basso profundo out the window for singing off key. It might have been gossip, but no one doubted that he could easily have done it. Anyway, Italian opera had been all the rage when Handel arrived, and it soon became apparent that here was a composer that could beat the Italians at their own game.

Then jealousy began to creep in—oh, the bitter jealousy! George Frederick Handel, the idol of the world of fashion, had some powerful enemies who grew more numerous and more noisy as the days went on. He would make great virtuoso out of nonentities—and the gratitude he would get would be slander as soon as his back was turned. The popular subscriptions to the Royal Academy Theatre, where Handel had produced almost two score of his operas, lasted eight years and then petered out. Handel had to take over the entire management himself. He was a good business man, too, but no man could stand up long against the scurvy tricks that were played on him. The Italian singers whom he had brought over, the very artists whose fame and fortune he had made, left him on the night of a big performance and went over to his enemies.

Finally everything seemed to crash about him. He was in debt ten thousand pounds, his operas were playing to empty houses, his creditors were pressing him and threatening him with imprisonment. The worry and the anxiety and the feverish work . . . even his mighty frame could stand no more of it and his health gave way. His theatre was closed. He was a bankrupt. He was driven to his bed with the icy hand of paralysis clutching his right side.

He had a few friends left who wanted to hold a benefit for him, but his stolid Saxon pride would have none of it. When they had him taken over to Aix-la-Chapelle to take the waters, his mind seemed to be wandering.

The man at the window shuddered as he passed his hand across his eyes. That was four years ago now and he had been restored to a degree of health, but his enemies still persisted. He could not restrain a tired sigh as he turned slowly aside into the increasing darkness of the room.

He knew that noisy crowd in the street. Not of the people they were, though the people had been duped enough by the mighty ones who hated him, but for the most part snobs—snobs and cads. He had been trying to pay off his debts by giving concerts and performances of that new form of music which he had taken up, the oratorio. He had no rival in this field, but it was still possible for his enemies to give balls and banquets on the nights of his performances.

Oh, they would go to any extreme! And this was their final resort, this demonstration. Hear them call him foreigner, he who had done more for English music than any other one man and had been a naturalized Englishman for fifteen years!

Sadly, but still with something of his old indomitable courage, he crossed to his writing-table and sank heavily into his great chair. . . .

There had been something going through his head all day: for days, in fact, it had been haunting him. Brought to him, no doubt, he thought, by his troubles. His head sank on his bosom and a great sob shook him. Only poet-souls can know the anguish that the master composer felt then.

How foolish everything seemed! . . . how futile!

Only the words stood out clearly in his mind now. There seemed a mournful melody to them . . . a cadence which was their own and belonged to nothing else.

"He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief."

Handel was writing; slowly at first. The tumult in the street had ceased.

"Surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows! He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him.

"And with His stripes we are healed."

The sun, which long had been trying to break through a rift in the somber clouds, at last triumphed and cast a long golden beam upon the man at the writing-table. He looked up, wonderingly.

"Oh, God," he said, "now I begin to understand. . . . I will tell them—I will tell them again of the Babe of Bethlehem; I will tell them of the Saviour of mankind; I will give them the message of the Messiah!"

By candle-light, too, the wonderful story was told.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye, My people, saith your God . . ."

"Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill made low, the crooked straight and the rough places plain.

"And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

Morning after morning dawned upon the great master as his inspired pen set down the things that were surging through him.

"The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light . . ."

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given . . ."

And then, suddenly, the glorious angel song:

"Glory to God in the highest, and peace on earth, goodwill towards men."

The story of the Christ came on the wings of the most glorious music the world has ever heard.

"He shall feed his flock like a shepherd . . ."

And then the marvellous, the sublime Hallelujah Chorus. . . . Like Isaiah in the temple Handel looked up and saw all heaven open before him, and the Great God Himself. . . .

"HALLELUJAH: for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth!"

For twenty-four intense days the great composer wrote, until the great closing:

"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, and hath redeemed us to God by His blood, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

"Blessing and honour, glory and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever.

"Amen."

And so it was done. "I am going to take it away from England," he said, "away from all the bickering and squabbling."

In the Lenten season of the year 1742 in the city of Dublin, "The Messiah" was given to the people. And Handel, remembering his own experiences, ordained that this first performance should be given as a benefit for those languishing in debtors' prison.

Hailed as England's national composer, Handel passed the closing years of his life in peace.

Ten years after he had given his greatest work he was stricken with blindness, interrupting him in the writing of the chorus: "How dark, oh Lord, are Thy decrees, . . . all our joys to sorrow turning . . . as the night succeeds the day."

On the eve of Easter Sunday in the year 1759 the great soul of the master composer, passing beyond, could say again and truly:

"I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.

"For now is Christ risen from the dead, the first-fruits of them that sleep."

"Unto You is Born this Day in the City of David A Saviour which is Christ the Lord"

"And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over
"And an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the their flocks.
glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.
"And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people:
"For there is born to you this day, in the City of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

* * * * * *

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the King, behold, wise men from the East came to Jerusalem.

"Saying, Where is He that is born King of the Jews? For we saw His star in the East, and we are come to worship Him.

"And they, having heard the King, went their way; and lo, the star which they saw ine the East went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

"And when they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

"And they came into the house and saw the young child with Mary, His mother; and they fell down and worshipped Him; and opening their treasures they offered unto Him gifts, gold, and frankincense and myrrh."

BY REV. C. W. ROSE
Murray Street Church.

The life of Christ in the soul beginning with a birth there is the message of Paul. These are some of his statements—"Christ liveth in me." "Christ in you the hope of glory." "For me to live is Christ." Paul prayed for the Ephesians that Christ might dwell in their hearts by faith. Paul was taught this great truth by the Master who said—"I am the vine and ye are the branches,""I in them and thou in me that they may be perfected in one," "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come unto him, and will sup with him and he with me."

There must be something very real and wonderful to justify such words. There is without doubt corresponding reality. Christ actually takes up his residence in the soul, is born there and there grows. McLaren says: "I, for my part believe that there is no more literal fact in the whole world than the actual in-dwelling of Jesus Christ Who is in heaven, in the spirits of the people who love Him and trust Him.

Paul believed that Christ began His life in the soul as truly as He began His life in Bethlehem and that Christ grows in the soul as truly as He grew in the home of the Carpenter of Nazareth. "He believed that there is an inner Christmas, a new incarnation, a subjective enactment of the Bethlehem story, every time a human being yields to that mysterious Spirit that somehow stirs amid our deepest affections, and whispers its messages to our waiting souls."

This fact is generally believed but so far it has not frequently enough been made to stand out, so that we feel its power and recognize the wonder of it. We live on Christmas Day back in Bethlehem and too often celebrate no other birth and so overlook an event of wonderful importance to the individual heart. We think of the angels who sang then at God's bidding and forget the angels that sang in our life, when He was formed in us our hope of glory. We do well to link the two in our celebrations that our joy may be complete. The marvel of it all! Christ dwelling within us! Our bodies as truly as the body of Mary a home for the Son of God! "Know ye not that ye are a tempie of God and that the Holy Spirit dwelleth in you?"

There are illustrations of the in-dwelling of one person in another, which help to understand how the divine One can inhabit the lowly heart.

Helen Keller, speaking of her teacher, Anne Sullivan, said—"My teacher is so near to me that I scarcely think of myself apart from her. How much my delight in all things beautiful is innate, and how much is due to her influence, I can never tell. I feel that her being is inseparable from my own, and that the footsteps of my life are in hers. All the best of me belongs to her—there is not a talent or an inspiration or a joy in me that has not been awakened by her loving touch."

The prayer of F. E. Marsh is a suitable one for every devout person at this Christmas season—

Thy life I live out in me, O Christ my Lord Divine,
Thy life of faith in God alone
Which does Thyself enshrine.

Thy life of love so true and helpful in its grace,
Thy constant love which thinks and cares,
And makes for all a place.

Thy life of doing good, O live Thou out in me,
O let Thy Spirit on me rest
Which brings men unto Thee.

By REV. WILLIAM ALLAN,
St. Paul's Church.

If I wanted a text for this brief message, I could find it in these words, as used by Luke, in describing the experiences of the shepherds when they saw the manifestation of the glory of the Lord on that first Christmas, when he tells us, " they were sore afraid." Afraid on Christmas morning! How strange and contradictory! Christmas, proof of the love of God. Love that is spontaneous and saving; love that is pardoning and purifying. Such love that, when it is permitted to lay hold upon the hearts of men, its glory is that it casteth out all fear. 'And they were sore afraid."

Ever since that first Christmas, men, like most animals, have continued in the bondage of fear and suspicion. With what terrible results let the history of the race speak in all the eloquence of its sufferings and sorrows: especially that part which has been written since August, 1914.

At that time men had their dreams of universal brotherhood in a world from which all war had been eliminated rudely disturbed, and the awakening has left multitudes "sore afraid."

Dark as the day has been and still is it should not bring dismay to the heart of one who has learned the true meaning of Christmas, but should rather be an inspiration to sing with more intense feeling and fuller meaning:

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run:
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore,
Till moons shall wax and wane no more."

The foundations of our faith, if our faith be in God and His Glorious Word with its wonderful revelation of His great scheme of redemption, cannot be shaken. There is nothing—absolutely nothing—that can prevent God from bringing His purposes to a glorious consummation.

Our vaunted civilization—Christian in name but pagan in nature—has yielded nothing but disappointment. Man-made schemes of world betterment, built upon the flimsy foundation of human goodness—a goodness which would not be accepted at the bar of Heaven, even if it had the strength to get there—have all come to naught. But why should this make us "sore afraid?" Man's ways are not God's ways: that is why they always end in failure.

God's people have not always been wise enough to distinguish between the spirit of the times and the Spirit of God. If this has been our mistake in the past let us guard against it in the future. Let us recognize His presence, yield to His power, and fall down in adoration before the glory of the Lord revealed to us in the gift of our Saviour, Jesus Christ.

FROM REV. JAMES W. GORDON, ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

We are such poor judges. We have no adequate facilities for arriving at fair and accurate estimates of the people about us. It is a boast that in British courts there must be no prejudging of the case. The evidence must all be in. Even then the prisoner is given the benefit of the doubt, lest any one be judged unfairly.

But we continually go gaily on pronouncing upon the life and actions of folk without anything resembling complete evidence in the case. We are at one time too generous with praise and approval; at another, cruel and brutal in our blame and condemnation.

If we knew much that we do not know; if we knew a man's bodily strength, his ability to bear up under his physical load, his nervous system, his digestive system; if we knew his ancestry for a hundred generations—if we knew a hundred things we do not and can not know, we would still be liable to err. Much of the evidence would still be lacking. There is but one safe course: to think kindly. Such a course is not only safe, it is also Christian.

"He that is without sin among you, cast the first stone," said Jesus, in referring to a case where the evidence was not all in, but where the accusers were very smug and self-satisfied.

We can measure a man's height, or his weight, or wealth, or strength, but the man himself evades us. His battle, how hard he tried, his fighting equipment, the invisible enemies he faced—all these escape our measuring line. The man—the actual conditions of the conflict—the total result are quite beyond us.

Let us resolve to think kindly.

For thence,—a paradox
Which comforts while it mocks,—
Shall life succeed in that it seems to fail:
What I aspired to be,
And was not, comforts me:
A brute I might have been, but would not sink i' the scale.

But all, the world's coarse thumb
And finger failed to plumb,
So passed in making up the main account:
All instincts immature,
All purposes unsure,
That weighed not as his work, yet swelled the man's amount:

Thoughts hardly to be packed
Into a narrow act,
Fancies that broke thro' language and escaped:
All I could never be,
All, men ignored in me,
That, I was worth to God, whose wheel the pitcher shaped.

—James W. Gordon.

FROM REV. DYSON HAGUE, TORONTO

On March 20, 1812, a mighty shout went up in Paris, and there was great rejoicing throughout the land of France. It was because the cannon began to roar at six o'clock in the morning, and, after twenty-two guns had sounded, they knew that unto Napoleon a son was born, and unto them an heir of the throne of Bonaparte was given. The boy that was born that day lived but a little while, and died neglected and unknown, leaving scarce a trace on the sands of time of his birth, or life, or death or history.

Oh, what a contrast to the birth of the Babe in Bethlehem! His palace was a stable; His cradle, a manger. No throng of courtiers, great, noble, gathered round. Only Joseph and the Virgin Mother; only perchance a curious passerby; and then, an hour or two later, a few Judean shepherds. But up in the skies, waiting to burst upon an astonished world, poised a vast throng of the angelic army. And an angel of the Lord flashed on them from the circumambient glory and calmed their terror with the words: "Be not afraid. Behold I announce to you the Gospel of Great Joy. There is born this day for you and all the people of the world, a Saviour, Who is Christ the Lord."

And then began the Glory-song of Christmas, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill towards men." Napoleon's son was forgotten in a decade. His influence perished in his day. His story is unknown. His birth was boomed amid a nation's joy, but his life and death were buried in oblivion. But the birthday of Jesus will never be forgotten till He comes again, diademed with many crowns, earth's sceptred King. The glory of His Name increases more and more.

And to-day uncounted millions of the sons of men in every land are realizing the great Fact of history, the great Force of history, the great Future of history, the Centre of a world's desires, the Arch of the span of history, the Keystone of the arch of prophecy; that is, the Babe born in Bethlehem, the Son of God and the Son of man. Lift up your hearts, oh ye poor and needy, for unto you has come this day good tidings of great joy. It was for you He came.

Rejoice and be glad, oh little children, and bring your loving little hearts as your Christmas present to Jesus. Yes, let us all, mothers, fathers, friends, partners and comrades, old and young, join hearts in truer charity, and vibrant with Christ's own gladness, sing our Christmas songs and try, as far as in us lies, to lighten with shafts of love a world that is dark, and by that mighty force called faith join hand with hand to gladden and to save the world for which Christ died.

BY REV. W. McDONALD, B.A., B.D., KNOX CHURCH

To each one among us Christmas may bring a different message. Our lot in life and the hope within our hearts will help to form the feeling with which we enter upon the season. It will not bring gladness and joy to all. For some the memories of the day will be sad, and the prospect for the days to come be lonely. For such, a thought among our common joys will not be amiss. "The birth of Jesus is the sunrise of the Bible," says one who has done much to cheer the lonely with beautiful thoughts about Christmas. Gladness and joy come through thinking upon what the Nativity of Christ has meant to mankind, and of how sacred and noble this life may be into which "The Prince of Peace" has come.

To most among us it is easy and natural to be glad in the circle of our home and friends. Family reunions, with their tokens of love and affection, will rekindle the fires of good cheer and gladness in our hearts. We will radiate goodwill and kindness among our own. On Christmas Day the true home reaches its highest altitude as the centre of human hpapiness. The "Child in the midst" will make it so for every one who knows Him and gives Him that place of honor.

In the larger circle of life's relationships there comes once more the opportunity of showing the "spirit of the season" in the more kindly feeling towards all; even to those with whom we have sometimes been at cross-purposes during the term between. The custom of "greeting" all and sundry whom we meet on Christmas Day is a kind of "clearing house" for the year. Gladness and goodwill are moods out of which spring the worthy words and delightful deeds of a truly generous spirit. The common method of giving some gift to show our goodwill is the concrete form of this generosity. But it can be multiplied many times over if we can make our greetings convey the same message as our gifts.

Peterborough's Clergymen Express Their Christmas Messages

Clergymen of every denomination in the city were invited to contribute to this page.

Perhaps there have been occasions during the year when the conflict of interests and ideals has caused serious differences between us and our fellowmen? Business dealings, political contests, it may be even religious loyalties have separated us from our neighbors. A generous soul can make the "greeting" spoken eloquent with goodwill and the sincere desire to renew the right relation with all men of similar goodwill.

The secret of the "Christmas spirit" is in forgetting self and finding our happiness in giving joy to others.

"For somehow, not only for Christmas,
but all the long year through,
The joy that you give to others, is the joy that comes back to you;
And the more you spend in blessing
the poor and the lonely and sad,
The more of your heart's possessing, returns to make you glad."

One who represents a communion of Christians within a Christmas community rejoices in our common festival, and gives voice to the generous and kindly sentiment which prevails in our hearts towards all of every class and creed for whom Christ came. "To know that God so loved us as to give us His Son for our dearest Brother, has brought human affection to its highest tide on this day of that Brother's birth; for if God so loved us, how can we help loving one another?"

BY REV. J. D. PATERSON
All Saints' Church.

"Tiny Tim told me, coming home, that he hoped the people saw him in the church, because he was a cripple, and it might be pleasant to them to remember upon Christmas Day Who made lame beggars walk and blind men see." The pleasures of Christmas Day and the joys of the whole Christmas season come when we look away from ourselves, and forget our own petty cares and realize that we are but individuals in a great multitude, and yet it is our privilege to share in and contribute to the general well-being and happiness of all. It is pleasant to receive gifts, to hear words of cheer and to have our friends wish us the compliments of the season, but it is still more pleasant to go about with good will in our hearts, and a cheery message on our lips; to pass on, with a smile, to all and sundry—to those we know well and to those others we don't know quite so well. Christmas is a grand opportunity for friendship; nobody ever could hear his neighbours' "Merry Christmas" and not find an answer in the same spirit. We don't need a formal introduction before we wish one another "The compliments of the season." Friends who have not been such good friends of late find the Christmas spirit infectious and they simply must get together—peace and good-will pass through the land and capture the imagination of all kinds of people.

It is the spirit of Christmas, nay rather, let us say it is the Spirit of Christ. A real living Spirit that comes to us all with tremendous power when we approach the day of the Saviour's birth. A Spirit that unlocks many a closed door and warms many a frozen heart. A spirit that blots out many an unworthy memory and buries unkind and jealous feelings. It is the Spirit of God that comes to us through the little Babe of Bethlehem.

I wonder if there is any other Birthday that is kept with so much rejoicing and feasting and giving of presents. The whole Christian world makes merry on that day and lots who are not Christian in name make it an excuse for practising the Christian spirit for a day at least. But I sometimes wonder if the Christ, whose birthday we keep is not often forgotten in the midst of our innocent fun and gaiety—not invited at the feast made in His honour and as "there was no room for Him at the inn" at Bethlehem, there is no time for Him in the busy rush for Christmas Day pleasure.

There is every reason why, on Christmas Day itself we should remember Him, for we owe it all to Him. If there had been no Christ, there could have been no Christmas. "He made the lame beggars walk and the blind men see." and there are few of us who cannot look back over the past yeax without thanksgiving for what Christ has done for us and praise for what He has meant to us.

"He's God Himself come down from Heaven, to raise us when we fall,
He's come to heal us when we're sick,
to hear us when we call;
If he hadn't come to do us good, He wouldn't have come at all."

Let Christ be the honoured Guest in every home on His own birthday, and our joys are doubled as our pleasures are hallowed—one hour for worship is not an hour lost from a happy day, but it gives a meaning to all that follows it. Our greetings, our gifts and even our feastings mean more to us when we have set aside a time in the day's programme to seek God's blessing on our homes and our friends.

My wish on Christmas morning to all who read this is—"God bless us every one."

BY ADJUTANT FRANK HAM,
The Salvation Army.

The year 1926 A.D., still finds us celebrating the birth of the lowly Man of Galilee.

In His name, we, of The Salvation Army, extend to you all sincere and hearty greetings at this festive season.

In His name we have gone forth through the streets of the City of Peterborough with our banners unfurled, with our music and song, with teaching and testimony extolling His power.

In His name we have gone into the homes of this city, praying with the sick and sorrowful, trying to cheer the discomforted, and endeavoring to meet the wants of the needy.

In His name we have visited the police court and prison, the hospitals, and the homes for the aged, trying by His power to heal the broken-hearted.

Like that good and holy man, St. Francis of Assissi, whose life and character has been specially brought to our attention during the year, we pray—"By the Holy love which is in God we may be able to consecrate ourselves entircly to serve, love and honour the Lord God with a pure heart and a sincere purpose, which is what he asks above all things." With this Spirit of the Christ in our hearts Christmas will last all the year.

To the doubter, the sinner, the hopeless, and the outcast, to the immoral, yes, to all who have not as yet thrilled to the message of the angels, we would again resound the truth of their proclamation—"For unto You is born this day in the City of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

It is possible to have Christmas with Christ left out. Is it not true that the Christmas of today with too many of us is a time of grab and get; a time of gorging the body and neglecting the soul; a making merry without true joy; a holiday that is not a Holy day?

How would you feel if at a celebration of your birthday the celebrants were so busy enjoying themselves, thinking of their own pleasure, that you were shut out? No room for you! I urge that you repeat not the tragedy of the past, but make room for Him. Let the sunshine of His Presence be with you.

It is recorded that the founder of The Salvation Army once sent this Christmas message flashing over the wires to his officers all round the world—"Others." And that message represents the true spirit of Christmas. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sake He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." So we see that the true spirit of Christmas is that of surrender.

There is a legend told of Thomas Aquinas kneeling before the Cross, adoring his Lord, when a voice said—"Thomas, thou hast written many things for Me, and have done many things for Me. What reward shall I give thee." More lowly still he bowed before the Cross, and said in reply—"Lord, give me more of Thyself."

This will be the best Christmas gift that the citizens of Peterborough and the surrounding locality can receive, and may every heart be ready to be the recipient of spiritual blessings from the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

With the season's greetings,
Yours for Christ and His Kingdom.

BY REV. NORMAN McLEOD,
Park Street Baptist Church.

The great anniversary of the world's promise of peace has returned to us again. Long ago in the dim twilight of the past, Jesus was born, the Babe in the manger. He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But today, an innumerable host of all nations and tribes arise and call Him blessed, while millions have answered His call to surrender and service.

What is the meaning of all this? It means that Jesus is moral, intellectual and spiritual Phenomenon. Whatever men and women may think of Christ in other respects they all agree in this. Jesus is phenomenal in His personality, in His influence over men and movements, and in the religion which He bequeathed to the world.

One is reminded of the language of Napoleon. "Is it not amazing," said Napoleon, "that whereas the ambitious dreams of Caesar, Alexander and myself should have vanished into thin air, a Judaean peasant should be able to stretch a dead hand across the centuries and control the destinies of nations and the children of men?"

But the Phenomenon of Jesus vanishes and the question of Napoleon is answered in the light of the sacred page. When we read the Bible we see that Jesus does not stretch "a dead hand across the centuries," but He lays a living hand upon the moral and spiritual consciences of men and nations. He is not the dead Christ, but the living Jesus. He is not merely a good man, not only an ideal Man; He is the living Saviour of men. Isaiah calls Him the "Everlasting Father." In the mystery of the ineffable Trinity, there are not three Gods, but three Persons in one God, and Jesus is the fulness of the Godhead bodily. As Ulysses, returning from the wars, unbuckled his armour that his children might know him, so the Father unveils Himself in the Person of His incarnate Son. This revelation began in Bethlehem.

In a closing word the writer would remind the reader that this revelation has a very personal note, namely—He was born for me; He lived for me; He died for me: He is my Saviour. This Christmas seasou will have it's highest meaning only as we make this personal applicatiln.

BY REV. DAVID WREN, TRINITY CHURCH

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet,
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, goodwill to men.

The ceaseless march of the years once again brings around the same old festival and the same old message. We are quite sure we do not want a new one. There are many festivals, many red-letter days in national life and history, but this is the only day, and the only message which is universal. Jesus Christ is the only person who merits this undying remembrance from us all.

As we look around our troubled world there isn't anything we need quite so much as the old Yuletide message. So long as there is a place in human nature, for poets, musicians and philosphers, so long as we have the mystic, the spiritual and the tender, so long will Christmas hold its place. This is the one time when joy and sorrow shake hands, when heart clasps heart, when humanity has a true impulse to be kind, when we forget and forgive, when brotherhood is recognized.

History has demonstrated the truth of the Bethlehem story. The Christ Child has stamped His teachings ineffaceably upon the world. The incarnation proclaimed by the angels to the shepherds is still repeating itself in every soul that is born anew through faith in Jesus. Millions upon millions are to-day evidencing to the world by a new and holy life that they too have become partakers of the divine nature. No more does the mystery of the manger miracle defy explanation than does the mystery of the birth into newness of life of a depraved soul. One is as much a subject of positive knowledge as the other.

The Birthday of Bethlehem was the natal day of humanity. The touch of its life has brought purity into the world. The motherhood of Mary, with its Divine mystery, has ennobled and sanctified all motherhood. Heavenly refinements has universally been the product of the beauteous story. Myths do not regenerate and create angelic characters. The wisest and saintliest of earth have been the humblest believers. When the song of the angels is heard no more, and the story of the shepherds ceases to be retold, the sweetness of the earth will also be gone.

The Christmas joy is earth's sweetest joy. The world will never grow old in the singing of its Holy Song. Better a thousand times blot the sun from the heavens than the Star of Bethlehem from the Sky of Faith.

BY REV. J. D. RICHARDSON, M.A., ST. JAMES' CHURCH

"This shall be a sign unto you. Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

This, then, is the Christmas emblem—a child. Not holly, or the mistletoe, or evergreen, or Santa Claus, or gift-giving or music, but—a child.

The very centre of the matchless Christmas story is a child. The shepherds, the magi, the angels' song, the guiding star—these are all incidental. The chief actor in this great world drama is the Babe of Bethlehem. The angel voices died away into silence; the guiding star faded into the common light of day; the shepherds again went about their ordinary work; the wise men returned across the desert to their far distant homes. But in none of these or in all of them was to be seen the real token of God's presence in the life of men, or His purpose for the world. Not these shall be a sign unto you, but—"This shall be a sign unto you, ye shall find a Babe."

And Christmas is the festival of children, the festival of the glad tidings that on this day a Child was born in Bethlehem of Judea, who later stretched forth His arms to all the little ones of the world, and loved them, and blessed them, and said that of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

The exchange of gifts may at times become a coldly formal process of calculated barter, but a gift to a child is a direct fulfillment of its very birthright. A child is entitled to be happy, and to the child a gift is mystery, excitement, an ecstasy that thrills to the uttermost all the fibres of its being.

So, at Christmas-time, making children happy is our duty, and will be found to be our greatest pleasure as well. And every young heart filled with Yuletide joy is a fulfillment of that Divine commandment, "Feed My Lambs."

St. John's Church.

In the long ago, when life was primitive and rural and simple, it had its problems just as it has today. Life has always demanded explanation and interpretation. There have always been associated with its experience cross-currents, blind allys, teth er ends and enigmas—conflicts of duties, passions, loves and loyalties. These things are inextricably involved in the tangled skein of human experience. They belong to life that is not static, but growing and developing into something greater than is at any time realized, but is at all times treasured in the ideals with which the Creator inspires the creature to press forward to the accomplishment of the high purpose he is here to serve. Those ideals were once fully revealed in a Divine Personality, in Whom alone, is to be found the answer to all the perplexities that vex and harass the soul in the cribbed environment of its mortal existence. Through that Sacred Personality there is available for man, in all the upward reaches of his soul, the grace and strength to accomplish his task which, by his own unaided will, he could never achieve

While it is true that the confusions of life inhere in its unfulfilled purposes, and so appear under primitive as well as modern conditions, it is also true that the more complex life becomes, the greater are its problems and confusions. We are suffering in this day from such an increase of social discords, appeals and distractions as to almost engulf the vision of life's meaning and value, and to dim its saving ideals of beauty and perfection. This season of Christmas is meant to recall us to a renewed sense of ultimate values and to a resifting of the aims and objects which actuate our daily choices and pursuits. But the simple message and appeal of this holy season has to struggle against an inundating commercialism in the midst of which helpless souls struggle in vain for air and freedom, with scarcely time to contemplate the exceeding great glory that surrounds and forever emanates from the Infant cradle of the Christ Child. Even the note of our good-will and good wishes often fail to touch the chord of Heaven's glorious refrain. "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy."

Christmas is essentially Christ's time. It is a festival which has been preserved by the Church through the ages, and is calculated to appeal to the most worldly hearts and to penetrate the most sordid and selfish souls with the exalted sense of love's generous sacrifice, such as, indeed, actuated the heart of the Heavenly Father when, in the fulness of time, He gave His own Son to come incarnate in human life and so to show forth the Nature of His loving care for all mankind. It is possible to participate in the Christmas spirit, as many do, without duly regarding or justly recognizing the One from Whom this spirit comes. But there is no real Christmas for any soul that fails constantly, and particularly at this season, to bring its paean of praise its testimony of witness and its pledge of devotion to the feet of Him whose birth into the world brought joy, refreshment and good-will to the sons of men. If we are to recapture the spirit and message of Christmas in its richest value we must endeavour by a moral effort to break through the entanged overgrowths that this complex age has woven about us, we must readjust life's values and we must re-envision the ideals of the glorified Christ as just revealed in the sublime beauty of the Babe of Bethlehem. It is our high privilege, at this season, through the ministrations of the Church, to re-discover, and to enter, devotionally and consciously, into the stream of spiritual life on whose glorious tide of blessing and redemption the redeemed are bourne into the unchanging fellowship of the Church Triumphant; and to an abiding union with Him Who is at once the Ancient of days and the bright and morning Star, old as Eternity and young as the dawn, the Child of man and the Son of God. May the message of this Christmas teach many hearts and bring with it the joy of an intimate communion with God our Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

By REV. F. K. MILLS
Bethany Tabernacle.

In the account of the birth of Christ recorded in Matthew, the second chapter we read,—

"Behold there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem," saying, WHERE IS HE? Searching for Him, these wise men started for Jerusalem. Most any one would go theire, expecting something wonderful to happen. God lets most searching parties for Christ start for Jerusalem, but they end up at some little place, some humble and humiliating experience before they find Him. There is generally a manger, a step further down in the lowly way to Him. He was, "wrapped in swaddling cloths." Many of the educated of our day will have no Christmas this year, because they will expect to find Him in the cities of the mighty, in the halls of learning, in the company of the wise and mighty. He will be in "swaddling cloths" this Christmas also, for He said, "I am meek and lowly in heart." Be sure to go to humble Bethlehem this year, if you want a real Christmas with a real Christ. Oh, do find Him.

"BORN KING OF THE JEWS"—The wise men could use these words. They didn't say "King of the Church." It took the cross and the resurrection to make Him head of the Church. He was born King of the Jews and, as such, He can take His throne any hour. How foolish are the Christians in our day who think their Christian socialism is going to give Him His Kingdom. Oh, how much busy church work is going on, as they say for "the Kingdom of God among men." He is already King. Then, why doesn't He come and reign? Why? He is waiting for His Body, His Bride, His Church, to be gathered out from among the nations of the earth, by the preaching of the Gospel to all peoples. When this is done He will catch them up from the earth, dress them in heavenly splendour with bodies like His own, to be like Him and reign with Him forever. "When He shall appear, we shall be like Him." Is it your hope to be like Him, your Saviour and King, at His coming? Oh, do see Him as your coming King.

We have more than one verse to our Christmas poems of praise. We sing of a Saviour which is Christ the Lord. "He is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification, and redemption." He is, "the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever" in His miraculous power. "All things are possible." Will you believe?

"WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR"—This is God's way. Men see His wonders first, they follow on if they ever, "come to worship Him." I am sure the wise men in the stable, kneeling about the Lord, forgot the star, wonderful as it was. What a thrilling, glorious Christmas each one of us would have, if we could forget the wonders, forget the candles, the ritual, the building, the Christmas tree, the dinner, the presents, and "come to worship Him." You may have to come across the desert's sands, past Jerusalem, into Bethlehem, yes, you must enter the stable, put aside the swaddling clothes, and worship Him. Oh, be sure to see Him, and worship Him there. It will not be Christmas unless you meet Him.

A Christmas Prayer

O Christ, my heart is Bethlehem,
And humble though it be,
Come with Thy heavenly ministrants,
Come and be born in me.
The tribute of my highest powers
I consecrate to Thee.

O God, the Christ Life I would live
From this most Holy Day.
The words of truth, the works of love
That sanctified His way.
Be mine. To serve and sacrifice—
Thus help me live, I pray.

A Happy Ending - By N. L. S. (Examiner Correspondent)

THE wind shrieked dismally around a little, low, brown house, set back from the street, in a suburb of Toronto. A single yellow gleam shone out from the house and fell across the sidewalk, lighting the way a little bit for a few belated Christmas shoppers.

Within the house, a mother moved quietly about tidying up the small kitchen and making a few very simple preparations for Christmas. Beside a little fireplace, in which a handful of coals burned, a little girl played with some old colored pictures and a pair of scissors.

"Mama," said the little girl, lifting her curly head, "Santa Claus is coming to see us to-night, isn't he? I want him to bring me a little dolly with a blue dress."

"I am afraid he won't bring you a doll this year, Bessie; you see, last year he brought you a sleigh and some hair-ribbons. Maybe this year he will just bring you the pair of warm mittens that you need so badly."

Mrs. Warren sighed, as she thought how pleased Betty would be if, in the morning, she would find a doll in her stocking. She finished sweeping up the floor and then prepared Betty for bed.

In a few minutes Betty was sleeping soundly, and Mrs. Warren returned to the kitchen and sat down to knit while waiting for her husband to return.

For three weeks now, Mr. Warren had been out of work and their little store of money, which they had laid by, was almost gone. Mr. Warren had unceasingly been trying to get a new job. This was not an easy matter, since he did not have any kind of recommendation to show. The reason for this was obvious. Three weeks ago this morning, when he had entered the door of J. R. Lee and Son, brokers, he had been told that he was to report in the office immediately.

When he went into the office he found John Lee, Sr., and his son seated before a desk, searching anxiously through some files of papers.

"Be seated," said the elder Mr. Lee, shortly. Mr. Warren sat down with a perplexed look, wondering what could be the matter. In a few minutes Mr. Lee looked up again and briefly laid the case before him. On the previous day, just before Mr. Lee went out for lunch, a sealed envelope came from the bank. Mr. Lee had an appointment to lunch with a prosperous business man from a neighbouring city, and had thoughtlessly laid the envelope on the desk. He had not returned to the office but motored to a little village fifteen miles out of the city, with his son, on important business. When he came to the office this morning, he could not find the envelope. Mr. Warren had locked the office up at one o'clock on the previous day, it being a half-holiday. None of the office staff had been in the private office of Mr. Lee but Mr. Warren, the confidential clerk. Mr. Warren, of course, knew the envelope contained a large sum of money. This circumstantial evidence resulted in the dismissal of Mr. Warren. He left the office with a perplexed look, knowing he was not guilty but unable to even guess where the envelope could have gone.

One day, three weeks later, the telephone rang on Mr. Lee's desk.

"Hello . . . Yes, this is Mr. Lee speaking . . . Dr. Grahame? Yes . . . Right away? Yes, I could." He hung up the receiver. Turning to his son, he said: "Dr. Grahame, who is attending Mr. Johnson, called and asked me to go right over to Mr. Johnson's house. His condition has become critical. He is delirious and is calling for me. The doctor says there is something on his mind. I will go at once." So saying, the good-natured old man bustled out, and stepping into his smart little coupe, drove to Mr. Johnson's home.

A nurse opened the door and ushered him into the sickroom. Mr. Lee started as he saw the haggard face of the clerk who had been promoted to take Mr. Warren's place, but who had been seized with a fever very shortly after this and been confined to his room.

Dr. Grahame came forward and said he would leave Mr. Johnson with Mr. Lee for a little while. After warning Mr. Johnson not to overdo himself, he went out, closing the door softly behind him. A long interval passed before Mr. Lee came out with a very grave face and told Dr. Grahame that the sick man had unburdened his mind. Abruptly, he turned away and soon was speeding back to his office.

In an hour John Lee, Jr., and Mr. Warren were seated in Mr. Lee's office hearing a story of how another man had been tempted and fallen.

On that day, that seemed so long ago, when the fateful envelope had disappeared, one link in Mr. Lee's story had been missing which would have given a very different aspect to the case. Mr. Johnson, who had then been next in position to Mr. Warren, had been in the office receiving orders from Mr. Lee when the letter was brought in. When Mr. Lee turned to refer to some papers in his safe the letter had been brushed off the desk and fell at the secretary's feet. He had picked it up, and yielding to a sudden impulse, when he thought of the big doctor bill his little girl's recent illness had made, he slipped the envelope in his pocket. He left the room before Mr. Lee, who did not once think of laying the suspicion on him.

The knowledge of the deed had weighed heavily on his mind and in a couple of days, from a bad cold, a fever developed and he became delirious. The doctors could not tell why he continued to grow worse, until he began to call for Mr. Lee. When Mr. Lee came, it was no longer a secret.

Mr. Warren heard the proof of his innocence as in a dream. The cloud that had been hanging over his head lifted, and he felt years younger. Vividly, his imagination pictured the face of the brave woman at home who was trying to gather up a few things to make a Christmas for Betty. His scattered thoughts came back suddenly as he felt an envelope being pressed into his hands, and heard husky apologies from the father and son who had so unintentionally wronged him.

He hurried out into the street as soon as he could, and walked home, not noticing the wind which blew him on, as roughly as it blew around the lonesome little house to which he was hurrying.

His wife looked up with wondering eyes as she heard him again whistling as he came up the walk. With tears in her eyes, she heard him tell the story of how to-night, on Christmas Eve, the miserable clerk had made his confession to his employer. Suddenly remembering, Mr. Warren pulled out the envelope which Mr. Lee had pressed into his hands. What was his surprise when he opened it and found in it pay for three weeks he had missed, and a large Christmas bonus.

They gazed at each other for a few minutes, their hearts too full of gratitude to speak. Then they remembered that this was Christmas Eve, and the hopes Betty had of finding something from Santa.

After a short consultation, Mr. Warren again donned his coat and hat and went down town to do his Christmas shopping. He returned laden with parcels. Among them there was a small Christmas tree and a doll dressed in blue. With happy hearts he and Mrs. Warren dressed the tree and put up the simple decorations.

In the morning when Betty awoke her first thoughts were of Santa and his reindeer. Quickly she slipped into the living-room and to her unbounded delight she espied the tree, and perched on its topmost bough was a beautiful doll with the longed-for blue dress.

Excitedly, she ran and shook her mother and father to tell them that Santa had really come and brought her a doll. Great was the rejoicing in the Warren's home all day and there were not three more grateful hearts in the country as at eventide they joined in singing the Christmas carol, "Glory to God in the Highest."

Toby's Christmas Eve - - By J. R. H.

OLD TOBY ANSTRUTHER was just about to close up his little jewelry store for the night. It wasn't much of a store in appearance and its windows were especially drab, but those who sought the best stones knew that old Toby had them in carefully graded rows in drawers inside. In fact, Toby was recognized by even experts as the peer of diamond judges, and his stock was rare and valuable. He catered to an exclusive trade, and was friendly with every one who did business with him.

It was a bitterly cold Christmas Eve, and when his store door was suddenly opened it let in a blast of biting cold that made the old man shiver. He did not seem overjoyed to see his late customer, and even appeared nervous as he approached the glass-topped counter. When the quietly but immaculately dressed visitor spoke in cultured tones, however, Roby's apparent hesitation vanished, and he heartily reciprocated the visitor's cheery "Merry Christmas."

"My name is David Ripley, and I have been recommended to you by mutual friends," said the customer, naming several of Toby's best clients. "I am given to understand," he continued, "that you have a valuable and varied stock of diamonds suitable for all purposes?"

Old Toby showed his appreciation of the recommendation, bobbing his head in agreement.

"Well," the customer proceeded, hesitatingly, "the fact is, I am about to,—ah,—that is, I am seeking a diamond suitable for a lady's ring, and also some ornaments suitable for Christmas gifts. I desire nothing gaudy, Mr. Anstruther, but what I take must be solid and substantial, and the price is no consideration."

Now, this was just the kind of talk to tickle old Toby's business sense, and as he reached for his tray of engagement rings you could almost see his mental adding maching piling on the profits to the purchase about to be made by the presentable Mr. Ripley. It was a dazzling array that appeared on the counter, but the customer showed no surprise. Old Toby was far the more enthusiastic of the two, and he seemed to wilt under the indifference of his customer.

Finally, Mr. Ripley selected a magnificent diamond ring, both stone and setting larger than the ordinary, gleaming and flashing against the plush of its case. It was priced ordinarily at four thousand five hundred dollars, but with such a customer, who openly avowed that cost was no consideration, Toby boldly raised the ante another thousand, and his client entered the game. After that there were selected ear-rings, bracelets, a platinum and diamond-studded watch and a diamond set watch foh, the whole totalling well over twelve thousand dollars, on Toby's revised calculation.

The purchases were placed in well-finished cases chosen from stock by the purchaser, and securely packed by old Toby. Then the client drew forth a fat pocket book and counted therefrom goodly sized bills to the amount of the purchase price, laying them on the counter with scarcely a second look. From a trouser pocket he drew fifty cents, which Toby had added with the idea of making the prices sound more real. When the jeweler would have rejected this as unnecessary in view of the large purchase, his pompous customer waved him aside. "Business is business," he said, "and you are entitled to all of your price. I am satisfied with my purchase, and it is incumbent upon me to pay you every cent you have asked."

With sight of the money, old Toby's manner toward his client visibly thawed. His faltering in the opening moments of the visit had disappeared, and he was obviously congratulating himself upon this call from so upright and generous a customer. Mr. Ripley seemed in no hurry to depart, but stood gazing at a show case as if trying to recall some half-forgotten duty.

As he turned toward the door, at last, it was thrust open to admit an eagle-eyed man who advanced with a firm tread, huge determination written on his face. Halting in front of the departing Mr. Ripley, whose path he blocked, the new arrival glanced sideways at old Toby, as he announced cheerfully: "In time after all! You're lucky, Mr. Jeweler, that I arrived in time. Eh! Frisco Pete?" Then, letting his voice fall from its boisterous note, "I'll bet this gentleman here had just relieved you of a considerable stock which he has pretended to purchase?"

"If you mean, sir, that this gentleman has been good enough to favor me with his custom for a large quantity of goods, for which he has paid me cash," rejoined old Toby indignantly, "you are right in your conjecture. By what right do you enter my store and ask so impertinent questions?"

"To the best right in the world," answered the bold intruder. "This man is an imposter, a swindler, as dangerous a thief as we have to deal with. And I, sir, am Inspector Salter." He threw open his coat and displayed a silver shield.

Mr. Ripley had turned pale, and he now started visibly as the detective snapped cuffs on his wrists.

"This is terrible," said old Toby. "I don't understand it at all. This gentleman has paid me handsomely for all he has purchased. I have the money here."

"You think those are genuine?" queried the officer, with a superior smile. "Permit me to tell you that they are but clever forgeries. It is a wonderful scheme, cleverly worked out, but not clever enough to fool old birds like me. Permit me, if you will, to show you wherein these notes are not genuine."

Whereupon ensued a lecture in counterfeiting, the inspector kindly indicating to Toby the manner in which he could thereafter judge the worth or not of paper money. There were trifles in which, apparently, the twelve thousand dollars in notes did not at all resemble real notes. "I'll venture to say, now," continued the inspector, "that this bird told you he was engaged, and that he wanted presents for the wedding party besides an engagement ring? Ah, ha! I thought so. He has worked that game before, but once too often, eh, Frisco?"

"Frisco" looked daggers at the taunting inspector. "What are you going to do about it?" he asked, with a suspicion of a sneer. "You think you are very clever, don't you? Well, don't stare. You have me trapped, what more do you want?"

The inspector snatched off Ripley's silver hair, displaying a close-cropped head. "Do you want any more proof?" he asked the jeweler.

Toby signified his satisfaction with the work of the officer. "What do you want me to do?" he asked humbly.

"Why, come along with me to the station and give an information on this fellow," answered the inspector, buttoning up his coat. "I'll take this waste paper as exhibit 'A,' and, of course, I'll take your goods to show that the poor fish actually did try to put something across."

Old Toby protested, but the inspector was adamant. The diamonds had to go. So the jeweler turned to get his coat.

And then, as he turned, he remarked, "I guess you were right, boys." The two men in front of the counter looked at him in surprise, for the remark was apropos of nothing they had said. It needed an explanation.

Then they saw clearly. From behind a show case at the edge of the counter had stepped a detective, revolver drawn; and from behind a screen in the other side of the shop had appeared another armed detective.

Mysteriously, too, old Toby had an ugly-looking automatic wavering between them. "He's a good one, all right," he continued, as though holding a gun on bandits was an every-day occurrence. "He might have taken me in if you fellows hadn't called early to warn me. It's a slick scheme, and a good thing they're caught."

The "inspector" was looking grey about the lips. "How did you get wise?" he asked, his hands stretched out obediently for the handcuffs a pleased-looking detective was offering.

In answer to his query, a girl stepped out from the back room of the little store. "Slicker Nell," snarled the pseudo officer, while Frisco Pete stared in amazement. "Frisco, I knew that woman would turn on you!"

"Nell! You didn't, did you?" almost pleaded the lately jaunty "Mr. Riple y.'

"Well," said the girl sulkily, "you threw me down for that flashy Krouse women that never done anything but take your money. And you let that big bully hit me last night when I went to see you. I said you'd be sorry."

And Frisco Pete was sorry, as he was led out by the grinning detectives.

"Merry Christmas," said old Toby, as he replaced his diamonds in their cases.

A guy wrote a Xmas rhyme. It made almost any jingle by Eddie Guest look positively Keatsian or Swinburnean. It was a crime and no mistake. I have heard of men being hung or shot for doing less. But the guy got the idea to shape it like this. A check for $ was sent him.

(By Marjorie Howe Dixon.)

DON QUIXOTE waked and stretched himself sleepily. Rosinante still slept, leaning his tired old head against a tree. Sancho Panza snored vigorously, while his grey mule cropped the grass at his feet, now and then taking a bite out of the toe of his boot. The last bite hit the flesh and roused Sancho, who leaped to his feet and chased the mule with many maledictions.

Don Quixote considered them both dreamily, but when the Squire returned astride the mule, a sudden memory struck him. Was it not thus that they had started forth on their adventures, Sancho astride the grey mule, and he on the good Rosinante, that mighty steed, of whose skin and bones he saw nothing, having in imagination clothed him with mighty muscles and sinews of steel?

Rosinante Quivers All Over.

"What! Rascally clown! Hast thou not searched me out a brave adventure, this fair morn?" shouted he to Sancho, with such vehemence as to cause Rosinante to start and quiver all over. "Ever sleeping, dullard, though centuries passed over thee, still wouldst thou lack an idea." As, indeed, seenturie has passed over both, and little did either know.

"Sir, Don Quixote," quoth Sancho, "lead on, I follow."

With greatest difficulty the valorous knight climbed into his saddle. He guided the good Rosinante aleng a gravelly path into a wide avenue, on the one side of which strange monsters raced madly in one direction and on the other of which they raced equally as madly in the other direction, snorting and grunting at each other. Of a sudden a red light flashed on. There upon all the monsters ceased to speed madly and drew up in groups on either side of the tower at the foot of which stood a stout figure clothed in blue, with a good oaken staff at his belt.

They Observe a Marvel.

For a long moment Don Quixote and Sancho Panza observed this marvel and then another marvel, for the red light disappeared and above it the green appeared, whereupon all the monsters dashed forward at such a speed as though they would be sure to strike each other. For all that, and before the valorous Don Quixote and his good squire had scarce drawn a deep breath, the red light appeared again and all stopped racing, snorting, however, and anxious to be off.

"There are the famous Racing Monsters," quote the Don. "And these shall I attack alone, that the good favor of my Dulcinia of Toboso may be won, and the world well rid of a strange and mighty peril."

"Nay, nay!" quoth Sancho. "Good Sir Knight, let me beg of you to let them be. Is it not a purpose of all Knights-errant to rescue those in distress? Let me ask yon brave man, who doth not fear them, where some good folk may be, toward whom all these monsters fling themselves."

Seeks Another Adventure.

"Go then and return right quickly," quoth the Knight, "for I would seek a new and fair adventure."

Again, the red light caused that great marvel that all the monsters should stop together, and so trotting at his best speed Sancho Panza reached the stout man.

"Good Sir," said he with tremulous voice, for the monsters snorted either side of him and seemed only too anxious to run him down. "My master yonder—"

"Watch your step!" shouted the blue clad one as he clutched the mule's bridle. "Now, what is it?"

Monsters Make Rush.

Sancho could not find words, for the monsters had shot forward again and he found himself between two swiftly moving streams. The next pause, he gasped—

"My Master would succor those in distress!"

"What?"

"My Master would help those in distress!"

"Oh, I though you were advertising something. It's the Good Fellows you want I guess, here, take this street to that number. They will fix you up."

Sancho returned to his master in the next pause of the monsters.

"We are to go to a number," said he, "on this street."

Study the Buildings.

After studying the buildings opposite for some time, they discovered that each bore a number in a sequence, and that their number might be close by.

Keeping on the soft grass and out of the path of the monsters they rode until they found themselves opposite the required number. A lull in the race of monsters gave them opportunity to cross the dangerous pathway and there, Rosinante was delighted to find a small bubbling fountain on a white pedestal.

Right eagerly did he quench his thirst. The mule was tied to a post with a metal box on it, and the good Don gave himself over to meditations on his Dulcinea while Sancho went indoors.

Strange Person Appears.

Clad in blue, with much handsome gold braid, a strange person approached him.

"My Master would help those in distress," quoth Sancho as before—"we were sent here—he, the stout one with the truncheon saith—to the Good Fellows—wherever they may be."

"Here, step in, ninth floor, Good Fellows—"

And Sancho walked in to a tiny room with much gold paint and mirrors. In a moment he staggered against the wall, and clutched at his portly waist, for the room seemed to be rising at a breathless speed. His heart leaped, and fell, for the room stopped rising and the courteous person who guided it said, "Ninth floor, please, first door to the right for Good Fellows."

Manhattan in December.

As the door opened a blond young man seated at a desk closed his book with a sigh—it was "The Delightful History of the Most Ingenious Knight, Don Quixote of the Mancha." He stared at the intruder and rubbed his eyes and pinched himself and stared again. It was the Squire, no less—and this was Manhattan in December.

"You are Sancho Panza, as I live—Holy Mackeral! How come you here!"

"Strange thou shouldst know me, though I have not the honor of knowng thee," said Sancho, "no doubt my master's fame reached thine ears. The valorous Don Quixote of the Mancha—it is he who has sent me here to relieve those in distress."

Food for Christmas Dinner.

"To be sure, to be sure—let us go to him at once. Has he many ducats do you think? For, with these we can buy food at this pleasant Christmas season for those who would otherwise want for it and relieve their distress." (Thus came the language easily to the Blond Young Man, for he had but closed the book.)

Sancho would not try the little room that had shot him up, so down many, many stairs they walked and found the Don at the curbstone.

"Come with me," said the young man, and led them into a rich and mighty market where strange foods and fruits were displayed for sale. Of these they bought great quantities and went forth again to a monster standing quietly at the curb.

"Sit with me, Squire, and you, Sir Knight, guard these foods in the rear seat."

Relieves Self of Bundles.

Clumsily Don Quixote disposed himself with all the bundles while the squire sat beside the young man in the front part of the monster.

Suddenly with a soft snort it shot forward and joined the other racing monsters. And all day long, Don Quixote, the Squire and the Blond Young Man gave out food for Christmas eating to those who were poor and in distress, or want.

You say this pleasant tale wants proof?

For that, you are referred to the Blond Young Man, who fell asleep over the History of Don Quixote of the Mancha. For thus did these things happen in December in that great city of Manhattan.

Footprints In The Sand

(By Ruby Douglas.)

"If anyone had told me that I, in my right mind at 26, would be literally tracing a girl's footsteps in a fickle sand bar—well, I would have told him he was crazy," remarked Claude Granite.

He and a companion were spending their holidays at an old New England house where the hostess took a few well-recommended vacationists. It was September and the woods were a riot of red and gold and orange.

A river ran along the back of the garden, and every morning he and his companion arose and climbed down the grassy bank to the pool that was cleared for swimming. A quick dip in the sparkling, purling river and they were ready for the famous New England breakfast that awaited them.

One morning Claude had discovered a girl's footprints on a shifting, sandy edge that bordered the river a little lower than the pool in which they swam.

"These steps lead into the water—but where has the girl gone?" he asked his friend.

"Don't ask me. I'm started. Come on," retorted the other.

The next morning he found fresh steps, and, as on the previous day, no return prints.

The mystery added zest to his vacation, but now, after a week, he began seriously to wonder how the girl could disappear so early each morning and become entirely lost to sight. There was no evidence of her, but those footprints in the sand each morning.

Claude sat down on the damp sand and studied the footprints. Yes: unmistakably, they had been made this morning. Well, he would wait until their creator returned. She might look like the back of a crazy quilt, but at least he would see her and solve the mystery.

Somehow, he fancied she was beautiful. He sat there in the early morning light and began to dream a picture of her. But—she did not come.

The next morning Claude was gone when his chum sought him out to take their early dip and, thus left alone and being not too enthusiastic about the chilly water, the young man dressed and went to breakfast. He was getting irritated at the mood of his friend.

Claude had hidden himself, almost at dawn, behind some crimson bushes so that he might see the girl who made the matutinal footprints in the sand and entered the water, apparently not to return. He had searched the opposite bank for evidence of her leaving, but nothing but miles of barren, stubby woods stretched out across the river. A few old trees and many rocks bordered the bank.

His emotions were mixed when he heard the crackling of the twigs on the hill behind him and knew that someone approached. Clad in a bathing suit, brown, closely-cropped hair a-light in the sunlight, and carrying a large, well-stuffed rubber bag, she made her way to the river's edge. Just before she reached the smooth sand, she slipped off her sandals, tucked them and tied them into the bag she carried, picked her way deliberately across the yellow, impressionable sand, climbed onto a flat rock and—tossed the bag across the short span of swiftly flowing water to a projecting bit of ground. Then she slipped into the river, swam about for a few moments, clambered out on the opposite side, picked up her bag and disappeared among the thick autumn leaves and rocks. Presently, Claude was startled beyond belief to see, a short distance back from the edge, the girl, clad in a charming autumn-red smock and brown stockings and sandals, climbing up an old tree.

He could barely see her movements, but as he twisted and turned and moved cautiously, he saw that she had a plateau, a veritable tree house in the broad branches and that she was about to do some sort of work.

This was enough for to-day. He fairly flew up the bank and into his clothes. His heart sang. He had discovered the one loveliest girl in the world and the very romantic finding of her told him that she would remain in his life. He did not speak of his experience.

As usual, he took his swim the following morning and his chum gathered, from his changed mood, that he had forgotten the steps.

He went down to the river's edge after breakfast with his rifle and some old bottles which he proceeded to place here and there on branches and stumps and rocks in order to try his aim. Careful, always, to shoot on his own side of the river, he still knew that the girl in her tree house would not realize this.

A scream greeted him. He saw a lovely head emerge from the golden and red leaves.

"I'm here," cried the girl. "Don't shoot!"

Claude hastened to the nearest opposite spot. "Oh, did I frighten you?" he asked, hypocritically.

"Almost to death," admitted the panting girl.

There followed nearly two hours of explanations. She told him this was the only escape she had from social life and interruptions to the writing she was bound to do.

And then, feeling that she did not dislike him and might forgive him, Claude confessed to his manoeuvers.

When Claude told his chum about it—not all about it, but enough to satisfy—he remarked:

"Well, I might have known that some girl leaving foot prints in the sand would mark your time as a bachelor, old man. I suppose you'll have her footprints cast in bronze, now, and use them for book ends."

"Not a bad idea," said Claude, happily.

A Christmas Story Of Peterborough

By Val Presto

EXACTLY 150 years ago there stood on the big hill in Ashburnham, known as Armour's hill, a large stone house with high gabled roof and a general air of prosperity and comfort. The owner, an Englishman, was undoubtedly the first to come into this vast but beautiful wilderness. As so often happens, he sighed for the freshness and beauty of God's world. He was tired of man's.

With him came his wife and young family, consisting of a lovely girl of eight, a younger and scarcely less attractive girl of six and a mischievous little boy of four. When W. Leveson, which he pronounced 'Leeson,' first came up from Lake Ontario, along what is now the Trent Waterway, he was amazed at the magnificence of the forests of oak and pine with beech and maple in between in this locality. The turbulent river driving noisily through the forests gave promise of adventure and of lakes above.

He decided to build a strong warm house in keeping with the splendour of the beauty of nature. His workmen consisted wholly of Indians. He found stone of suitable size and quality close at hand. He pitched his tents and watched the up-building of his house under his direction. The roof was thatched. The lining of the house was hewn logs of the aromatic pine. His Indians brought him his supplies of firearms, ammunition and what Mrs. Leeson required, all the way from Montreal. To the north of what is now Gannon's Narrows was a Hudson's Bay Co. post, the main house of which is standing still. To the south there was a similar post at what is now Cobourg. The Mississaga Indians, as fine a race of nature's knights and gentlemen as nature ever produced, moved about as the Indians do through the limitless forest in search of game and the joy of life.

Seven years had flown and with them the cares and shallowness of the memories of the life the Leeson household had left behind them. At each Christmas there was a great fire in the fireplace of the "castle." The Indians brought venison and small game. They came in the pride of feathers and fine raiment. The squaws were similarly clothed. Skirts caught in the underbrush and were no part of the feminine raiment. The life here of white and red man was like a chapter out of some old romance. The Indians were honest and truthful, merciful and kindly. But one day when Cynthia, the eldest girl, now 15 years old or so, strayed into the forest in search of the red berries of the Ash for Christmas, now near at hand, she lost her way. Her father and mother were almost mad with fear. But on the third day Nogaw-wishin, a young chief of the Ojibways brought her home safe and sound.

Why We Have A Santa Claus

Scene I.

The sleeping chamber of the elder Grinleighs late on the night before Christmas.

Mrs. G.—Don't forget to set the alarm for seven o'clock, George. We simply must be up early. You know how eager the children are, and we must be at the tree to greet them and keep up the Santa Claus tradition.

Mr. G.—Good Lord! Sometimes I wish Ellen and Junior would outgrow this old Santa Claus stuff. Here it almost midnight and I've fooled around with their tree until I can even feel pine needles in my pyjamas. And still I've got to get up an hour earlier than usual on Christmas Day just so the kids won't be disappointed.

Mrs. G.—Hush, George—think of all their little illusions. Why Christmas is the biggest day of the year for them and they dream of Santa Claus for weeks before the time they actually expect him.

Mr. G.—Oh, I suppose you're right. Our fathers' fathers started it and we might as well keep it up. After all, I'm satisfied when I see the joy it gives the kids.

Scene II.

The bedroom of the two younger Grinleighs at about the same hour.

Ellen (aged nine)—Hurry up and put out that reading light, Junior. I don't care if you have got a new theory to combat the Humanistic Doctrine—we've got to get some sleep to-night or we won't wake up in time to greet the family at their Christmas tree in the morning. And you know how they depend on that.

Junior (aged ten)—Great Jehovah! As though my studies aren't more important than a Mid-Victorian belief in some patristic Santa Claus character. I certainly wish we didn't have to go through with this sham every year. Personally, I'd much rather sleep tomorrow morning.

Ellen—Well, do you think I'm very enthusiastic about getting up an hour earlier than usual on a holiday? But you know how mother and dad look forward to it every year. They've been talking about Santa Claus for weeks now and it would simply break their hearts if we didn't pretend to keep up their illusion.

Junior—Oh, I suppose you're right. Our forebears started the arrangement and we might as well pander to the conventions. After all, I'm satisfied when I see the joy it gives the seniors.

Uncle Jasper's Repentance

A DICKENS OF A CHRISTMAS STORY

Christmas! How the very word, with its instant suggestions of snow, holly, wood fires and steaming puddings, smote Moyden F. Bilger through and through as he seated himself at his desk, in his pyjamas on a broiling day in July.

"Christmas," he muttered to himself as he wiped his perspiring brow, "Christmas, eh, and in the middle of my vacation too. This is a fine time for an editor to be asking me for a Christmas story. To Perth Amboy with Christmas—but I suppose I've got to turn out something. Well, I'll show 'em a novelty anyhow."

"Uncle Jasper's Repentance."

The snow descended on the town of Bingville in the darnedest gobs Jasper Grasper ever remembered, seeing as he went down to breakfast on the morning of December 25. "Merry Christmas," said Jevins, as he pulled out the chair from under the old man in a playful Christmas spirit. "Merry Christmas, sir."

"Then celebrate it by being fired," retorted Jasper, arising from the floor, showing that, although bearded, he knew how to take a joke. On leaving the house he kicked the boy who was sweeping his steps and loud rang the cheery laughter of old Jasper as the lad departed whimpering and tipless. On his way to his Stomach Tablets Factory (the only place of business open that day in all Bingville—he foreclosed a mortgage on a tenement, turned eight families adrift in the fast gathering mire, and emptied a package of tacks at the hospital entrance. After giving instructions that the factory should keep open until later than usual, owing to the big after-Christmas demand, old Jasper went to a cafeteria and enjoyed a lovely Christmas dinner, all alone, happy in the knowledge that for once he had fooled all the Grasper children and grandchildren who had sponged on him every Christmas for years by gathering at his home and getting free food, free shelter, free gifts and everything. This time, vowed the old gentleman, on arriving from distant cities, they would find the house completely deserted. But old Jasper had not really forgotten them, for he had left a fine, rich, individual mince pie for each of his relatives—nicely flavored with strychnine. As the dear old-fashioned fellow finished his bowl of crackers and milk he chuckled as he thought: "This is the finest Christmas I ever remember. I'm glad I repented in time instead of being a sucker all my life."

(The End)

Christmas Down On The Farm

I was readin' a piece in the paper 'tother day about how unhappy us farmers was at Xmas time. It said we was snowed in and overworked and lonesome and that city people ought to shed a tear for us during the happy Yuletide.

I don't know about that, neighbor. We ain't so bad off.

First thing, we don't have no Christmas shopping to do. I have heard that there were more murders the first part of December than any other time. We don't have no trouble that way because all we've got to do is to decide what we want in the cattylog and then fill out the order sheet, inclose a check and send it away. Nobody is even spoke to cross.

We don't have to spend the first week after Christmas writin' letters to people we forgot to send greeting cards to, tellin' 'em how glad we was to get theirs and did they get ourn?

We don't have to tip people we never saw until a day or two before Christmas. In fact, we don't have to tip anybody except the mail man and he'd just as soon take it out in a chicken.

We don't have to find out why in h—l (swear word) the new electric train won't run.

We don't have to take it back a couple of days later and exchange it for another train somebody has just returned.

We don't have to go around to the neighbors and drink what is called Christmas cheer.

We don't have to eat dinner with relatives. We kin just set at home and enjoy ourselves.

We don't have to take one person's presents and slip around and give 'em to somebody else, like we hear it's done in the big cities.

Come to think it over, I don't understand why more people don't take up farming 'long 'bout this time of year. For good solid comfort there's nothing like Christmas on a snowed-in farm.

"THERE AIN'T NO SANTY CLAUS"

The girl was very sweet and coy
As she looked at him and said:
"The night air is rather chilly,
I've nowhere to lay my head."
He gave her just one startled look
And then in haste he said,
"I'll take you home, if that's the case
So you can go to bed."—

Bean-pot.

Oh, Christmas, gay Christmas
Has come 'round again,
A new pair of rubbers
For old Uncle Ben,
A necktie for Dad
And for Grandma a clock,
Three cheers for St. Nich'las!
My watch is in hock!

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

The Girl Who Was Santa Claus

By H. L. Raybold

JIMMY BARROWS looked anxiously at his watch, then hustled into his overcoat, grabbed his hat, and dashed out of his office. It was much later than he had supposed and he had promised Phyllis to be Santa Claus to her little Settlement children. Nice thing to fail the girl you adore; especially on the very day you intend telling her so!

Now there is nothing which slows a man down so much as being in a hurry. Jimmy jumped on the first car that came along, discovered three blocks later that it was the wrong one, and missed the right one on the way back.

So that by the time he had reached the drab side street where the settlement house shone like a white beacon between gray rocks, the festivities were well under way.

Edging in through a crowd of shawl wrapped mothers, Jimmy saw that he was indeed too late. For Santa Claus had already appeared on the scene masked and resplendent in the usual red flannel outfit liberally trimmed and sprinkled with white cotton wool.

"Ye gods and little fishes!" groaned Jimmy. "Phyllis will never forgive me. She said she'd have to play it herself if I didn't show up!"

He waited patiently while innumerable recitations were labored through; while a hundred swarthy youngsters lifted their voices in gusto in half a dozen old carols, and while the candy boxes were distributed by a Santa Claus who spoke Italian fluently as presumably a Santa Claus should. Jimmy knew that Phyllis' ability to speak their native tongue was one of the things that so endeared her to the people.

Then, seeing old Santa disappear through a back doorway, Jimmy, by devious ways he knew, slipped through to the rear, just in time to catch the hurrying Santa Claus by the hand.

Now for an ordinary mortal making love to a girl in disguise may not seem very romantic, but Jimmy was both imaginative and so quite capable of visualizing the charms of Phyllis, even if hidden, and he was also most dreadfully shy. So that he was undoubtedly helped out in his proposing by the fact that a girl's quizzical or amused glance was not confronting him—at least, in so far as he could see!

"Darling!" he said. "Do forgive me for not getting here on time. You'll know it was not intentional when I tell you I love you. You're the most wonderful girl in the world, and I'll spend my entire life trying to make you happy. Say 'yes' and make it the most wonderful Christmas of our lives!"

There! He had gotten it all out now! He paused just a minute, waiting patiently if breathlessly for her response. For a moment there was no response. Then he heard a little sigh and, to his dismay, with a single squeeze of his hand, she pulled away and fled up the stairs.

Jimmy waited for nearly three-quarters of an hour. Then, puzzled and chagrinned, he turned back the way he had come. There was something queer about Phyllis not returning.

In the distance, he could hear the children's chatter as they bustled in departure, but Jimmy had no heart to mix in their frivolity.

As he started down the stone steps, his hat jammed over his eyes, he collided squarely with a panting young lady who clutched him by both coat sleeves.

"Jimmy—isn't it awful! For me to get here at this time of day! There was a terrible traffic jam, and I couldn't get a taxi. I—why, what is the matter?"

"Weren't you Santa Claus?" Jimmy was demanding fiercely, with a very funny feeling about his heart.

"No, of course not; weren't you?"

"No—oh, just who do you suppose was Santa Claus?" groaned Jimmy.

"Come in and find out," invited Phyllis sensibly, then stared in amazement at seeing Jimmy, his eyes horrified, back away down the street, his hands lifted protestingly in front of him. "No—no—Phyllis. For my sake, don't ask me. I—I can never come to this place again."

That evening Phyllis, rather tired from her settlement, and considerably put out about Jimmy, lifted startled eyes as the bell rang. With a wave of pleasure, she found, on answering it, that it was Jimmy who undoubtedly would explain everything.

She drew him into a comfortable chair in front of the glowing fire. "Do tell me," she pleaded, "just what was the matter with you to-day. The Santa Claus was only Miss Colichi."

"Then," said Jimmy dispiritedly; "it's Miss Colichi to whom I may be engaged."

"Engaged? To Miss Colichi?" shrieked Phyllis. "Why she can't speak a word of English!"

Jimmy jumped up. "Can she understand it?" he cried. "That's the important thing!"

"Not very well," said Phyllis. "But why?"

"Well—" said Jimmy deliberately; "I told her I loved her and asked her to marry me and——"

"Miss Colichi!" gasped Phyllis.

"Yes," nodded Jimmy. "Of course; I thought it was you." He grinned sheepishly. "Well?" he said slowly.

"Miss Colichi can't have you,' said Phyllis. "You're mine. Oh, Jimmy!"

Is There a Santa Claus?

The Examiner printed this last year and makes no apology for reprinting it. It is worth reading again and again.

In 1897, Frank P. Church wrote in The New York Sun, answering a question from an 8-year old girl:

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, and ant, in his intellect as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certain as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound, and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas, how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no child-like faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies. You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Clause, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Clause, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Do you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that there are not fairies. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernatural beauty and glory beyond It it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding

"No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, —nay, ten times ten thousand years from now —he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

He Who Gives - - - A Story for Children

(By H. E. S., Examiner Correspondent.)

MR. AND MRS. STEWART lived in a quiet rural community in Ontario with their large family of happy healthy children. Patsy, a girl of sixteen was the oldest; then came the twins, Donald and Ronald; Shirley was thirteen, Mary ten, John six and Baby Helen not yet two.

Their home was on a few acres of land, where small fruit was grown, chickens raised, and a couple of cows and a few pigs kept.

This provided work for all, the children assisting in the picking of fruit and the care of the chickens.

By means of great industry and good management, they were able to make sufficient for their daily needs and make a small payment each year on their home.

Always, anniversaries and birthdays were celebrated in some simple loving way, that to the children made home a very dear and pleasant spot.

At Christmas, they always had a Christmas tree, and the children who were old enough, assisted in getting and decorating it.

It was a very merry occasion, when the day before Christmas the team was hitched up and all piled on the sleigh, to go search for a suitable tree.

It did not dampen the mirth and jollity or detract from the importance of the undertaking, if, as sometimes happened, the sleighing was scanty and the runners grated on the gravel. Down the road from the Stewarts lived a family who were not as comfortably situated.

The mother, father and two children had come from England in the spring. The father had obtained work on a farm nearby but the change from their old home to Canada had made it necessary to buy warmer clothes for the coming winter, as well as articles of furniture for their home. This, with their weekly expenses, pretty well used up the father's wages.

Mrs. Stewart suggested to her children that they should invite Mr. and Mrs. Duncan, Billy and Mary to share their Christmas dinner and tree with them; but stipulated that the children must provide gifts for each and assist in entertaining them.

Of course the children were delighted, and many were the conferences held and plans made to obtain money for those extra demands.

The twins had helped old Mr. Jones, who was crippled with rheumatism, to pile his wood neatly in his shed. When he heard of the extra gifts to be bought, he gave them permission to cut a half dozen small evergreen trees which were growing around a spring in his meadow, for which he thought they might find a market in the neighboring town.

Patsy, not wishing to be outdone by the boys, made candy and persuaded her mother to take it to town on her next trip to market and sell it there.

Shirley had a pet duck, of which she was very fond, but entering into the Christmas spirit, she resolved to sell it and add the money to the Christmas fund. Mary had some nickles in her bank which she gladly produced for the occasion.

When the time came to make their Christmas purchases, they were delighted to find that they could buy their usual gifts for each member of the family, remember Mr. and Mrs. Duncan with small gifts, and also a sleigh for Billy and a doll for Mary.

Preparation for Christmas kept pace with the days, and when Christmas morning dawned bright and clear, the Stewarts were up early to complete their preparations for the expected guests.

Shortly after the Duncans arrived, dinner was served; and such a dinner! Turkey, potatoes, cranberries and gravy first appeared, and after all had done full justice to this, the dessert of plum pudding was brought in. It was indeed a treat to the Duncans, whose manner of living had necessarily been plain.

After the dinner had been cleared away, the tree was stripped and the delight of the Duncan children on receiving their gifts, with candy and oranges also, was unbounded.

After this followed a couple of hours spent in games in the comfortable farm kitchen, in which everybody joined.

Before the happy party broke up, parents and children joined in singing Christmas carols; then the Duncans, after thanking the Stewarts for the happy day, started for home, the children carrying their gifts.

Even greater than the joy of the Duncans was that of the Stewarts, as they, one and all, realized it was more blessed to give than to receive, and that they had celebrated Christ's birthday as he would have them do by making happy some newcomers in a strange land.

Claus and Effect

"Order!" barked the bearded chairman, sharply rapping his gavel, "the Third Annual Convention of Professional Santa Clauses is hereby called to order. We will first hear from the Department Store Division."

"Mr. Chairman, the members of the Department Store Santa Claus Union, Local No. 3, submit the following platform: (a) shorter beards and cleaner; (b) an eight-hour day and no kissing squalling infants; (c) we will not double as salesmen in the women's underwear department on busy December Saturdays."

Another bearded speaker arose. "Mr. Chairman, The Amalgamated Street Corner Santa Clauses demand (a) warmer overcoats; (b) larger handkerchiefs; (c) busier corners; (d) hot roast beef sandwiches twice a day; (e) pocket flasks; (f) redder noses."

Still a third hirsute orator raised his voice. "The Federated Santa Fathers will no longer (a) don beards and disguises on Christmas Eve; (b) crawl down chimneys at the risk of life and limb; (c) hide in the cellar on Christmas Eve until the children have been put to bed."

Several other subordinate Clauses voiced their sentiments, when suddenly a ruddy-cheeked figure with a longer beard and twinkling eyes slowly wabbled up to the speakers' platform.

"Gentlemen," he began. "I am perfectly content to go about my Santaclausical duties without pay, without ideal working conditions, in storm and sleet, snow and wind—in fact, I've been doing it now for years and years."

"Traitor! Wretch! Heretic!" shrieked the assembled Clauses: "Surrender your union card. Leave your beard at the door and never whiten our threshold again. Who are you, who dares violate every section of the professional Christmas credo?"

"Ah, gentle gentlemen," softly crooned the portly figure, "I am only the real Santa Claus. Good day."

TOYLAND IS JOYLAND - Observations By Wilson Craw

IN TOYLAND this Christmas there was no scarcity of toys for the kiddies. The market has been filled with novelties of all kinds, designed to suit all ages, tastes and conditions of childhood and the spending power of fond parents, aunts, uncles and friends, who recognize that Yuletide is essentially the season for bringing happiness and joy to youngsters, and who delight to lavish their bounty upon them, according to their means.

A trip through toyland in any of our large stores shows that the trade has been very brisk, most of young Peterborough were to be found casting fond eyes upon toys which they would like to have and which they were going to write Santa Claus for when they went home. They have had many nights of planning and of the dreaming the fondest of dreams of what Santa Claus was going to bring them and when Christmas morning comes, many tots will creep down the back stairs in their bare feet and in their nightgowns long before anybody else is awake to see what Santa has left for them in their stockings or has hung on their Christmas tree.

Money has been more plentiful this season and sales have been above the average, so all young Peterborough should be happier than for years. Toys, generally speaking, this year are not more expensive than last and prices range from a few cents for the smallest article up to $25 and more for the most elaborate and perfect specimens of craftsmanship. The great majority of toys are made in either Great Britain or United States, but Germany is again wedging her way into the world's toy market.

Times have changed, for not so long ago Mary, awakening from her slumber on Christmas morning, expected to find nothing more in her stocking or on her Christmas tree than a bright ribbon or a flaxen-haired doll with a sawdust body; or when Johnny, rushing breathlessly downstairs, was quite content if Santa Claus had left him a small wooden horse, or a box of bricks or a drum which he invariably smashed in order to find out from whence the sound came. But to-day, with the forward march of science and industry toyland not only turns out a wider range of goods which reflects the trend of a nation's progress just as truly as it fascinates the young folks and satisfies the yearning of their hearts. While amusement and recreation are adequately provided for, toys of a distinctive educative character are manufactured in large numbers and have found a very ready sale. There are all kinds of electrical and mechanical devices for boys, domestic appliances for girls and instructional games for both.

Prominent among the new features is a racing horse on wheels. Steered by hand, the steed goes through the actions of a real horse on the track. The clowns and dancing fiddlers are also to be found. The electrical trains with rolling stock, bridges, telegraph wires, semaphores and all necessary railway equipment are much in favor, as are also all kinds of electrical engines for driving anything which the young mind might conceive. The little tots seemed to have found great delight in the Lulu blow-gun game. Along with these there are toy guns and archery games which catch the eye of the youth of to-day as they did that of knights of old.

Boys who like building can to their heart's desire indulge in construction work with overhead cranes, steam shovels, pile drivers, dump trucks, lumber wagons, oil tanks and the like.

All kinds of mechanical boats submarines, Atlantic liners, building cubes for architects, tools of all descriptions, fire reels, hook and ladder trucks, express wagons and mechanical trains are also to be found.

There are toys which remind the younger generation of the Great War, for in toyland can be found, field guns, mountain batteries, fully equipped army corps and leaden soldiers representing famous British regiments.

There is nothing, of course, that will ever charm the younger lassie quite so much as a doll. Never before was there seen such a variety of their favorite toy. There are tiny dolls and life-sized dolls, dancing dolls and dolls with rolling eyes, dolls that speak and dolls that cry, plain dolls and dressed dolls; dolls in carriages, dolls in cots and new baby dolls in rock-a-by cradles. Doll's accessories are in abundance, including trousseau outfits, blankets, bedspreads, carriages, trunks, laundry sets and even the dolls' breakfast table fully equipped.

May the Christmas tree in every home be a real carnival of plumage; decorated with tinsel strands, balls of crimson silver and gold which entwine the green branches and may its branches and twigs be loaded to the floor with toys and gifts for every member of the family.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

From Moses To Samuel

FROM MOSES TO SAMUEL

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for December 26. Moses to Samuel.

* * *

(By Wm. E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist.)

The period from Moses to Samuel represents a time of struggle for liberty and of development and construction in the life of a people, from which individuals and nations may derive much instruction and spiritual counsel for to-day.

How different in their outward aspect are the lives of these two men who stand respectively at the beginning and at the end of the quarter's lessons Yet how similar in the matter of their essential call to leadership and in the depth of consecration with which they gave themselves to their tasks! Both men had pre-eminently good mothers, wise, intense' full of consecration. But both men passed quickly, as children from the directness of a mother's care and influence; Moses to the palace of the Pharaohs, Samuel to the precincts of the tabernacle.

In each man was the triumph of heredity over environment; for Moses, when he had come to years, by faith refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer the afflictions of his people, while Samuel kept himself free from the influences that had destroyed the character of Eli's sons and that had, apparently, weakened the character of Eli himself.

Samuel's Task.

It was a very different task that confronted Samuel from that which Moses had undertaken. The task of Moses was that of a deliverer, a great military commander and a pioneer. Samuel's task was that of the priest, prophet and statesman. His work was that of spiritual organization or of spiritual restoration. Often the latter task is much harder than the former, just as action is always easier than effective organization.

Between these extreme types of leadership and the different tasks that they faced were a group of good men who partook deeply of the strong elements of both Moses and Samuel—Joshua, Caleb, Gideon; each was necessary in his place, and each made his contribution to the work of upbuilding that Samuel more than any other man accomplished.

Dawn of Realization.

Prior to Samuel there had been a racial and religious consciousness, binding the people together in the hope of attaining land and liberty. Now that they had won a foothold in the country there was the task of developing a national consciousness and national institutions. It was this task to which Samuel addressed himself.

But for him it was the work rather of a religious leader than of a statesman. He sought to develop a theocracy—a society governed directly by the sense of divine purpose and by the seeking of God's will. That has always been a difficult or impossible task where individuals have not already come under the power of God.

Samuel saw some of his own plans and purposes partially defeated in the demand of the people for a king. They wanted a military leader rather than a prophet of God. Moreover, while this was in a sense the beginning of the strength of their national life, it proved ultimately the way of their national undoing.

If the whole people had had the vision of Samuel, there might have been for Israel a very different spiritual history and possibly a very different course of material history as well.

Samuel's Problems.

The problems that Samuel faced are very much the problems that we face in modern nations—the task of bringing patriotism, citizenship, and national life under the dominance of spiritual vision and ideals. To make the love of country as large as the love of God and the love of one's fellowmen everywhere—this is the modern phase of the task that Samuel faced in ancient Israel. In a sense also it is the task that confronted Moses in leading the people out from bondage into the freedom and beauty of a larger life established in spiritual ideals.

OUR CHRISTMAS STORY FOR LITTLE ONES

Chapter II.—That same little boy, now grown up, has been proclaiming loudly for the last week that he doesn't believe in Santa Claus.

KING'S YULE PARTY--- JUST HOME AND FAMILY

BY MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Like the humblest Briton in the island, King George of Great Britain, Ireland, the Dominions beyond the seas and Emperor of India, will on Christmas Day tuck his feet beneath his own mahogany, surrounded simply by his dear ones, and will proceed to lay away "turkey and—"

Forced by his position to lead a more or less formal and artificial life for most of the year, the king has always made of Christmas what most people do—a time of privacy and family reunion. This year it will be more so than usual. For he has selected to spend Christmas at Sandringham.

Sandringham Modern.

Now Sandringham is not a palace in any sense of the word as are most of the king's official residences. It is in the county of Norfolk, where you get the combination of sea breezes and pine air. Also, if there is any snow going, Sandringham gets it. For the king it's a relief from the rain, fog and murk of London.

And Sandringham, for Great Britain, is very modern. It was completed in 1871, having been built for his father, King Edward VII., when he was Prince of Wales. He had it built to suit the tastes of himself and his wife, afterwards Queen Alexandra, and all his life it was his favorite residence. After his death, Queen Alexandra spent most of her long widowhood there. And there she, too, died some months ago.

They'll All Be There.

Sandringham itself is not half as showy as the country residence of many rich British business men. It's a three-story red brick building in the Elizabethan style, surrounded by a park of 200 acres. Much of the property in the neighborhood belongs to the king, so that he is the landlord, not only of many small farmers and villagers, but even of a public house—a saloon.

This year will find Sandringham the scene of the greatest royal gathering in decades. The only absentee will be the king's uncle, the Duke of Connaught, who goes every winter to the French Riviera to get away from the rigors of the British winter.

The king will be surrounded by all his sons. The last to arrive will be Prince George, the youngest, who has been away in Chinese waters on naval service for a year. Princess Mary Lady Lascelles, will be there with her sons, as well as the Duke and Duchess of York and their baby. The king's sister, Queen Maud of Norway, also will be on hand.

Queen Mary, King George and Sandringham.

The king in addition to having his "turkey and—", like everybody else who can afford it, will also have a Christmas tree, and he won't have far to go to get it. His estate has the finest fir trees in Britain and a huge one will be cut down and erected in the big ball room at Sandringham.

Some years ago, when the ex-kaiser was not an ex-enemy, but still "Cousin William," he procured a tree from Sandringham for his own Christmas celebrations at Potsdam.

King George's tree will not only be brilliantly lighted, but it will bear gifts for all his family. Furthermore, there will be suitable gifts for all the employes of the estate. And some time during the Christmas festivities there will be a night when the ballt room will be turned over to the employes for a dance which will be graced by the presence of the king and queen.

Unlike our presidents, the king and queen get very few gifts from people who are strangers to them. They do, however, receive presents from their intimate friends. And they in turn send out hundreds of Christmas cards, beautifully illustrated and made especially for them every year.

OLD MASTERS

O say what is that thing called Light
Which I must ne'er enjoy;
What are the blessings of the sight
O tell your poor blind boy!

You talk of wondrous things you see,
You say the sun shines bright;
I feel him warm, but how can he
Or make it day or night?

My day or night myself I make
Whene'er I sleep or play;
And could I ever keep awake
With me 'twere always day.

With heavy sighs I often hear
You mourn my hapless woe;
But sure with patience I can bear
A loss I ne'er can know.

Then let not what I cannot have
My cheer of mind destroy;
Whilst thus I sing, I am a king.
Although a poor blind boy.

Teddy's First Christmas

A Children's Story by Val Presto.

LITTLE TEDDY was out sweeping the sidewalk with his little broom. It was a lovely clear, cold Canadian day and getting pretty close to that most wonderful of all days, Christmas Day, when another little Child came into the world to speak to all people, young and old, through the ear of the mind or soul, by some, called the spirit. Before His birth people thought that doing things in a certain way was all that was necessary. But the Saviour showed them that no one could do right, all that one could do was to try to do right, and that what was "right" consisted in doing what God not man, told us to do.

Of course Teddy had heard about Jesus. But he knew very little about Him and had formed the idea in his little mind that Jesus ought to do what he, Teddy, asked Him to do. Teddy did not know that all true inspiration came from above. Like many others, old and young, he thought the whole business of life began and ended in himself and his mother. As Teddy was sweeping the snow an old man with a long white beard came slowly by. He looked at Teddy and Teddy looked at him.

"What are you doing?" asked the old man.

"I'm workin'" said Teddy.

"I suppose you're getting ready for Christmas," continued the old man.

Teddy was silent. He ceased "workin'." He had heard "them" talking about Christmas and recognized the word, but he did not know what it meant. The old man saw his difficulty and smiled:

"Do you know what Christmas is, my little man?"

Teddy started to work again, but presently stopped and looked up at the old man inquiringly—

"Christmas is a day in winter when there's plenty of snow and ice for little boys and girls to play with. If there was no Christmas there'd be no snow" said the old man.

Teddy was now all attention. This was a most important matter. He would go and ask his mother about it. But first of all he would hear what the old man had to say.

"Eh?" said Teddy, as his big eyes

"Eh?" said Teddy, as his big eyes

The old man smiled again. He knew what the unspoken words of the little fellow were. They were those of all sweet, pretty little boys and little girls at this time of life.

"Yes," continued the old man, "when you were sick last winter there was no snow for you. You just stayed in bed . When your little head is sick it is worse than when your cold was bad, and you couldn't eat, and the doctor came."

Teddy knew all about that, and was all ears.

"Christ is the Doctor of what we have in our heads"—and the old man tapped his forehead. "He will be here with the biggest best gift in all the world on Christmas Day."

The old man passed on and Teddy dropped his broom right in the middle of the sidewalk and ran in to ask his mother about it. What was Christmas and what was the gift? —Val Presto.

Brownie Snarls

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

DIVERTING the attention from the unpleasant, but necessary is often far more constructive than discipline. For instance, snarly hair must be brushed; snarls pull, and quite naturally the child is irritated and often unpleasant about the ordeal. Discipline can be enforced, of course, but the sulky feeling smolders inside. How much more constructive, then, to divert the attention in some happy way and banish the necessity for discipline.

ONTARIO HOUSE OPENING SET FOR FEBRUARY 2

Premier Ferguson Announces Date After Meeting of Cabinet.

ROSS TO OFFICIATE.

New Lieutenant-Governor Will Perform First Official Duties.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—The first session of Ontario's Seventeenth Legislature will open on Wednesday, Feb. 2. An announcement to this effect was made by Premier Ferguson last evening, following a two-hour Council with his Cabinet.

The February opening will mark one of the first official appearances of the new Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, W. D. Ross, who will succeed his Honor, Col. Harry Cockshutt, in office early next month. Mr. Ross, on this occasion, will execute the time-honored formality of delivering the Speech from the Throne. The identity of the House members who are to move and second the Address in reply will not be made known, it was learned from the Prime Minister, until after the first of the new year.

Last Year's Honors

Last year this honor fell to W. H. Bradburn of Peterborough, and to Dr. R. N. Berry of Haldimand. This year Premier Ferguson may, it is understood, invest two Westen Ontario representatives with the honor.

While the House opens a full week earlier this year than it did last, there is little doubt but that the inaugural ceremonies would have been held still earlier had not some necessary alterations to the Assembly chamber interfered. These alterations take the form of strengthening certain girder supports, and will not be completed until Jan. 15 at the earliest. The coming session, it is confidently felt will run considerably longer than did the last, which occupied less than eight weeks—and will have the Government's liquor control bill legislation as the most debatable matter in the business of the House.

The Chamber will bear a considerably changed appearance in point of members' personnel. Forty-five members of the last House will not attest to their presence this coming February. That is fact. Rumor has also something to say; and rumor would have Hon. Joseph Thompson, Speaker of the last House, with a Cabinet portfolio by the time the House sits, and either W. H. Ireland, Chief Conservative Whip, or W. D. Bleck of Addington in the Speaker's chair. All three men have disclaimed any knowledge of a possible change in their status in the Legislature, but the fact that the report persists would indicate seemingly, that it may not be striking so short of the mark after all.

Weights and measures appear to have been used in Egypt about one thousand years ago. Nothing known of any other age approaches the fine weighing of the eighth century.

FERDINAND GETS SALARY INCREASE

Parliament Votes Increase of $140,000 a Year to $200,000.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—King Ferdinand, who has a lot of doctors bills coming due soon on top of all the expenses incidental to Queen Marie's American tour, had his salary raised yesterday. Parliament increased his "civil list", which is the proper term for the king's pay, from the equivalent of $140,000 a year to $200,000. Crown Prince Michael, th young son of Prince Carol, who renounced his rights to the throne, had his allowance increased to $30-000. The civil list was voted in gold lei, so that there can be no depreciation by exchange.

Before adjourning, the senate voted the budget, amounting to 43,000,000 000 paper lei (about $215,-000,000) and a credit of 20,000,000 lei for restoration of the wing of the royal palace burned on December 7.

Parliament will reassemble January 20.

ARCTIC OWLS AROUND SAULT

Fierce With Hunger, They Will Attack Any Animal.

PORKY BEATS ONE.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 24.—Woodsmen of Algoma District and Chippewa County, Michigan, and, in fact, others living in and near the settled areas, are remarking on the large number of Arctic owls which infest the country. These huge killers from the north have been driven south owing to the extreme cold weather and scarcity of food during the past month, and are here in great numbers ready to attack any living thing in the bush that will afford a meal; in fact, animals which they would not approach under other circumstances.

Pete Vigeant of the Michigan Soo has already mounted four of these big birds this season for those who have shot them, and has refused many other requests. One of the birds shows that it got the worst of an encounter with a porcupine, and Vigeant, who took special pains with the specimen, regards it as one of the most remarkable he has seen during his entire residence in the North. The whole face of the owl and its legs and huge talons are one mass of porcupine quills, showing that the bird did not relinquish its attack on the animal, quite a bit larger than itself, until it was so full of quills that it was practically placed hors de combat. The bird must have been hunger-mad to continue its battle with the porky after the first quills penetrated is body.

ENGLAND HOPES DESPITE TRIALS

Clergyman Says She is Not Yet Down and Out.

STILL CHRISTIAN

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Great Britain has been going through a period of great trouble and disturbance. 'We've been on our faces,"—but she is by no mean down and out, and by no means hopeless of the future, declares the Rev. C. A. Studdert Kennedy rector of St. Edmunds in London, and chaplain to the king, who arrived here on Wednesday.

"The general strike in England was a triumph, there wasn't the slightest sign of revolution, but the coal strike has been a miserable protracted piece of folly with bad leadership on both sides and bad spirit. It has petered out now and settled nothing," he said.

Dr. Kennedy said he was one of the band of clergy, called "Bishops Terms", which tried to bring about peace in the miners' strike, but which was not able to accomplish much because of "untimely publicity thrown on their efforts.' He was confident, however, that their efforts made the working people realize that the church really cared for a just solution of the problem. "The heart of England is still as Christian as it can be," he said.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Special Service at St. James United Church Sunday Evening.

The evening service in St. James United Church will be devoted chiefly to Christmas music of a miscellaneous character.

Two anthems will be sung, "God From on High Hath Heard," by Edmund Turner, and "O, Come All Ye Faithful," arranged by V. Novello. The latter anthem is an especially attractive number in its varied solo and chorus work. It opens with a soprano solo followed by full chorus. This is followe by a duet, trio and quartette, alternately with chorus. Another attractive selection is "List! the Cherubic Host," a chorus for ladies, with soprano and bass obligato ,taken from A. R. Gaul's work, "The Holy City."

The balance of the musical service will consist of sols and a male quartette.

There will be no merger of the two distilleries, but they will be operated in conjunction with each other and their output will be considerably more than that of any other Canadian distillery. Eleven millions of the purchase price has been financed and the balance of four millions has been underwritten by a New York house and will be offered to the public early in the new year. CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 21, the hall at Stewart's Hall was well filled with a most appreciative audience. The concert was put on by the pupils of S.S. 10 Otonabee, and after the singing of the final chorus Santa Claus appeared on the roof and descended from an upper window to the platform. After a few remarks he unloaded the well-laden Christmas tree and distributed gifts to the children, who were dancing with joy, and their eyes were sparkling more than the tinsel on the Christmas tree.

The following programme was well rendered, it being difficult to say which child did the best, as each did his or her best:

Chorus by the School—1, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing"; 2, "Merry Christmas."

Recitation by Eddie Bonner.

Piano Solo by Helen Savigny.

The Doll Drill, by six small girls.

Recitation by Lillian Patterson.

Song—"Dear Little Stranger," by three girls.

Recitations by Hazel Bonner, Janie Sucie, Myrtle Dwyer, Corona Hanbidge, Ruth Driscoll.

Piano Solo—Barbara Dawson.

Dialogue—"The Lost Child."

Solo—"A Doll's Tea-Party," by Corona Hanbidge.

Recitations by Janie Sucee, Beth Stewart, Jean Savigny, Doris Savigny.

Chorus by the School, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear.'

Recitation by Mina Stewart.

Drill—The Christmas Bells.

Recitation by Max Stewart.

Violin Solo—Stewart Dawson.

Pantomime—"Newsboy Tim."

Piano Solo—Marion Patterson.

The Star Drill.

Violin Solo—Stewart Dawson.

A Short Talk from Rev. Mr. Richards.

Playlet, "Red Pepper."

Chorus by the School—"Christmas Time is Drawing Near."

Santa Claus arrived.

ZION SUNDAY SCHOOL.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Dec. 24.—The annual Christmas entertainment of the pupils of Zion Sabbath School, and the pupils of S. S. No. 2, was held in Sentinel hall on Monday evening and proved a huge success. The capacity of the hall was taxed to the utmost to hold the assembled crowd. The proceeds were nearly $39.00.

As is usual at these concerts the programme was of a high order and the interest of the crowd was maintained from the time that the Rev. C. O. Daniel announced the first number until the arrival of Santa Claus threw everything else into oblivion for the younger folks.

The pupils of the day school, coached by their teacher, Miss Nellie Bennett, showed to good advantage in choruses and recitations. The drills were exceptionally well executed and showed careful practice. A vocal solo by Miss Emma Bennett and a humorous monologue by Miss Gladys Petherick were well received. A number of dialogues and short plays evoked merriment as well as some serious thought.

The main event, a short play, "Christmas at Stebbin's," was well presented. Mr. Thomas Fry and Mrs Fred Barnum acted in a very true-to-life manner, as Mr. and Mrs. Raymond, a wealthy city couple storm-stayed for Christmas at the farm home of Pa and Ma Stebbins. Mr. Fred Barnum and Mrs. Harry Barnum; Mrs. John Simpson played the part of "Grandma' perfectly. Gladys Simpson and Gerald Barnum were the children of the house, and Master "Joey" ("Don Barnum") an orphan boy who finds real happiness when Mrs. Raymond proves to be his aunt, Jake, the hired boy ("Earl Fairman") was a scream, and at last succeeded in winning that "damsel," the hired girl (Miss Verna Barnum,) after several ludicrous episodes of love making.

Another dialogue, Mr. Hunter's Mistake, featuring Nellie Bennett, Gladys Simpson and Aylmer Petherick, with George Brunton, Elsie Forde, Gladys Petherick and Verna Barnum, showed a neat plan for defeating the purposes of a jealous husband.

To many the feature of the evening's programme was the one act minstrel show put on by the boys of Mr. Fred Barnum's class, with Mr. Barnum as interlocutor. Some of the sallies on local people drew forth thunderous applause.

The annual meeting of the Rylstone Cheese and Butter Company, was held at the factory on Saturday last with a good attendance. This is one of the largest factories in the district, having forty seven patrons.

No definite action was taken on the proposed project of the N.D.C. to establish a cold storage plant in Campbellford.

MISSIONARIES ON LONG TRIP

Have to Go Extra 1,000 Miles to Escape Chinese Armies.

MAKE BIG CIRCUIT

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—How several Canadian missionaries had to journey 1,250 miles by rail and steamer in ill-conditioned quarters, instead of the ordinary 250 miles, is told in a letter received from Rev. Harvey Grant, of Weihwei, Honan. The missionaries in attempting to return to their fields at the Honan Mission, were faced with the battle line between the northern and southern armies, which had been rapidly pushed northward. The soldiers had gone into winter quarters. The missionaries were forced to go south 100 miles to Hankow, thence 700 miles by steamer to Hanking, the east, 200 miles north to Hsuchowfu and then return westward, outflanking the armies.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"Come in here, Faith, I've got some thing to tell you." Bob Hathaway flung open the door against which Faith was leaning weakly, her hand pressed against her wildly leaping heart.

"What in the world is the matter, Bob? Don't cry like that, Cherry; you'll ruin your new dress," she added dully, feeling suddenly unable to cope with this new drama.

"Bob's been acting like a perfect fiend," Cherry sobbed, running toward Faith, her useless little hands held out in a childish, appealing gesture. "He's been accusing me of the most dreadful things, just because I told him I—I loved him. You knew I did, Faith. I told him, over and over. You wanted him to—to save me, didn't you? Oh, Faith, I wish I was dead!"

"You've said that over and over, too, and I'm sick of it!" Bob Hathaway turned on her savagely. "Now, you shut up and let me do the talking! Oh, how I'd like to give you a beating!" His hands clenched and unclenched, as if he could hardly restrain them from carrying out his wish.

"If you haven't gone absolutely stark crazy, both of you, I wish you'd get hold of yourselves and tell me just exactly what happened," Faith cried out sternly. "Where have you been?"

Cherry started to speak, but Faith laid a hand gently over her lips.

"Nothing would do her but that I should change into a Tux and take her over to the Marlboro Country Club. I'm a member. My cousin, Alexander Cluny, put me up last year. Said she wanted my uncle's family to see her with me, to see that she could act and dress and dance like a lady. Make a good impression on them before the papers come out tomorrow with the announcement of Uncle Ralph's engagement.

"She didn't have the decency to tell me beforehand that Miss Peabody, that old busybody, had already been here to worm what she could out of you, Faith. I didn't know any of the family had an inkling of Uncle Ralph's insane intentions. Though you'd be glad if I helped her out. She gave me to understand, without exactly saying so, that the whole stunt was your idea—"

"No, no," Faith shook her head, her eyes fixed in sick fascination upon his anger-distorted face.

"Well, she wheedled me and jollied me into doing it. I didn't see where it could do any real harm. Uncle Ralph knows I've gone around with Cherry, told me just the other day he wanted me to help him show her a good time. You didn't know that, weren't counting on it, when you hatched your bright little scheme, were you?" he demanded savagely of the cowering girl in Faith's arms.

"Faith, if you don't make him quit talking to me like that, I'll—I'll scratch his eyes out!" Cherry sobbed.

"I don't know what's happened, of course, Bob," Faith's voice was low and stern, "but I think you might remember that Cherry's my sister, and that you're hurting me as much as you're hurting her, by talking the way you are." In spite of her effort at self-control, her eyes filled with tears and her voice broke on the last words of her lame, inadequate sentence.

"All right! I apologize!" Bob Hathaway said grimly. "But let me tell you this—if you hadn't shielded Cherry all her life, from every painful consequence of her selfishness and folly, she wouldn't be in the mess she's in today." He drew a long breath, closed his hot, brilliant blue eyes for a moment, then went on more quietly:

"All the way out to the club she kept trying to get me into a sentimental mood. But that was all over for me, and I told her so. Well, we got to the club about half past nine, and found the regular Saturday night dance in full swing. My cousin Alice, Mrs. Allbright, Uncle Ralph's daughter, you know, was there with her daughter Muriel—she's seventeen—and her husband, Seymour Allbright. I introduced Cherry to them and I thought they acted awfully peculiar, but Uncle Ralph's name wasn't mentioned. Cherry danced with Seymour and I swear she tried to get him going, right under his wife's eyes!"

"That's a lie!" Cherry flashed out, her eyes blazing with anger. "Silly old fool! Tried to date me up and I just kidded him along, that's all!"

"Hush, Cherry! Is that what the whole rumpus is about?" Faith demanded scornfully of Bob Hathaway.

"Oh, Lord! I wish it was!" he groaned. "She only danced with one other chap besides Seymour—stuck to me like a burr, dancing as close as she could, smiling up at me with half-closed eyes, catching my hand when we left the dance floor—in short, giving a perfect impersonation of a love-sick flapper out with her boy friend. I was pretty sick, I can tell you, with Cousin Alice and Seymour and Muriel looking on and whispering every time we passed them.

"Finally, she seized my hand and led me off to the library, back of the ballroom. There was only one light on, in a reading lamp over in the far corner. There are several big leather chairs in the library, and when we went in it looked like there wasn't another soul there. Suddenly she flung her arms around my neck and kissed me with a smack loud enough to be heard all over the room. Oh, good Lord!" he pulled a handkerchief out of his breast pocket and swabbed at his brow. "I feel like an ass and a cad, telling on a girl like this, but somebody's got to tell you, Faith. And I won't let Cherry misrepresent the whole affair to you!"

"Go on!" Faith prodded him sharply. "What happened?"

"Well, before I knew what the little devil was up to, there she was snuggled up to me, cooing out something about giving me my answer now, and that it was 'yes'—oh, for the Lord's sake, shut up!" he swabbed at his brow again and turned furiously toward Cherry, who was sobbing louder than ever. "Well, right then up rose Cousin Alice. She'd been sitting in one of those big leather chairs, whose back was turned to us, and she smiled up to us, and put her arms around Cherry and said, sweet as honey, 'I knew there must be some terrible mistake! So it's Bob, after all, isn't it, my dear? Congratualtions'!"

"But —" Faith's arms dropped slowly from Cherry's clinging body, and her eyes were piteous with appeal as she turned to Bob Hathaway, "I'm afraid I don't understand. Why — what — Cherry, Bob, what does it all mean?"

WARKWORTH PAIR MARRIED 51 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Baker Pass Anniversary Quietly at Home.

NORHAM, Dec. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. William J. Baker, who live in Warkworth, a mile from here, and who celebrated their golden wedding on December 24, 1925, upon which occasion they were presented by their ten children, who were all present, with a complete electrical lighting system which the children installed in the home, on Friday passed the fifty-first milestone of their marriage very quietly at their own home. They are still in good health and continue to be interested in the prominent questions of the day.

Mr. Baker is a native of the village of Stirling but when he was nine years old his parents moved to Norham. Three years later they took up residence in Warkworth. When their son grew to manhood he went back to Norham where he established and operated for several years a carriage factory. Those were the days when all kinds of vehicles were made by hand, when the workmanship was of high standard and only the best material was used. There are still buggies, sleighs, and wagons in use in this vicinity that were made years ago in Mr. Baker's factory.

Mrs. Baker (nee Charlotte Taylor) was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Taylor of Port Hope. She and Mr. Baker were married by Rev. M. Sims, the Methodist minister at Norham, at the home of a relative of the bride on the Trent River road a short distance from Campbellford. The young couple lived for some years at Norham but when carriage making ceased to be a profitable business owing to the competition of the large factories in the cities, they moved back to Warkworth, which has ever since been their home. Here they have a farm of 93 acres, 30 of which is planted to fruit trees. Mr. Baker for several years brought eggs from and sold American coal oil to the farmers of the vicinity, but now although active as a man much younger he devotes all his time to work on his farm.

Mr. Baker was reeve of Percy Township for two years and for the same period of time he was deputy-reeve and yet he never sat in the County Council at Cobourg. His municipal service was rendered back in the '90's when the members of the council were known as commissioners instead of reeves and deputies.

For many years Mr. Baker was chairman of the School Board. For over 40 years he has been the church warden and for over 60 years a member of the Anglican choir, where he still takes an active part in musical services. His voice is equal to what it was in the days of his young manhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker raised a family of twelve children, ten of whom are living and holding good positions in the various communities in which they reside. They are: Malcolm J., a merchant in Hastings; T. G. in business in Campbellford; Mrs. Harold Wilson of Hastings; W. A., who is in the real estate business in Miami, in Florida; Mrs. (Rev.) Russell McGillivray, of Edmonton, Alberta, whose husband was formerly Presbyterian minister in Warkworth; Mrs. J. Muskgrove, of Corbyville; Miss Blanche at home; Wallace of the Warkworth telephone exchange; Mrs. George Baker, whose husband is a teacher in the Collegiate Institue in Picton; and Mrs. Blake Valleau, Rochester. Mrs. Charles Summery, a daughter, died two years ago last August, and Colin, the youngest son, was killed overseas.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

CAMPBELLFORD S. A.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24. — The Salvation Army Sunday School, under the leadership of Captain Wright and Lieut. Matthews, held their annual Christmas concert on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Army Citadel. There was a large attendance, and the school gave an excellent programme. Lieut. Matthews acted as chairman, and the following programme was given:

Recitation—Betty Bennett.
Chorus—The school.
Recitation — "Christmas Arithmetic," by six boys.
Recitation — "The Angel of Christmas," by M. Sinclair.
Dialogue—"Going to the Dentist," by Lieut. Matthews, Roy Clarke and Henry Rogers.
Christmas dialogue—Nine girls.
Recitation—Beatrice and Bernice Pickering, aged three years.
March and music—Campbellford Household Troupe Band, which proved to be rather a noisy, out-of-tune imitation of a band, using such instruments as saws, axes, hammers, etc.
Lantern drill—Fourteen girls. This was exceedingly well done. The girls wore Japanese kimonas and carried Japanese lighted lanterns, and with the spotlights from the gallery, the drill was very pretty. Mrs. Russell Ayrhart played the accompaniment.
Recitation—Henry Rogers.
Dialogue—"The Gift and the Giver."
Recitation—Martha Sinclair.
"Sally's Christmas"—A pantomime showing the sick mother, the small child (Lillian Pickering) wishing for Santa, but knowing he will not come to them, when the good fairy, a Salvation Army lady, (L. Robinson) appears, and on Christmas morning the child has all she wants and a doctor to see her sick mother.

Pageant — (1) Recitation by Lieut. Matthews. Different scenes show the shepherds watching their flocks, the appearance of the angels, and after following the star, coming to the stable where they found Mary and Joseph and the Babe in the manger; also the wisemen bringing their gifts. Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Bennett sang throughout the scenes, accompanied by Mrs. R. Ayrhart.

Recitation—Stella Lindsay.
Recitation—Willie Robinson.

At the end of the programme Santa Claus made his belated appearance, much to the delight of the children, and distributed many prizes and gifts and candies to all.

The large Christmas tree was nicely trimmed and lighted, and the hall was decorated with evergreen, streamers of red and green, tinsel and bells. Captain Wright and Lieut. Matthews are deserving of credit for their efforts.

HIAWATHA NEWS

HIAWATHA, Dec. 24.—Notice is given of the annual ratepayers' and trustees' meeting of S. S. No. 11, Otonabee, in the school-house, on Wednesday, Dec. 29, at 10.30 a.m.

To Mr. Ben. Taylor falls the honor of crossing Rice Lake the first of the season. He went over and returned about three o'clock on Saturday, Dec. 18. On Tuesday a car crossed from Harwood to Hiawatha. One of the guides tested the ice and its thickness varies from 6 to 12 inches in places. The high water and nearness of the mouth of the Otonabee River makes the crossing risky.

Mr. Parker Anderson is home for the holiday.

Mr. Dan. Muskratte visited at the manse recently.

Miss Laura Cowie, whose health is greatly improved, visited in Keene last week.

Mr. William Anderson's house is completed as far as can be done now. It seemed to grow very rapidly under the saw and hammer of Mr. Gainor and his assistant, Mr. Tucker.

Another rural mail box has been added to route No. 2 that serves Hiawatha from Keene. It was put on the post by Messrs. Egerton Loukes and Roy Emery on Saturday last for Rev. and Mrs. Garratt. The post was placed by Mr. Dan Cowie and his son, Robert.

Mr. Lorne Morrison, of Lakefield spent the week-end with friends here.

In Spain there are hills of salt 400 feet high.

A Gift that Increases in Value

Presentation Covers are provided for Christmas Gift Books.

WHAT DID YOU GIVE LAST CHRISTMAS? Toys for the kiddies—most of them broken by now. "Something useful" for the grown-ups—now worn out or forgotten. Cash to your employees—appreciated but soon spent. Other presents—hurriedly bought and perhaps ill-chosen. Are they remembered now?

Suppose this year you give them each a Bank Book containing an initial deposit, and urge them to add to it regularly. Could anything be more suitable?

Add "Royal Bank Pass Books" to your list of Christmas Gifts.

Merry Christmas!

WE Greet you this Christmas with the song the shepherds sang "Peace on Earth Good Will Among Men." Nothing that we might say could convey the real Christmas spirit as well, we also hope that you will have a very happy time and that there will be presents and all good things more than enough to go round.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CORN HOUSE

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"Daddicums, may I go with you?" asked Scooter, a little rabbit boy, as he saw his father and Uncle Wiggily go hopping down the path in front of the hollow stump bungalow one day. I don't mean that Scooter saw two rabbit gentleman hopping away. No, only one. For Uncle Wiggily was also his "Daddicums," as Scooter called the bunny.

"What's that? Come with me?" asked Uncle Wiggily, stopping so suddenly that he nearly bumped into his pink, twinkling nose which had run on ahead a little of him. "Why aren't you at school, Scooter?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Why, Daddicums!" laughed the small boy rabbit. "This is Christmas week! I guess you forget. There is no school!"

"Oh, surely enough, I did forget!" chuckled Mr. Longears. "And so you want to come with me?"

"If you please," spoke Scooter politely It is well to be polite Christmas week as well as the other fifty-one weeks of the year.

"Well," said Daddicums Uncle Wiggily slowly, "I am only going to look for adventure. I may find one and I may not. I may see something and I may not. The bad chaps may chase me and they may not. But, such as happens, or doesn't happen, Scooter, you are quite welcome to come along and it share with me, or not share it with me as may be."

"Oh, thank you!" said the bunny boy. And then he softly sang: "And we may see Santa Claus and we may not! Ho! Hi! Hum!"

But Uncle Wiggily was already hopping after his pink nose down the snow-covered path, and Scooter must hurry if he would not be left behind. Along and along hopped Uncle Wiggily. Along and along hopped Scooter, thinking of Santa Claus and Christmas Eve, and St. Nicholas and trees with gaily colored lights on them and stockings all bulging with whatever stockings bulge with and the like of that.

Over the fields and through the woods hopped the gentleman bunny and the little boy bunny, and, all of a sudden, when they had gone through a patch of woods, and had come out in a meadow where some corn had been growing, Uncle Wiggily whispered:

"We had better hide, Scooter! Oh, yes, we had better hide!"

"Hide, Daddicums?" asked Scooter.

"Hide, Scooter!" answered Uncle Wiggily. "We had better hide. Do you know a good place around here where we can hide, like a hollow tree or a hole in the ground?"

"We had better hide, Scooter!"

"I wonder why Daddicums wants to hide?" thought Scooter. "It must be because he sees Santa Claus coming and Santa Claus doesn't want to be seen until after Christmas. Yes, that's it!"

Uncle Wiggily continued to say:

"We had better hide, Scootie! Oh, yes, we had better hide!"

Then Scooter remembered something and he whispered:

"I know a good coopy hole, Daddicums! Down in the corer of this field is a little corn house. Tooter and I played in it yesterday. There is a shock of corn stalks standing in a corner near the fence. The corn house is like a little tent. We can hide in that!"

"Come on! Let's hide quickly!" said Uncle Wiggily, catching hold of the paw of his little boy rabbit. Clickity, clickity, clickity went their heels on the snowy ground and before you could say the multiplication table backward, Uncle Wiggily and Scooter were safely hidden in the house made of corn stalks stacked together like a little tent. Uncle Wiggily made a door hole in the corn house and pulled the dry stalks together again when he and Scooter were within.

The wind whistled about the corn house and rustled the dried tassels. Scooter was laughing softly.

"Why are you laughing, Scooter?" asked Daddicums Uncle Wiggily.

"To think how we fooled Santa Claus by hiding in the corn house," answered the little boy.

"Hoity, toity!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, looking carefully out through the stalks. "He's gone, now—but I didn't come here to hide from Santa Claus, little son!"

"Didn't you?" asked Scooter, in surprise.

"No," said Uncle Wiggily. "It was the Fuzzy Fox. I saw him spying after us across the field and I knew we must run and hide away from him and we did. He came like the wind, sniffing and snuffing around, but he didn't know we were in the corn house."

"And I'm glad he didn't," laughed Scooter, as he hopped home with his Daddicums. "But I thought we were hiding from Santa Claus." So you see sometimes it is best not to know everything. And if the long thin icicle doesn't crawl through the keyhole to sleep in the fireplace I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily in a dark hole.

CHRISTMAS CARDS, THEIR BEGINNING

The Christmas card is, comparatively speaking, a thing of yesterday. It was introduced in 1846, when Sir Henry Cole conveyed his Christmas greetings to his friends, on a card specially designed for him, by a well-known artist, John Horsley, R.A. The idea was developed by some Newcastle printers who prepared special cards and offered them for sale to the public in Dec, 1847, thus commencing a custom, to the growth of which, the Christmas mail-bags give eloquent testimony.

GROWERS LOST SAYS PROMOTER OF POULTRY FAIR

F. H. Buker of Dominion Department of Agriculture Makes Comment.

SALE A FAILURE

Producers Failed to Take Advantage of Opportunity, He Says.

F. H. Buker, District Poultry Promoter, Dominion Livestock Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has the following to say with reference to the dressed poultry sale held December 8th and 9th:

"There was a very discouraging showing indeed after all the work that had been done in preparation for something worth while. There was nothing left undone by the Executive. The Secretary was particularly active and untiring in his efforts. Expenses were only a secondary consideration, as thousands of the educational circulars were distributed. Government officers staged 'killing and plucking demonstrations.' The buyers were on the job and showed a hearty spirit of co-operation. Yet, the fact remains that Peterboro poultry sale was not a success. It would be hard to figure out just why this project did not meet with the hearty support of the producers in this particular district. Everyone else in connection with this enterprise worked hard for a success. The producers were in a position to gain the most, while doing the least, yet it seems that they were not prepared to do anything. It naturally follows that the producers will be the heaviest losers in not supporting a proposition that establishes the wholesale market in their own city, as evidenced by a few of the following facts:

Comparisons.

"Napanee sold approximately 128 tons in two days, December 2nd and 3rd. The actual cash paid to producers amounted to $79,350. This figured out at an average price for all poultry of 31c.

"Westport Poultry Fair, December 7th, 1926, 40 tons; cash through banks, $26,009.00. An average price for all poultry of slightly over 32.5c.

"Lyndhurst Poultry Fair, December 9th, 1926, 75 tons; cash through banks, $51,000.00.

"Athens Poultry Fair, held on December 10th, 1926, 37 tons; cash through banks, $22,000.00.

"These two fairs show a total of 112 tons or 224,000 lbs., with actual cash paid through banks of $73,000.00. This works out at an average of approximately 32.6c per lb.

"Peterboro Poultry Fair, December 8th and 9th, 5,300 lbs.; cash through banks, $1,480.00. This works out at an average of approximately 28c.

"Note.—Napanee average was 31c. Peterboro average was 28c, showing a loss to the producers of 3c on every pound. Napanee having 128 tons, or 256,000 pounds, were ahead by this 3c on each pound, making a total profit on the turnover of $7,680.00, over the Peterboro prices, and their fair was a week earlier and prices lower than at other fairs held at the same time as Peterboro.

"Let us take the other three fairs listed above.

"Westport, Dec. 7th, 40 tons, cash turnover $25,009.00; Lyndhurst, Dec. 9th, 75 tons, cash turnover $51,000.00; Athens, Dec. 10th, 37 tons, cash turnover $22,000.00. Total tons, 152; total cash turnover, $99,009.00.

"304,000 pounds and the average was slightly over 32.5c per pound. This shows a gain of at least 4 1-2c per pound over Peterboro prices, and would have resulted in a loss to the community of $13,680.00. However, they did not lose this, but instead, the producers tucked this extra amount in their jeans.

"Even on the small turnover at Peterboro of 5,300 pounds, this extra 4 1-2c would have netted them the sum of $238.00."

Prices Paid at Peterboro Sale.

Turkeys, 35c-40c, a few at 42c; geese, 18c-20c, a few at 22c; ducks, 22c-25c; chickens, 25c-28c, a few at 31c; fowl, 20c-25c.

Tonnage.

Approximately 5,250 pounds.

Buyers.

Lines Limited, Toronto; Harris Abbattoir, Toronto; Swift Canadian Co., Toronto; Canadian Packing Co., Toronto; Arnold Bros., Toronto; F. Wells & Son, Toronto.

Quality.

The quality was of a very good average, but not up to the standard offered at Napanee.

Cash.

$1,480.00 represented the cash turnover of sale. This would show an average price for all poultry of approximately 28c per pound.

FOWL SCARCE THIS MORNING

Prices Rather Higher on the Farmers' Market To-day.

TURKEYS 50 CENTS.

Very little fowl was offered on the farmers' market this morning, and prices were slightly higher than recent quotations. Turkeys were priced at 50c a pound, with chickens 35c and gees and ducks 30c. Butter was 45c a lb., and eggs 70 and 75c a dozen.

DOCTORS IN AUSTRALIA WILL FLY

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 23—Australia may be the first country in the world to inaugurate a flying service of physicians and dentists.

The National Commission on Health is considering a scheme by which airplane mail lines could help to bring rapid medical aid to any one dangerously ill in the remote bush areas.

The Australian Inland Mission of the League of Red Cross Societies is seeking to install a simple, standard type of wireless apparatus that may be worked effectively by the uninitiated in radio, so that aid may be signalled for.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

AN OLD THOUGHT

Upon a page a thought just now to write itself began,
And down the little road of white the busy pencil ran,
While eagerly I followed on, the newborn thought to scan.

So, mark by mark, and word by word, I watched the sentence grow,
And suddenly I saw it was a thought I used to know,
A thought that used to make me sigh in days of long ago.

It was the thought, the same old thought, a long-forgotten child,
That once had bade me bow my head, my heart unreconciled;
But now, when I beheld the thought, the thought looked up and smiled!

So, day by day, along life's road the little thoughts are born
That send us weeping on our way and lonely and forlorn;
So, day by day, the worries come and leave us tempest-torn.

But, on some day not very far, old worries we shall meet
And laugh to think they once could be a thorn to hurt our feet—
For all the sad, sad thoughts of old in time become the sweet.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1926

Venus, Mars and Uranus in adverse aspect rule this day, according to astrology, which finds it especially fortunate for seeking friends.

While the theatre and other places of amusement are subject to influences that are not stimulating there is promise of real pleasure in the home.

All the domestic joys are well directed under this planetary government and the receiving of gifts should be most auspicious.

There is a sign indicating that it will be easy to precipitate family misunderstandings and for that reason it is well to bear with the relative who knows every one's ages and can guess the price of every present she receives.

Food comes under a direction of the stars today that is read as most favorable to feasting.

Warning is given that Uranus is in a place making for the manifestation of greed and selfishness today and it is well not to perceive these faults even when they are most apparent.

As the young look forward to the new year they may be assured of great roles for themselves in events that are not far off, the seers prophesy.

Many artists are to develop in America, but inventors are to win the principal laurel leaves in 1927, it is prognosticated.

Home-building is to be one of the foremost concerns in the United States next year when the making of gardens will absorb much attention.

Fashions are to change radically before next Christmas, it is forecast, and there will be less use of cosmetics.

Beauty is to be worshipped as in the past, but the standards are to be different from those so long accepted.

Women are to return to the home with a new appreciation of their domestic privileges, the seers predict, and there will be a decrease in divorces.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of hard work in which there is much real happiness.

Children born on this day will be high-minded and spiritual in aspiration. They are likely to prefer the humble joys to the rewards of fame.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1926

Saturn is in benefic aspect today, according to astrology, while the Sun is adverse.

This is a day of promise to those who live by agriculture and they may be assured of benefits from sources that are unexpected.

Farmers are now subject to a sway that makes them inclined to push their demands for relief, but they are to profit from unusual market conditions, if the stars are read correctly.

This should be a rule of much benefit to mining interests and the sway now appears to presage special advantages in the coal trade.

It has been long predicted that the winter would be severe, but the prevalence of freak storms will add to its discomforts, astrologers again foretell.

This is read as a day for quiet family association and not favorable to mingling with persons of prominence.

Visits made to relatives likely to remember one in a will are likely to be most unlucky under this direction of the stars.

Much round the world travel is foretold and an American tourist party is to occupy much space in the newspapers, it is prophesied, because of extraordinary experiences.

Hospitality is to be more general even than usual all through the holidays and the first month of the year, astrologers predict.

Weddings are to be numerous and among them will be several uniting fortunes greater than any possessed by a prince and princess.

Return to distinctly feminine types of beauty will be noticed with the changing fashions.

The psychology of clothes and customs, stressed by occultists, has been demonstrated in recent years, according to astrologers, who welcome a return to less masculine modes.

Persons whose birthdate it is should beware of possible robbery in the coming year, which will bring many new experiences.

Children born on this day may be nervous and high-strung, but gifted and fortunate. They may be exacting regarding their food and raiment.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This set consisting of muff and beret is made of velvet elaborately painted and embroidered.

Queens and princesses seem to have a natural predilection for muffs. A few seasons ago word came from London that Queen Mary and the Princess Mary were both wearing muffs on occasions and furriers wondered whether this might start a revival of these cold-weather accessories. But apparently neither the English queen nor her daughter has the talent of the Prince of Wales in leading fashion by the nose. He may wear a light blue shirt and collar this week and within a month light blue shirts and collars are the fashion. He carries an umbrella in the streets of Paris and within a week the umbrella stores are doing a land-office business. It was not so when his mother and sister carried muffs. A few were sold in England in consequence. In Canada there was some slight demand for muffs—but in this country they were no nearer being revived than as if the queen had never thought of carrying one.

With Marie of Roumania it may be different. In other regards American women have already shown their willingness to take her as a leader of fashion. On more than one occasion in this country she carried a sable muff—a large muff almost square in shape. She wore this muff with a coat of cloth of gold with heavy border, collars and cuffs of sable. It was part of an elaborate luncheon ensemble.

One reason, they say, why the Roumanian queen likes to carry a muff is because she does not like to wear gloves. On her left hand she wears a glove but is apparently loathe to wear a glove on her right hand.

The muffs so far displayed have been of a rather elaborate nature, intended for formal afternoon wear. Once women wore them as a matter of necessity in cold weather but when they are worn now they are ornaments pure and simple.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Todays talismanic stone is the turquoise, which promises those who wear it on this day many love affairs and the power to attract the affection of others.

The coral is assigned as todays natal gem. If it is used as an amulet it will preserve the good health of its wearer, though it must be worn in such a manner that it touches the flesh. The owner of a coral can pass through terrible storms and traverse the seas in safety.

All shades of red are lucky today. The yellow tulips is the significant flower today.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

HER PERFECT KITCHEN

By Alma Whitaker.

Jessica is a super-housekeeper. And when their affairs prospered, Jessica attained her heartIs desire, a perfect kitchen. It is a housewife's dream of a kitchen.

It has the finest of linoleum on the floor, meticulously la'd. It is all painted snow-white, in the best enamel. The sink is composed of the best white tiling. The faucets are modern, shining, bright.

The kitchen table is the superlative best of its kind. There is a kitchen cabinet which is a gem of efficiency. The stove is all white, and boasts every modern improvement, every feature dear to a cook's heart.

It is the same with all he cooking utensils, her dishes, pots, pans, kettles, jars. All of the very best and shining clean.

But that superlative kitchen is wrecking the family happiness.

Because, you see, the small boy will forget and trot in on that wondrous linoleum with dirty shoes. Which promptly sends Jessica into hysterics. Farther will clean the car and come in with dirty hands and leave a mark on that snow-white paint. Which causes Jessica to yell at him and fuss for the rest of the day. And someone is sure to let something boil over on the stove, or splash the dishwater on the white enamel, or let something burn in one of those superior pots—the things that happen in every family. And any occurrence like that sends Jessica off into a frightful "mad" and turns the whole family into a turmoil.

Two kitchen disasters in one day send Jessica to bed with a nervous headache, and leave the whole family in disgrace and despair. No one, positively no one, gets any joy out of that adorable, superlative kitchen, not even Jessica.

Jessica has just gone to bed with another nervous headache. This time it is the worst ever. Because, you see, the small boy spilled his box of paints on that linoleum and then trod in it, and father, hearing Jessica scream, rushed in with dirty hands and left a complete facsimile of his wicked fingers on the kitchen door, and Aunt Maud arrived at the same moment in the midst of the uproar.

Now Aunt Maud is rather a dear. She started to say something soothing and Jessica flew at her. That made father mad and he called Jessica down. That made Jessica scream some more.

Aunt Maud is Jessica's sister, so she wasn't afraid of Jessica. And she told Jessica a few home truths.

And one thing she told her was that any woman who acted as she did about it, had no right to own a perfect kitchen or anything else. That, anyway, any kitchen that caused all that misery in a family was a disgrace and a shame. A lovely kitchen like that should make any woman sweet, happy, kind, charming. If it didn't, it was a punk kitchen. Jessica, she said, was doing everything to prove that she could not be trusted with a fine kitchen. Those accidents happened to every kitchen, but when it was a super-kitchen, it was very easy to clean it up and the only advantage of a super-kitchen was that it was easier to clean up after accidents. She said the whole family ought to pack up and leave Jessica alone with her super-kitchen. And father said "You bet" and remarked that he regretted he had ever given Jessica a perfect kitchen. He had thought it would make her happy when he did it, but instead it had become a family night-mare.

Jessica thinks she is going to die. But she won't, if she can't take her perfect kitchen with her.

THE SONG BY SERAPHS SUNG

From old St. John's grey ivied tower, the silvery chimes, at Christmas tide
Peal out upon the wintry air, in merry music, far and wide.
The Song first chanted by a host of Minstrels from the starry sky
Two thousand years ago, the song whose sweet refrain will never die.
Upon the city's grim turmoil and strife, the strains benison fall
Glory to God, Peace to the earth, Goodwill to men, Joy! Joy! to all
Their golden harps all rapturous ring, while the good news they haste to tell
How, to restore earth's blighted bliss, a Saviour comes—Emmanuel.

This happy morning, born to save and set His sinbound people free,
To open wide Salvation's gate, and give them life and liberty.
A Saviour, Who, our weakness knows, and our infirmities can feel
And in infinite pity comes, the broken heart to bind and heal.
To bid the blind receive their sight, the lame to leap, the deaf to hear;
To soothe the sufferers bed of pain, and wipe away the mourners' tears
A Shepherd come to seek and save His sheep far wandering from the fold
And shelter in His tender arms, the lambs, from beating blast and cold.

A glorious Light, arisen to shine, effulgent on the world's deep gloom
And brightens all the path we tread, e'en from the cradle to the tomb.
The Son of God, Heir to a throne, and Heaven's eternal diadem
Put by His glory and came down, a helpless Babe, to Bethlehem;
While angels from fair realms above, the glad Evanget sweetly spread
The Saviour of the world is laid among dumb kine, in manger bed,
Then let us our devotions pay to Him Who came—great joy to bring;
Haste to His temple Courts with gifts and offerings for our wondrous King.

That Heavenly Song has virtue still to solace aching hearts oppress
To shed sweet balm on every sore and sorrow of the troubled breast
From neighboring heights, the tuneful chimes ring out their greetings far and near
A merry Christmas, be to all, and the very best of Yuletide cheer.
Glory to God in Heaven on high, seems every tone, with Joy elate
Goodwill to every soul who finds a home within our City's Gate.
Happy be every heart to-day, and every home with plenty blest
And with you at the mirthful board, may Jesus sit, an honored Guest.

Four Christmases - - Perfect, Quiet, Merry, Surprising

aroline's Perfect Christmas

(By Clarissa Mackie.)

CHRISTMAS morning dawned cold and clear. Over field and farmhouse and winding roads, was a snowy blanket.

"Good Christmas weather!" said Jared Pigeon, as he stamped in from the post office, and thumped a bundle of letters on the kitchen table. He was regarding his wife from a watchful eye, for he had noted a letter from Caroline, their daughter, who worked in New York City. Why should Caroline write if she was coming home for Christmas?

Jared Pigeon coughed sharply and went out to his car to bring in the Christmas packages. He saw his wife's pretty, wrinkled face bent over a long letter in Caroline's handwriting, as he closed the door. Of course it was natural for their only child to desire other friends—and it would be pokey indeed to come home to eat Christmas dinner with two old people! And there was Billy, Wakeman, too, she used to go around with Billy, and now they had quarreled and Billy was very grave and grown-up in the conduct of his public garage. He had a good mind to go down and ask Billy to come and eat Christmas dinner with them—Billy had no folks of his own.

Forgetting all about the Christmas packages in the back of his sleigh—Mr. Pigeon jumped in and, turning around in the hard way he had dug out of the snow, went tingling out of the yard and down the road toward the large garage and oil and gas station that Billy Wakeman had built on the main road.

"Hello, Mr. Pigeon," said Billy. "Merry Christmas!"

"Same to you," returned Jared Pigeon, "I came over after you, Billy Wakeman."

"What can I do for you?" asked Billy.

"Come and eat dinner with ma and me—I kinder expect Caroline ain't coming down."

"Thank you," said Billy, getting very red, and then pale.

"Come when you like, so's you get there before one o'clock," grinned Jared, wishing he knew some girl he could ask to share the dinner with Billy; but he couldn't remember anybody just then, and drove home.

"Well, Jared Pigeon!" exclaimed his wife, coming to the back door as he came in with his delayed packages, "where have you been—leaving me with this news about Caroline——"

"Don't get excited, Phoebe," protested her husband, dumping the packages on the floor and closing the kitchen door, "I know it's terrible that Caroline can't come home this Christmas, but you know what young folks are these days—but cheer up, I've met Billy Wakeman, coming along here one o'clock, I told him. If you think of any girl I can ask so there'll be four of us, mother——"

Mrs. Pigeon smiled sedately. "Land sakes, Jared, Caroline's the only girl I can think of," she said, "and now, with company, we've got to get busy—we must have a fire on the dining-room earth, Pa—with the coal burner in the sitting room and this big kitchen stove that heats up wonderfully."

It was a busy morning in the Pigeon house that Christmas day. All the Christmas packages were put in the parlor under the little hemlock tree which Mr. Pigeon had cut down in the back pasture, for Caroline had always had a Christmas tree.

Pretty soon, the turkey, browning in the oven, added another delicious odor to the Christmas joys, and Mother Pigeon, running up and downstairs was very busy, setting the table with all the best china and silver while her husband attended to his stock and the poultry out of doors. If Mr. Pigeon had been within the house—if he had gone upstairs—surely he would have noticed that there was a delicious warmth up there in Caroline's room, where the floor register into the parlor was wide open!

Then, when everything was almost ready, when Mrs. Pigeon in her best black silk, and a new cap with a tiny violet bow on her lovely white hair, was entertaining Billy Wakeman, just as a mother cares for her own loved son, just before it was time to sit down to that delicious dinner, mysteriously set for four people—though Mr. Pigeon knew mother always set a place for Caroline, anyway—just then they heard the horn of the village stage on its way from the noon train at the railroad station.

"It's stopping here!" yelled Mr. Pigeon, rushing to the side door, and in a moment a lovely, laughing girl was throwing off her furs among them, not seeing Billy Wakeman at first, where he stood white and tense. Then, she saw him, and a wonderful look came into her face—"Billy!" she whispered, "you here? Oh, this makes it perfect!"

Billy Wakeman held out his arms and Caroline went into them like a homing bird.

Mrs. Pigeon drew her husband into the kitchen and closed the door. "Jared," she said, "you took it for granted this morning that Caroline wasn't coming home—but she is here! She said she was tired of the city, and that she would find something to do in town. I knew her heart was breaking for Billy—you did a wonderful thing to ask him ——" The old people stood there hand in hand, smiling happily, waiting for that dining-room door to open and reveal Caroline and her chosen mate, reunited at last.

Santa Arrives

(By Examiner Correspondent).

I WAS in Toronto city, the Saturday before Christmas, and Santa Claus was coming on the train due at North Toronto station at 10:30 a.m. The day was ideal, a touch of frost in the air, which made it most invigorating, the sun seemed to shine brighter than usual and made the snow look like sparkling diamonds. The train arrived on time and Santa Claus, who was greeted by many hundreds of big children and tiny tots who lined the sidewalk all along the route of the procession, was almost the first one to reach the platform and with more toys than you could ever count in all your life.

Santa looked so happy, with a beard like a fleecy cloud and fat cheeks as red as rare roast beef. His suit looked new, bright red red trimmed with white fur, and his long-legged boots made a triumphant entry to Toronto, coming direct from the North Pole. Santa was welcomed in most enthusiastic fashion and a big reception was to be held in Massey Hall in the afternoon from 2 p.m. till 4 p.m.

The procession was headed with the Queen's Own band, whose music sent a thrill of Christmas spirit ringing through the air; next were the wooden soldiers; some of them were enormous, others looked exactly like toy soldiers, and marched all the way in the procession. A funny group of clowns followed with the most amazing giants more than twice as tall as your own daddy. Oh, yes, and a huge Felix the Cat and Jack-in-the-box. Then came Cinderella in her gilded coach just as lovely as ever. It must be lovely to be Cinderella and drive in Santa's procession. After more clowns and another band and outriders comes our beloved Santa Claus and his reindeers, and they were real live reindeers that were pulling the sleigh with its jingling bells and pack of toys, while Santa was busy waving to all the little girls and boys along the street. Never did Toronto citizens witness any more excitement from so many children.

Long before the doors of Massey Hall were opened, the streets were crowded with people of all ages. Very soon the huge auditorium was packed to capacity. Every adult was to be admitted by ticket and no child was to be admitted unless accompanied by a guardian. Miss Jones was one of the crowd having a ticket, but no children. She was refused admittance, but took the refusal cheerfully and in a few seconds returned with seven little boys ranging from the age of 8 to 11 years. Miss Jones felt quite proud and happy with her adopted family for the afternoon, and soon all were comfortably seated and didn't miss any of the performances.

First on the programme was a Christmas carol, sung by over one hundred voices; they were all girls and looked like angels to the audience as there was a gauzy curtain that hung before them. Then the clowns, Jack and Jill, Simple Simon, Bah, Bah, Black Sheep, Tom the Piper's Son, Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater with a monster pumpkin; every little while the cow would jump over the moon, and the cat was in the fiddle and away ran the dish with the spoon; and some one else you all have heard of is the old woman in the shoe with all her naughty children. But such a shoe so large that the children were jumping in and out pulling the shoelaces and doing all sorts of funny stunts. Noah's Ark was there, too, with all the wooden animals walking around it. One of the funniest things of all was the monster Tigerwoozlephish, like a long wriggly caterpillar with a face like Felix the Cat. He is such a good-natured fellow and very kind to everyone. The funny fat policeman on roller skates was a perfect scream. He had many a fall and tumble by being tripped by the clowns.

Alas, everything was in darkness and silence. The choir of girls sang softly another Christmas carol when a host of fairies came from every hole and corner and danced with glee around the stage; a few colored footlights made them look all colors. At a distance, one could see the big full moon rising beyond the hills and above the trees. Hark, everything seemed so still for a few seconds. Sleighbells were heard a long, long way off, but gradually coming nearer and nearer.

"Santa is coming!" shouted one little chap in the audience, and sure enough we could see him coming. The Christmas bells were ringing and, oh, what a joy broke forth in every heart. Santa has come and in only a few minutes he was on the housetop and down the chimney into a beautiful room where Willie and Jane had long before hung up their stockings and went to bed. Santa told his large audience about his trip and made them roar with laughter. He sorted over his pack of toys and gifts and got busy to fill up the stockings and oh! what lovely things he left for Willie and Jane. They had been good, so Santa knew and was good to them. Santa then bid goodnight to his host of friends and away he went up over the hills with his sleigh and reindeers.

* * * * * *

Miss Jones learned something that beautiful afternoon and thanked her God for the opportunity of making some one else happy. One of her little friends, whom she took off the street to see Santa, told her he was from the country and was up before daybreak to get down town in time to see Santa. The little chap was in tears, when Miss Jones found him, as he said: "That big old bear of a man won't let me in because I ain't got a big person with me." His case was soon changed and his bright face was a picture of its own as Miss Jones reached him in time to change the tears into smiles. Another of Miss Jones' new-made friends, whose name we will call Dave Walker, poor little Dave with his face smeared with crying, told a very pitiful story of his home that made Miss Jones very much interested. His father had been sick in bed for months, his mother hardly able to do the work, suffering from rheumatism, and had told Dave that Santa would not come to their house this Christmas. The sad thoughts made him cry as though his heart would break when he didn't have a chance to speak to Santa and to ask him why he wouldn't come to his house. Miss Jones consoled Dave by saying she would see Santa and find out, so taking down the little boy's address bid him good-bye and that she would see him soon.

Miss Jones was a business girl and, nearing Christmas, was rushed for time to devote to other people's wants, but, however, she did not forget Dave or her promise to him. On Christmas morning she was up early, and oh, what a glorious day it was; the sun was so bright, the air so clear and frosty; it seems we have never had one like it since. The churchbells were ringing out their Christmas music and all things seemed so happy. Miss Jones was busy arranging her many parcels and preparing to go to friends for dinner, for she had no home in the big city. However, about 11 a.m., Miss Jones and her friend made a visit to see little Dave. They found the house in the down-town district and its shabby appearance on the outside and similar within.

The found Dave, his little sister Maggie and his parents huddled around the stove which had scarcely enough fuel to give any heat. It was a pitiful and hard task for Miss Jones to enter a strange place and meet people under such circumstances. After a short conversation, Miss Jones was told that the children had been crying because Santa Claus didn't come. His mother said they would not have minded only Dave saw Santa at Massey Hall on Saturday and he is so disappointed. Miss Jones informed them that Santa was too busy to call during the night and had left a few things for her to give them. With this she handed Dave a parcel. It was a train of cars and a big round track, and to little Maggie was a beautiful doll that would open and shut its eyes and wore a pretty pink dress trimmed with lace. Besides, these, Santa had sent a pair of woollen stockings to each, and candies, nuts, oranges and apples.

The two children stood almost bewildered while the mother, very pale and thin, wiped away the tears that were rolling down her cheeks. The father sat speechless for a time but finally said very quietly: "Surely God has been watching when He sent these beautiful things with Santa Claus.' On further investigation, Miss Jones' learned why this family were suffering such poverty and also of the scanty Christmas dinner that was in store for the. It was only a dozen of buns and a quarter pound of butter. It was a pitiful sight for such a beautiful Christmas day. This was a family in need, yet their inward pride was too great to be let known to the city authorities.

"They must have a Christmas dinner," said Miss Jones, after coming out on the street. It was soon ordered and, giving the address, it was delivered in time for Dave and Maggie, with their sickly parents, to enjoy something they least expected—a wonderful Christmas dinner of roast turkey, cranberry sauce, vegetables, bread and butter, a big plum pudding with all the trimmings, and two quarts of milk. Miss Jones was not in the house to witness the reception but a few days later had her heart filled to overflowing with thankful words and praising God for His goodness. The third day after Christmas a ton of coal and a box of groceries were taken to the same address, donated by a large firm in the city.

When the cold bleak winds blew through the cracks in the doors and around the walls, Dave and Maggie were quite happy playing with their toys that Miss Jones brought from Santa Claus. Gradually the father grew stronger and in the spring was able to work; the mother, too, recovered and many a time has said: "What ever would have become of us had Dave never went to see Santa Claus?"

We love to give at Christmas because so much has been given to us by our Heavenly Father.

KATE'S QUIET CHRISTMA

(By Jane Osborn.)

KATE YARROW had heard various neighbors remark that she would be an old woman before her time so often that she was beginning already to think of herself as quite middle aged. As a matter of fact, she was not quite twenty-three and the full day she put in as mistress of the Yarrow household had not seemed to turn her hair gray on her cheek wan.

Sometimes since she had had to take her mother's place in the home it did seem to Kate as if she was imposed upon, but of course she blamed no one. Her father was generous enough with the money. There was Martie in the kitchen and old Sam to do outside work but five inconsiderate younger brothers and sisters, a preoccupied father and a grumbling grandfather made a household that required much supervision. For the last two Christmases it seemed to Kate as if there had been really no Christmas for her at all.

But everything was going to be different this year. The brothers now in boarding school or college, had accepted invitations to spend the holidays with roommates, one sister had gone to visit an aunt and another had gone South with the exacting but youthful grandfather, and Kate's father had gone to pass the festive season with a thoroughly capable widow who, it had been whispered, he was considering as a possible second wife.

With the family thus disposed of Kate permitted Martie and Sam to take a two-day vacation. Perhaps it didn't seem very Christmassy to pass the day alone—but it would be restful. And Kate assured herself that she wasn't in the least afraid. She wouldn't bother with any cooking—just have plenty of apples and milk and bread and butter and bacon in the house and she could make good substantial meals without much trouble.

As soon as she had seen the last of the various departing members of her family fading down the driveway toward the country highroad on the morning before Christmas, she went into the capacious living-room and with one rather undignified leap planted herself in a sprawling position in the middle of the large divan. Everyone but Kate sprawled on that divan. But Kate never had had time. Now she would begin her Christmas holidays by sprawling upon it for hours reading. Before dinner-time she had donned her best red evening frock and over this her smock and was going down into the kitchen trying to keep from admitting even to herself that she felt rather lonely in the old house. Then it was that she heard loud rappings on the old brass knocker. She went to the door and opened it rather timidly.

But her timidity vanished and something like annoyance took its place when she beheld her brother Tom at the door. Tom was two years older than Kate and had started off in the morning ostensibly to pass the holidays with a group of bachelor friends of his who found the usual sort of family Christmas celebrations tiresome. And here was Tom—Tom and five young men. They were heavily laden—turkey feet protruded from one of the bundles.

"Well, we got to talking it over," said Tom, "and we decided Christmas at a club would be a frost. So I asked the fellows to come here with me. I was afraid you wouldn't have things for the feast so we stopped and got what we thought you'd want. Bill here even got mistletoe, though I told him there'd be no pretty girls." Then turning to one of the young men whom Kate had never met the tactless brother went on, "Bill, this is my sister—now I'll run along and get the car in the garage for the night, and, sis, you might take the fellows up and show 'em where you want to have 'em sleep."

Bill alone of all the young bachelors noted the look of disappointment on Kate's face. Later after she had got ready the impromptu Christmas eve supper and laid aside her smock, sitting there at the head of the table she heard Bill say: "I thought Tom said there would be no pretty girls here. Here, boys, let's drink a toast in cider to Sister Kate. Can't imagine a girl being prettier ——"

"Oh, well," said Tom, "she doesn't always look like that. Goodness knows why she dolled up when she thought she'd be alone." But Kate did not explain. Instead she looked at Bill, her champion, and there was a look of mute gratitude and appreciation in her eyes as they rested on his rather serious face.

It was past midnight that night when Kate left the kitchen. The boys had helped with the dishes because Bill had ordered them to do so, but there were pies and puddings to make for the next day and Kate knew she would have her hands full. She was up early to prepare a festive breakfast. All day she worked in the kitchen.

It was late that night when she had finished the last work in the kitchen. As she passed through the hall, Bill stood waiting for her. There above them hung the mistletoe—and Bill did not neglect his privilege.

"It isn't just because of the mistletoe," he told Kate, holding her still close to him. "I have loved you ever since I first saw you. It has been outrageous for us to impose on you this way."

"But it has all been worth while," said Kate, and then rather timidly, "because I have made myself believe that I was doing it all for you."

And the next Christmas Kate and Bill had a Christmas just for two.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Winnifred's Merry Christmas

(By Ruby Douglas.)

WINNIFRED had become more or less successful in her profession as an interior decorator but as the holidays approached she found very little to do. All the fall work had been completed and her patrons were loath to have their homes upset over Christmas.

She was idly turning over the pages of a trade magazine when she heard the postman's shrill whistle in the hall below. Mail was always exciting to Winnifred and she ran down the stairs of the studio building in a gaily expectant mood.

An envelope protruded from the box which bore her name. It was of heavy mauve paper, addressed in violet ink and bearing a silly three-cent stamp.

"No one in the world but Aunt Lou would be so extravagant as to squander an extra cent on each stamp just for a color effect on a mere envelope," she decided, taking the letter upstairs.

Her Aunt Lou was her mother's one wealthy sister. "Our plush relation," they had always called her at home. The families had had little in common since the wealthier branch spent money in what the others considered a rather vulgar fashion and without much taste.

The gist of the letter was that Aunt Lou wanted Winnifred to spend the holidays at Roslyn with her. "We are having a tremendous Christmas tree in the center of our lake this year and I know of no one who could so effectively trim it as you. For exterior decorating can't be so very different from interior decorating and we want the tree to be a marvel in the community. We are having it placed now."

Winnifred accepted.

Roslyn was an old-fashioned Long Island village, charmingly located and she knew the house he aunt had bought, one side on the harbor, the other on this tiny but beautiful little lake.

It was four days before Christmas and on the following morning after talking over plans with her Aunt Lou in the latter's gold and blue boudoir, every corner of which screamed out at Winnifred, she began to get busy on the work of decorating the tree.

"I have asked the electrician to send you three of his best men and Porter will take you to town to select anything else you like that this man may not have. I know it will be a gorgeous tree," said her aunt.

But Winnifred had quite entered into the spirit of the occasion and nothing disturbed her after she began work.

Hundreds of lights and waterproof ornaments made up the trimmings that were to adorn the lovely tree in the center of the lake. The water was slightly frozen and it was an adventure to reach the small island on which the tree had been placed. Escorted by the best-looking young electrician she had ever beheld, Winnifred felt that this was going to be anything but a dull Christmas.

She stood, done up in furs her aunt had insisted on giving her, placing each ornament and light with a gifted knowledge of where it would be most effective. Three men clambered about at her bidding and the quartette of young folks had a merry game.

At dusk, when they tested the lights, Winnifred stood in the boat and looked at it. "It is wonderful," she cried.

"It's the most beautiful thing I ever looked at," agreed George Sampson, but he was not looking at the tree.

"If it only snows to-morrow so that as folks pass on Christmas Eve, as they will in scores, along this shore road, it will be like a dream tree shining through the white flakes!" She was lost in the thrill of having helped to create anything so lovely. Perhaps the Christmas spirit was creeping over her and—it might have been the inspiration of a companionable mind.

George Sampson told her, while he worked, that he had done odd jobs during holidays home from college, for this electrical contractor for years. He had not intended to do anything this season but the man had told him he needed him for this particular job and —here he was.

"And I came on quite unexpectedly. I was almost lonely when Aunt Lou's letter came asking me to come and do this tree for her," Winnifred said.

Christmas Eve found these two out on the island together putting a last touch or two to the tree. The barometer was falling and there was every prospect of a white Christmas.

"You won't need me to-morrow—unless something goes wrong?" George was saying.

Winnifred shook her head. "No—you have done—so much," she said.

He looked at her quickly. He wondered if she knew how much she, too, had done.

After that, Winnifred took him back to the house.

"If it snows to-night," she said, "you had better come—if you don't mind working on Christmas day—to see if the lights are all right."

"I'll go home and pray for snow on my bended knees," said George.

And Aunt Lou, having a human moment and having had her eyes opened invited the young man to come to see them on Christmas night—snow or no snow!

Winnifred returned to her studio the following week without her heart. But she was not unhappy and her decision was that it had been her very merriest Christmas.

Are you frightened I will miss you,
That I shall forget to kiss you?
Is that why you're standing so,
Wistful 'neath the mistletoe?
Sweet Matilda, don't you know
Standing 'neath the mistletoe
Is — well, hardly necessary
And, besides, the dark hall's very
Much more private, don't you know,
So — well, why the mistletoe?

Christmas!

By F. H. BARNARD

(Examiner Correspondent).

THERE is no season during the year that sends such a wonderful thrill through the hearts and souls of our boys and girls, and, in fact, through the hearts of our older folks too, as the merry Christmas season does. Frequently the question arises, especially in our Sunday school classes, which season of the year impresses us the most, the Easter season, or Chrsitmas? And owing to the fact that Easter commemorates the resurrection of our Saviour, it is quite natural that we are apt to be deeply touched by the coming of Easter. But even mentioning the word Christmas affects us in quite a different manner. The Bible tells us there was great rejoicing at the time of our Saviour's birth, and up to the present time Christmas, of all times in the year, seems to transform our entire being. It causes the majority of people to be open hearted and to forget the grouchy side of life, and, like "Scrooge's Christmas," discover as Scrooge did, that there is great happiness to be gained in making others happy by sending them even small gifts and Christmas cheer.

The mere thought of Christmas Eve, with the tiny stockings hung around the bright fireplace, of the tiny tots fast asleep in their little beds awaiting the arrival of St. Nicholas with his prancing reindeers and dreaming all sorts of pleasant dreams, of the Christmas tree in the corner laden with gifts which will not only make the little child's heart bound with delight, but will also make the hearts of the older members of the household glad that it is a season of great rejoicing. Then there is the thought of the fat goose or turkey in the roasting pan awaiting the wonderful Christmas dinners, and last, but not least, the rich fruit pudding, to which we always feel that we can never do full justice owing to having eaten too many other goodies previously, and having no space left for even the splendid pudding. All of these pleasant thoughts, along with many others, have a tendency to give us that thrill which no other season of the year affords.

The family gatherings, which are to so many a yearly event, are something that are looked ahead to by many. The entire family gathers at the home of grandfather and grandmother, and there it is always such a wonderful day for all who are still young at heart. The good fellowship and sociable side of the family is seen as they are once again united for a day together. The perfectly glorious meals, skating on the pond, the splendid coasting upon the old hillside, while on Christmas night there is usually the old-fashioned dance, where grandmother and grandfather look on with delight, watching their children and grandchildren enjoying themselves to their utmost until the light in the old folks' eyes makes them look almost young again. Or, perhaps there is the school concert down in the little red schoolhouse to attend, and how happy are the faces of those boys and girls as they do their best to keep the audience entertained by acting their parts in the program well.

It is the one time of year when we can feel the spirit of the season in our souls and bodies for weeks before, and what a difficult task the teachers find it to keep the minds of the children upon their work and away from the pleasant thoughts of the Yuletide.

It has been truthfully stated that Christmas is a time of great rejoicing, when we have the true spirit of giving and know that it is more gracious to give than to receive.

Elizabeth's Surprise Christmas

(By H. Louis Raybold.)

"THAT will do, thank you, Elise," and Elizabeth dismissed her maid with a smile. It was her custom each Christmas to entertain whatever guest the Charities sent to her, without Elise's help. It made for a greater ease on the part of both entertainer and entertained.

When Elise had gone out, Elizabeth threw a final, satisfied glance at the shining table and walked over to the window to gaze through the chints draperies to the street below. Half the fun of the occasion always lay in these few minutes when she waited and speculated as to just what sort of person would presently appear.

Once it had been a down-and-out ex-missionary well along in years, once a lonely girl from the West, and several times thin little waifs from the tenements. On those latter occasions Elizabeth had been glad of the fragrant tree which always stood in one corner of the apartment, alight with colored bulbs and hung with varied gifts.

There was no one in sight now—wait, wasn't that someone just turned the corner?

A moment later the bell rang and if, when she ran down the stairs and answered it, Elizabeth was decidedly taken back at the young man who stood before her, it is probable that he, too, had his moment of surprise as he gazed at the slender vision in a white dress.

"Miss Lowry, of the Charities sent me—" he began.

"Oh, yes," nodded Elizabeth quickly. She mustn't let him think for an instant she had hesitated. She had absolute confidence in anyone Miss Lowry, head of the Board, might send. "Won't you please come right upstairs? Everything is just exactly ready. Hang your coat and hat on the costumer at the head of the stairs. And, let me see, your name ——"

Still the young man seemed a bit uncertain. Then, "Drake Gibson," he said, resolutely and abruptly.

Elizabeth breathed an unconscious sigh of relief, as she preceded him up the carpeted stairs. After the first embarrassing moments, she had always found that things went more easily.

Yet it was hard to believe, during the meal which followed, that her guest was the sort of down-and-outer with which the Charities were wont to deal.

Elizabeth, noticing his faultless clothes, decided that he had been the recipient of some gift donated by one of the organization's wealthy patrons. But she could not account in any similar way for his excellent table manners, his careful English, his assured poise generally.

He talked interestingly and entertainingly and before she realized it, dinner was at an end and there remained as part of the festivities only the ceremony of choosing gifts from the tree.

Each year Elizabeth made a wide choice of presents, but it is not to be wondered at that there was not much suitable for a young man.

She had rather decided to pass that part of the entertainment up when she remembered that she had hidden in a red cheesecloth stocking filled with candy a tiny purse with a five-dollar goldpiece in it. Nor was she to be blamed for supposing that a gift of money so tactfully presented would not be amiss to anyone willing to accept a dinner from an utter stranger.

Also, the idea was that the money would not be discovered until the recipient had reached his home.

So, in her winning manner, Elizabeth suggested that they each choose a gift from the tree, and laughed when he carefully untied a little furry monkey.

"Reminds me of one I saw in Java," he said carelessly.

"Java!" Had she drawn another ex-missionary?

Then she took down the stocking full of old-fashioned Christmas candy.

"At a proper tree there is always something to take home," she said.

He smiled and accepted it. Then, to her horror, drew out his knife and cut the red string at the top.

"Have some?" he invited.

"No—that is—yes, thank you," she said in confusion, and watched him eat several pieces rather absent-mindedly. He seemed to be considering something, and once or twice she thought he started to speak.

Then he pulled out the tiny purse and, with a frown, opened it.

Strangely enough, she saw no sudden blush or sign of self-consciousness. Rather he seemed almost relieved.

"This means that I must tell you," he said gravely. "And I'm very much ashamed of myself. You see, I've accepted your hospitality under false pretences. I'm—well, I'm only Miss Lowry's nephew home from globe trotting for my paper. She asked me to stop and tell you that the old lady she was going to send to your annual Christmas dinner had not shown up. You made the mistake of thinking I was the one and—oh, I've no proper apology but you know a fool reporter never turns down an experience of any kind. And then an hour or two of this sort of thing after three years' wandering seemed too wonderful to miss." He paused and regarded her so wistfully that Elizabeth's anger melted. After all, it was Christmas time when one should be forgiving.

"I'll promise never, never to do it again!" he said with such an air of little-boyishness that Elizabeth laughed in spite of herself.

Neither one of them realized then that all their Christmases were to be spent together.

Home for Christmas - - - By Jeanette

Sketches from Life at the Peterborough Station

In the first place, anyone would know that a man drew this picture. Look at the shoes on these women. Jewelled effects and four-inch spike heels and where, I ask you, are their goloshes? Everyone knows that goloshes, even though extremely ugly, are fashionable, and therefore are worn by every member of the feminine population, whether belonging to the four hundred section of society or to the nether stratas.

But if a man was the artist, why the "loud speaker" pants on the male members? Do men, when they are going home for a holiday, express their jovial feelings by indulging in striped and plaid trousers? It would seem so.

Of course, the "in-law" lady hasn't very high heels. Hers are a bit run over. She is the sort of dame who spends a lot of time in embroidering red silk roses for her hand-bag and lets her heels run down. She has a long skirt on too. Evidently, she is a vinegary woman, whose existence has been soured by inability to land a male provider, and her feet hurt her. She wants to ride in an automobile, and get that much at least out of life and out of an unfortunate male relative. She will spend her Christmas holiday in retailing the gossip of the town and criticizing her neighbors.

There is an air of brisk camaraderie about the greeting of the sister and her brother. He is a comfortable man of breadth, with nice wide feet that will be worn directly in the middle, a splendid characteristic in a man, so it is said, betokening a solid, dependable temperament. His sister is a trim little lady too, with shapely ankles.

The lady with the beaded toes who is remonstrating with her spouse over the warmth of his public greeting has to live up, evidently, to her husband's rather garish taste. No wonder she wears fussy slippers in mid-winter. She has to, doubtless, to retain the affections of a man who chooses erratic trousers and a showy bag. He has little feet under these baggy trousers. We think he is stingy, or rather, the sort that would spend a good deal on outward appearances, and then growl over an extra paper of safety-pins for the baby.

The gentleman who is engaged in greeting the arriving "in Law" is braced for all eventualities. He sets his feet firmly together, takes her grip in an equally firm hand and then stands directly in front of fier, to listen to what she has to say. We can see him shepherding her later on to a modest taxi and convoying her home, to consign her, with a relieved air, to his wife's attention.

As for the gay young thing in the high skirt, she is getting a real greeting. And the young man has cast his hat recklessly, just as she has disposed of her little bag, to the earth. Once again, we meet the loud checked trousers and the small feet. Don't any members of the masculine sex outside of brothers, have large, comfortable, feet?

Anyway, their conversation symbolizes different modes of thought and differing temperament. The sister, is brief and to the point. In the idiom of the day, her brother is an "old top." He understands the warmth of her affection for him by this manner of address, and "how goes it?" is merely another graceful up-to-the minute version of the ancient formula: "How do you do?" He doesn't have to answer either ejaculation or question. It is just a way of breaking the ice, like we say, "It's a fine day," and later on, they will settle down to all sorts of conversational tid-bits, like a review of the family rows, etc.

The wife is exercising her undoubted prerogative of keeping the husband in his place. It is one of the missions of a wife to do this. She appears at all times to be putting a damper on his enthusiasm and she secretly glows with pride all the while, in pleasure over George's continued affection for her. She will tell her dearest friend all about it, over the telephone, a few hours later.

Now, the gentleman who meets the "in law" says nothing, as you observe. He knows it is useless to start, and being a prudent man (witness his posture) he allows her to have the first innings and the last also. She has arrived for Christmas time, and she feels secretly a little bit sorrowful over her lack of a male escort, so she takes it out on her companion. He doesn't mind. He has met her before. She is a good woman, and she has a little money which she may leave to his eldest girl, who is named after her. He bears her visits with resignation and hope. Each one may be the last.

Again, we come to the sweetheart. They have their own special brand of conversation. The mysterious "X" always did have a lot to do with love. So their words are mostly punctuated with these little crosses, which aren't cross at all. In the words of the algebraic formula, "O and I, plus 3X," equals what? A kiss—the nicest greeting at Christmas or any other time.

Respice - Aspice - Prospice

A Christmas Message by Pearl Burnham, Millbrook

RESPICE, Aspice, Prospice. Look Back. Look Around. Look Ahead. Is not this a message for Christmas?

All the Christian world today is looking back to the manger cradle of Bethlehem. "The Messiah is here," is the revelation which the bells ring out for the Babe of Bethelem, was the tangible expression of God's supreme love for a sin cursed world.

A young British officer, afterwards killed at the front, wrote to a friend from the trenches before going "over the top", that by substituting the word Christ for Love, in the great love chapter, the thirteenth of First Corinthians, he had found it fitted beautifully, and thus read he had brought vision and satisfaction to his soul in a time of extreme danger and sacrifice.

So the chief joy of the Christmas tide, the kernel of the Christmas message, is it not that we may look back with no terror, though folly, mistakes, and wilful wrong doing, have marred the year's pages, because Divine Mercy, which found expression in the Word made Flesh, has dealt with these acts of rebellion in such a way that they can never be laid to the charge of those who have accepted as their own God's redemption in Christ.

Look around. What of the strife, unrest, suffering, folly, sin? Does the angels' song, "Peace on earth, goodwill to men," seem but a mockery? Lloyd George recently said: "The spirit of good will among men rests on spiritual forces; the hope of a 'brotherhood of humanity' reposes on the deeper spiritual fact of the 'Fatherhood of God'; and these spiritual forces are in fact the one hope for a permanent foundation of world peace."

The fact that the prophet foretold "His Name shall be called 'The Prince of Peace'" is guarantee of His ultimate supreme reign, and the final straightening out of all the tangles is assured.

Looking around we are reminded that Christmas is essentially the children's season. The little folk realize a natural kinship with the tiny life which began in the lowly stable, and whose birthday is honored around the globe to-day. The rough seas He had to sail in His brief life voyage were made so by humanity's need of a Saviour.

"It is good to be children sometimes, and never better than at Christmas when its mighty found was a child Himself," wrote Charles Dickens, and the very bells seem vibrant with the reminder. "Except ye become as little children," there will be a sad lack of acquaintanceship with Him who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life, and no recognized claim to citizenship in the kingdom of Heaven.

Look ahead. It is the unknown which causes fear, yet the "veil which covers futurity was woven by the hand of mercy." Because we have the joy of the Christmastide—"Emmanuel, God with us"—we have the assurance of the love that never fails.

"My Presence shall go with thee"—a wall of fire—a Protection over us, around us, with us, and before us, our strength, and our exceeding great reward.

As Edwin Markham has beautifully expressed it:

"Here is the Truth in a little creed;
Enough for all the roads we go;
In Love is all the law we need,
In Christ the only God we know."

Betty's Christmas.

"Betty Sweetheart," mamma calls me,
"Elizabeth," my grandma said;
Daddy calls me "Little Sunshine,"
And lifts me up high as his head.

Brother says, "O here comes Molly"—
I don't like that name at all,
'Cause my oldest, torn, rag dolly
I just call her "One-armed Mol."

Thought I'd stay awake this Christmas,
See dear, old Santa when he came;
But the Sandman came too early—
'Cause I didn't, he's to blame.

Morning seemed to come so quickly,
And I thought it would be long.
Stockings full, and tree just lovely,
'Round it we sang our Christmas song.

Now I've told you all about it,
And that we had all kinds of cheer,
'Fore I run away to mother
I'll just wish you a "Happy New Year."

Christmas Shopping and the Man - By James Turnbull

No season of the year is more cordially hated by the man than Christmas. Why this should be so is hard to determine unless it is because it is one time he is required to depart from his usual routine and give some thought to others.

There is one in every office. During the last couple of weeks he has been mooning around with a faraway look in his eyes; a look that is supposed to register the fact to all and sundry that he is thinking. He moves around the different members of the office staff in a quiet way getting ideas from each as to what is considered a suitable gift. The replies he receives usually depend on how badly he has the affliction and on the good nature of the person questioned. About two days before the fatal day, not having decided what he should buy, he grabs his coat and hat and tears down the street usually to fall a victim of the first storekeeper whose premises he enters.

With the load off his mind, he sails back to the office and from then on is usually loudest in his declarations that Christmas means nothing to him.

It is the married man, however, who is the real hero of the annual epidemic of good will and good cheer. For weeks previous to the big day he is confronted with the spectacle of his wife wrapping up mysterious parcels for their many friends. It may not cost him much but worry in the beginning but in the long run he pays in cash.

Where is the man who has not cause to remember this joyous period of the year for some of the atrocities imposed upon him in the shape of neckties and cigars.

As sure as Christmas comes around and there seems to be no dodging it, the store windows display all sorts of tempting (to the male eye at least) articles calculated to merit the praise of the man. The list is wide and varied but in the main is composed largely of articles that are supposed to make for material comfort.

If he has a bug for a straight pipe he is sure to get one with a crooked stem. If he prefers a large pipe he is to get one of those dinky, fashionable affairs, probably with an accompanying explanation that she "thought it would look cute in his mouth." Cigars of an uncertain variety but dolled up in a fancy box are sure to be his if he has ever shown a weakness for inhaling my lady nicotine in this shape. The man's friends are the real sufferers in this connection as it is they who will have them inflicted upon them.

Now that the radio has come and helps keep the man at home a somewhat new affliction is his. This year there has been a demand for patent leather slippers. They look good but try and step across the room without a rubber band holding them on the feet and anyone within listening distance will have difficulty in recognizing that the Christmas season is responsible for the outburst.

Another man that suffers through Christmas although his suffering is usually delayed until a few days after the real day is the milkman. Many men who have received the multi-colored necktics wish them on this inoffensive servant of the people and he has no other recourse but to accept them. The idea probably originated in the mind of some man who had reason to hate them for the noise they make on their morning round and took this method of getting a little of his own back.

Like a great many other things, however, thinking about it is the worst feature of it and the final realization, when the day has dawned, that he has given happiness to many is a source for genuine contentment.

Storm-Led

By C. J. Beauclerc

Frank Nesbitt gazed moodily out of the window of his room over the bank. Before him lay the main street of Millfield, dotted with hurrying people, parcel laden, passing to and fro, paying calls, delivering gifts, exchanging greetings. At times he could hear a hearty "Merry Christmas to you" as friends greeted each other across the street. As he watched the happy passers-by he blinked furiously to keep back the hot tears that welled in his eyes, for after all, when one is nineteen and has never before spent Christmas away from home, loneliness and homesickness are almost overpowering.

As he sat at the window Frank thought of the happy Christmasses of former days; the joyous gathering around the Christmas tree early in the morning, the journeying around to the homes of friends even as the people before him were doing; attendance at church, where the whole family joined in the hymns of the season and knelt together at the communion rail; all the festivities and amusements of Yuletide.

True, he had gone to church that morning but he had almost choked as he sang the familiar hymns. There had been no greetings for him, except a few casual nods from customers who had seen him in his cage at the bank. None of the few people in the village with whom he was well acquainted since his transfer three months before was spending the holiday there. The manager and his wife had gone to visit relatives a few miles away; the junior, a local boy, had gone to a family reunion; even the woman who came in at odd times to scrub had boasted happily that she would spend Christmas with her son.

Instead of finding his presents on a tree, and opening them in the family circle, they had been delivered in a substantial parcel plastered with postage stamps and Christmas seals. Even the thought of this brought back the tears. "I can't stand this any longer," he muttered. "If I watch those people spending Christmas so happily I'll go crazy." He rose and took up his snowshoes, determined to go where he would not have to watch others enjoying themselves as he could not.

An hour later Frank swung vigorously along a swamp road. Tall evergreens lined the narrow track, and he was unaware that the few snowflakes which drifted lazily down gave evidence of a howling, driving wind which had sprung up since he had turned off the main road. When he reached an open spot, the blizzard struck him full force, and he altered his determination to keep on until he reached the next highway leading back to the village.

He turned and retraced his steps through the swamp, to come out at the other end into a biting wind which whirled the flakes so thickly that he could scarcely see the fences on each side. Drifts had already formed to such an extent that he passed right across the main road without recognizing it, and presently, though he knew it not, he was struggling away from home when he might have been speeding towards the village with the wind at his back.

Reeling along, half exhausted, he at last perceived an opening in the long row of trees. Thankful that at last he was on the right track, he stumbled bravely onward, only to run into a fence. Retreating from the barrier, he plunged blindly on until he fell up a flight of steps on to a wide verandah, where he lay exhausted.

In the home of Jasper Greening all was jollity. Motherly Mrs. Greening, assisted by her daughters, was dishing up the turkey, with its attendant fixings, while in the warming closet above the stove stood a huge pudding and fragrant mince pies. Her sisters and sisters-in-law, with their daughters, had gathered in the parlor, while their men folks were taking off their wraps, having seen to the stabling of their horses. In a few moments all would sit down for the family Christmas dinner, the grown-ups at the big dining room table, which had been extended to its greatest length, and the kiddies with less style but more fun, in the kitchen.

A loud thump, as of something thrown on the verandah, brought startled exclamations from the ladies, while Jasper ran to the door, followed by other men of the party. Cries of pity greeted them as they returned, bearing the snow-covered figure of Frank Nesbitt. "Poor lad. It's the young fellow that works in the bank," said one as the ice encrusted outer garments were removed. "I heard tell that his home was in Nova Scotia. He must have been wandering around because he was lonely," commented another.

Meanwhile willing hands were chafing the frost-bitten cheeks and fingers, and Mrs. Greening heated some of the famous raspberry cordial made by her mother twenty years before. The kindly ministrations of all who could approach, together with the steaming liquid forced between his lips, soon had their effect, and Frank sat up and looked around, puzzled by the ring of strange, smiling faces. "Ha! better, lad?" queried Jasper. "Just you sit here by the stove for a few minutes and you'll be all right."

Five minutes later Frank lurched to his feet and started to gather his garments from the line back of the stove. As he started to pull on his moccasins, Mrs. Greening came from the dining room, where she had just been attending to the seating of her guests, and laid a restraining hand on his arm. "There's a place at our table for you, son," she said, "and you're not going out in this weather to tramp back to a restaurant meal. It's not right to eat alone on Christmas of all days, and you'll add to our happiness too."

Fighting back the tears which the kindly words brought, Frank started to thank her for the invitation and to frame a refusal, but his objections were quashed before they were uttered, and he was piloted into the dining room and directed to a seat near the stove. Such a meal he had never eaten before. Turkey, cranberries, carrots, potatoes, cabbage, all were handed to him, and then when he thought he could hold nothing more, mince pie and pudding were brought in. Through it all ran the merry conversation, which touched everything from presents to politics, and, although occasional references brought a wave of homesickness back to him, the general gaiety was contagious and he found himself joining in the banter, while in his heart he added to the grace "Thank God for the storm."

As he took part in the games and conversation during the afternoon he felt even more at home. Cards and dancing, riddles and charades, everything as it had been on other Christmases. True, the faces were somewhat unfamiliar, and Frank found himself unable yet to distingusih the different cousins and aunts, and to call them by name, but a part was found for him in all the amusements, and when he let fall a hint that he had sung solos in the carol service at home the previous Christmas he was required to make a substantial contribution to the entertainment of the afternoon. The first time he found difficulty, but when he sang "Peace on earth, goodwill to men" he thought of the goodwill he had encountered and put his very soul into the song of the angels on the first Christmas morning.

While on his way to the piano he found something which he had not noticed before. As he passed through the doorway he was seized from all sides by the young ladies of the party, who pointed gleefully to the mistletoe overhead and proceeded to make use of it while the men laughed heartily at his discomfiture. He smiled cheerfully amid his blushes, however, and called their attention to the fact that he had received all the berries and that they would be out of luck when they caught a young lady in the archway.

So passed an eventful day. Although there had been apples, candy and nuts available all afternoon, supper was as substantial as dinner and it was with sad eyes but thankful stomach that he refused helpings of many of the dainties. After a few more games a family sing song was held and all the visitors began their preparations for the homeward journey. Place was found for him in a sleigh going through the village, and it was with a full heart that he bid his adieus and started for his rooms. In his mind he could still hear the strains of the old Christmas hymn they had sung, and he hummed it until, tired but happy, he dropped off to sleep and dreams in which his own family and the Greenings all appeared, singing.

The Musical Career

By Percy Grainger

"I am sometimes asked," writes Percy Grainger, the world-famous pianist, "what the young pianist must do to begin a career; how he must start to establish himself as pianist and musician.

"Too often, I fear, he has his eyes fixed principally on the career and its emoluments rather than on the inner musical life he should constantly cultivate and enrich. The inner world must be paramount, must count for everything; the outer life will then take care of itself.

That is to say, if he is true to himself, if he puts art first and self-aggrandisement and mere financial gain last, he is bound to succeed in the end. Opportunity will come to him in the right time and way when he is ready for it. With high aims and ideals ever in view, he constantly prepares himself by diligent study. Careers are not made in a day, in a year, or even two. They take time.

"And time is a comparative term. Mischa Elman was a fine artist at sixteen—Paderewski at thirty. Both were moved by the inner emotional urge to work out the life of the artist that they felt themselves called to follow.

"The most vital asset for the young musician is emotion. He must be able to play 'with the heart,' or his work is lifeless and dead. And he must be able to express this emotion in his playing, if he have it, or his performance will have no musical or (if you will) financial value. It soon becomes noised abroad and known whether a pianist's playing touches the heart and makes a sympathetic appeal. You cannot make an emotional appeal when playing unless you love what you are doing, unless you loveArt for itself, not for what it will bring you, not for what it will do for you.

"But if you love Art with disinterested devotion, she will repay you with fourfold interest. Here is an illustration of this truth in my own experience. I early became familiar with the music of Grieg, and while much of it appealed to me strongly, I was particularly partial to the sets of Folk tunes, Ops. 66 and 73. These, belonging to his latest period, are little known and seldom played. But they interested me greatly, and I made them my own because I loved them.

Why Grieg Took to Him.

"Some years later I was in London and was invited to a function at Lady Speyer's, on which occasion Grieg was present. The conversation turned upon his own composition. I spoke with enthusiasm of some of their characteristics, whereupon Grieg turned to me abruptly, asking if I played—if I were a pianist. Upon hearing I was, he wished to know which of his compositions pleased me most. I mentioned these two groups, the Schlatter, Op. 66, and the set Op. 73. He brightened at once, for it seemed just those were his favorites.

"'Why,' he exclaimed, 'no one knows these, no one plays them, and to think you know them and like them best!'

"When he returned to his home in Bergen, he was asked what had impressed him most on his trip. His answer was the fact that a young foreign pianist knew and could play his little known music.

"All my further intercourse with Grieg hinged on this little incident, so trifling and yet so portentous. I was invited to visit him in Norway, and he seemed to delight in the feeling I put into his music. His friendshkip is a precious memory to me. I only speak of it here to show that it came to me because of my love for the least popular of his compositions.

"How did I make the start which began my career? I can hardly say; it seemed to come by degrees, for one thing led to another. I think my dear mother helped most, for I was always so deep in work I had little thought for anything else.

"We were living in Frankfort in those early days. They were very happy days, though we did not have a penny except as we earned it ourselves. And I can say that we lived from week to week, almost never having more ahead than would suffice to keep us a couple of weeks. My mother gave lessons and I added to our income when and what I could. I had at that time a very small repertoire, and was working to enlarge it, for I knew this must be done if I expected to do any pianistic work.

The Newer Composers.

"Besides the standard compositions every players should know, I was always interested in modern compositions and unusual or little known pieces by new composers. When I had opportunity to play, I brought forward some of these new things, together with well-known works. In Germany one can do this, for some people are always ready to hear something new and different. This was always in my favor.

"Then I began to publish a few of my own things. I had not intended to do this till I was thirty at the earliest, for I had always felt I must wait and be more mature in order to judge what would be worthy and what should be cast aside. But my mother wished to have some of my pieces in print so she could hear them properly. She always had the idea she never would live to be old. So, to please her, I consented. I never entertained the faintest notion these first efforts would have the success they achieved. It was a great surprise to us both. All these things have helped to start and make me known, but through no direct effort toward making a career. If one keeps at work seriously and earnestly in his art, for the love of it, the career, as I said before, will take care of itself. The one composition you learn because you love it and can't help learning it—or the ten or one hundred compositions, we may say, which you must learn because they appeal to you—will build your career without your care or knowledge. Because those special pieces you will play out of a full heart they will attract to you a following that will pave the way to success.

Your Own Preferences.

"Follow your own guiding star in the choice of a repertoire. Don't study compositions you don't care for just because the world expects you to do them. You are not obliged to play Bach if you don't care for him; but think yourself fortunate if you do care. I play little or no Beethoven, not because I do not think him one of the greatest of masters, but because his music does not especially appeal to me. I have not played the Liszt B Minor Sonata for the same reason. I am more at home in the music of Bach, Schumann, Grieg and Brahams.

"In preparing compositions I advise the young pianist to accommodate difficult passages to his own particular structure of hand, in the matter of fingering and execution. The only care should be to produce the proper effect. Each hand is different, of course, and what will suit one hand might be well nigh impossible for another. To arrange a passage to suit one's hand is quite permissible.

"Do your own thinking; do not follow anyone slavishly.

"Work out your own ideal without over-anxiety for a career, and you will succeed."

Andy McFee Keeps Christmas

By C.M.C., Examiner Correspondent

ANDY McFEE was running away. He would not have acknowledged it but he certainly was running away. Andy was in the black moods of despair and he hated Christmas, so he told himself. Christmas is only for youngsters, he thought bitterly, but when one is grown up and he has gone through the process of disillusionment, one doesn't care about all the fuss of Christmas. This picking out of gifts in crowded stores, when you don't know what anybody wants, and the windows and counters are jam full of things nobody on earth ever 'would' want, is a farce, said Andy. So he took to his heels, figuratively speaking, and and ran. Literally he boarded a train which carried him a hundred miles away from the city; then he hired an automobile and drove ten more miles, and finally brought up at his summer cottage, now shrouded in the white stillness of winter.

By the time he had the house his supper cooked and everything made clean and tidy, Andy was tired enough to doze as he sat by the open fire with his pipe. For that evening physical comfort and an overpowering drowsiness kept away all troublesome thoughts.

The next morning, Andy was up early and for two hours he worked steadily, getting in wood and putting things in order. Then once more he sat down by the fire to enjoy the peace and quietness of the country. But somehow the country failed to soothe him as it usually did. The stillness was too intense. There was not even the sound of lapping waves. All nature lay in the sleep of winter. The very fire was dozy and failed to dance and sparkle in its accustomed way. Confound it! Why did the Christmas season ever have to come at all? He had been so sure that the cottage would be just the place to spend it. He had been here before in the winter and had loved it and last summer when he and Nora had been here—but there it was again. He didn't want to think about Nora. They two were as far apart as the poles, even if they were man and wife, and he would not think about her. He would go out for a tramp. Fresh air was what he needed.

Outside the world was a glory of blue and white and gold. Bright sunshine lay across the gleaming snow. The branches of the bare trees formed a pattern of filmy lace against the blue sky. Tall pines and evergreens reared their stately heads to the floating clouds of white fleece. Andy tramped on and on, his snowshoes making a virgin trail through the woods and fields.

Not a soul was abroad, and no sound broke the stillness save an occasional chick-a-dee-dee, chick-a-dee. When the first enjoyment and exhilaration of the bracing air had passed, Andy still walked, immersed in his own thoughts. Presently he noticed that the brightness had faded. The fleecy clouds had gathered thicker and thicker until now a film of gray overcast the sky. He looked about him. He had thought he knew every inch of this country, but nothing looked familiar. He pulled out his watch. Three o'clock! Andy whistled in amazement. He must get back. His fire would be out, and he realized that he had had nothing to eat since eight o'clock that morning and that he was suddenly very hungry. The wind had grown piercing, and a snowstorm was impending. He turned back to leave the woods he had entered a short time before, but walked on and on and could find no outlet. A suspicion occurred to him that he must be going about in a circle. At last he came upon a faint track which led through the woods, but which way should he take? He could not see the sun, and he had to acknowledge that he was lost. Added to that he was very cold, very tired and hungry. He had not tramped on snowshoes for five years and he was tender after months in the office, too much worry and not enough exercise. On he went. What a wild country this northern land was! Trees, rocks and bush! To be sure, it was splendid in its wild beauty; every twig and bush draped in snow, every rock crowned with white. Suddenly a magnificent sight burst into view. At a turn in the road he came upon a mighty rock, which reared straight up from the ground with smooth unbroken front for a hundred feet. The top of the rock was flat, with two high-pointed rocks at either end, rising like spires. Snow rested on the level top and clung to the sides of the spires; great icicles hung from crevices all the way down. The whole looked like a cathedral built of ivory and crystal and begemed with diamonds.

Andy stopped short in amazement, and gazed at the mighty structure How beautiful it was and how peaceful! He thought he heard voices. What was it they were saying? Peace, peace on earth. That was it—the angels' song: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, goodwill to men." Goodwill! The walls seemed to widen out. Why, it was a magnificent cathedral, and he was in it. He must kneel down. How peaceful it was! Peace, peace—

Dimly he heard a voice and felt hands upon him. Why couldn't they let him alone when he had found such peace? But the voice and the hands persisted, and presently, he found in a semi-conscious way that he was being pulled to his feet, and a man's voice was saying, "Come on, now. Wake up, sir! This is no place to lie down. Wake up, I tell you."

The voice was rough but kindly, and as he talked, the man was slowly drawing Andy forward and giving him a little shake every now and then. So they proceeded to an old-fashioned box-sleigh hitched to a team of horses, standing on an unbroken road near by. The mists were gradually clearing from Andy's brain, but he felt weak and dizzy, and when he spoke his voice sounded very far-off to his own ears.

"Where were you going, sir?" asked the man.

"I was trying to find my way back to Bear Lake," explained Andy. "I'm staying at my cottage there."

"Bear Lake!" exclaimed the stranger. "Why that's twenty miles from here. Be you used to snow-snoeing, sir?"

"I used to do twenty-five miles and think nothing of it," said Andy, "but I haven't been on them for five years. What time is it?"

"Half-past four," said the man. "You'd best come home with me now, and get thawed out and some victuals inside o' you and I'll see if I can git you to your cottage after supper."

"Yes, I suppose that is the best we can do," said Andy and sank wearily upon the sleigh.

Little was said during the two-mile drive. Andy was too far spent to talk much, and the stranger gave his attention to hurrying the horses as fast as possible. As they drew up before the door of the humble farmhouse, the stranger said: "My name's Joe Robinson. You come right in and Marthy'll fix you up. Hi! Marthy!" he shouted, without waiting for Andy's reply. "Marthy, I say!"

The door opened, and a thin, rather sad but sweet-faced woman looked out. "What is it, Joe?" she asked in a gentle tone of surprise, as she saw her husband assisting a stranger up the path.

"Are you hurt, sir?"

"No," replied Joe, "he isn't, but I found him fainting down there by Cathedral Rock, and if I hadn't got there just at the moment I did, he'd 'a' likely froze to death. Come from Bear Lake on showshoes he did, and ain't had nothin' to eat since mornin'. Better git him a warm bite soon as you kin, Marthy."

"Supper's just about ready now, and I'll make him a cup o' tea right off. The kettle's boilin' now."

She bustled about, taking off Andy's coat, and drawing up a big chair near the fire. In an incredibly short time she had the cup of tea ready, and then kneeling down, began to loosen his moccasins. "No, no," protested Andy. "Get up, Mrs. Robinson, I can do that myself."

"You just set still and sip your tea, sir, and I'll loosen these. You don't think your feet are frozen, do you?"

"No," said Andy. "I don't think so, Mrs. Robinson. I've got heavy woollen socks on, and my feet did not feel so very cold. The exercise kept them warm too. I think I was faint. I fear I'm rather soft," he added, ruefully. "I'm in an office all day, and I'm not used to splitting wood and tramping as I used to be."

"Yes," she responded, "it do make a difference, and you don't look none too robust, sir."

Andy leaned back in the big chair and closed his eyes, while the woman hurried about doing something at the stove. Andy opened his eyes. "Don't go to any trouble for me, please, Mrs. Robinson," he said. "I really don't feel as if I could eat anything now. I believe I'd rather lie down if you don't mind."

"Just in a minute, sir, but I want you to take a little hot soup first. It will do you good, and won't be too heavy for you when you're tired."

She broke a biscuit in a steaming bowl of soup and carried it to him, and Andy ate gratefully. "It tastes like the soup my mother used to make."

"Does it?" said Mrs. Robinson. "It's made froma shank. We get one whenever we can. It's nourishing for the children. Now if you'll come in to the next room, you can lie down, or would you like to get into bed?"

"Oh, no," said Andy quickly. "Anything will do, Mrs. Robinson. Just a rest on a couch. I don't believe I can sleep." But he did sleep, in a very short time after Mrs. Robinson had tucked him up warmly on the couch. slept and dreamed that once more he stood before Cathedral Rock, and that Nonie stood there with him, dear Nonie, looking at him as she used to do, with a depth of love and tenderness in her deep blue Irish eyes. She was holding out her hand to him, but when he tried to go to her he could not move his feet.

Some three hours later he became dimly aware of voices and gradually the words sank into his consciousness. A man and woman were speaking and he soon realized it was his host and hostess.

"If we could just do something for the children, Joe, I wouldn't mind anything else." The woman was saying, "I can't bear to have Christmas come and not a toy from Santa Claus."

"Now, don't cry, Marthy. I know it's hard but I don't see what we can do. You've got a chicken for dinner, haven't you?"

"Yes, I know, and I made them some candy, but o, Joe, think of Christmas without a Santa Claus. If there was just some way we could get them even one toy. Polly wants a doll so badly. It nearly broke my heart to-day to have to tell her Santa couldn't come this year and there wouldn't be any doll. She's such a good little thing, and all she said was: "Don't oo cry, muvver. I love oo, and when I get big I make old Santa Claus come to oo."

The woman's voice broke, and Andy opening his eyes cautiously, saw Joe get up and put his arm about her, patting her shoulder and softening his gruff voice as much as he could. "I know, Marthy, I know, and it hurts me just as much. There's Freddie wanting a train, and there's you, Marthy. God! It seems it ain't fair and I can't bear to see you slavin' and doin' without all the time. I'm nigh ready to give up."

"There, there, Joe," said Marthy, turning comforter at once and drawing Joe's head down on her thin work-worn shoulder. "You mustn't worry about me. I don't need nothin'. It's just the little ones, but maybe things will be better soon and we can make it up to them. You do the best you can, Joe, and it doesn't matter as long as we have each other."

Andy felt the unaccustomed tears sting his eyelids. Here was true love, love that sweetened poverty and hardship, love that made all things bearable as long as they were together. And here, too, was a chance for him! Christmas was the time for children, and why couldn't he help them? He forgot how he hated Christmas, and with a mind enthused and a heart fired with new aspirations and emotions, he began laying his plans.

Fifteen minutes later he stirred and stretched and when he had let them know he was awake he got up and walked toward the kitchen door.

"How do you feel, sir?" said Mrs. Robinson, anxiously.

"How do you feel, sir?" said Mrs. Robinson, anxiously.

"My feet are pretty sore," said Andy, hobbling toward the chair Mrs. Robinson drew out for him, "but that will soon pass off and I'll be as right as a trivet. How far is the nearest town from here, Robinson?"

"Four miles to Makepeace," replied Robinson.

"Do you think you could drive me in there to-night?"

"Well, I reckon I could if you want to go, but seems to me you ain't in no fit condition to be doin' any more travellin' to-day, and you'd be that much further away from your cottage. It ain't on that road."

"I see," mused Andy. "Is there a railroad out of Makepeace?"

"Yes, but you can't catch no train until seven o'clock in the mornin'."

"Is there a hotel there?"

"Yes, but it's a poor kind of a joint."

"We'd be awful glad to have you stay with us, Mr. McFee," put in Mrs. Robinson timidly. "We haven't much of a place; it's very humble, but we'd be right glad to have you and share what we've got."

"I'm sure you would, Mrs. Robinson. You and your husband have done more for me now than I can ever repay, but I've decided to go back to the ity to-morrow if I can get back. Ie want to make it if I possibly can. It's rather important that I should be there and I'm certainly not going to ask Joe to take me four miles in the morning to catch that seven o'clock train, so I think we'd better go to-night."

"He wouldn't mind taking you in the morning, would you, Joe?"

"Not a bit," said Joe promptly "Got to get up to milk the cows any way."

But Andy carried his point, and a short time later he had taken a grateful leave of Mrs. Robinson and he and Joe were on their way.

"Hustle the horses all you can, Joe. ful leave of Mrs. Robinson and he and Joe were on their way.

"Hustle the horses all you can, Joe I want to get into some of the stores before they close."

"They'll be open until midnight," said Joe, gruffly, "but I'll do the best I can."

As they drove, Andy gradually drew the story of Joe's struggles from him until he knew all about the poor little farm, the oldest child's illness and death last winter, the failure of the potatoes and the lack of ready cash.

When they had reached the tiny village, Andy pressed a ten-dollar bill into Joe's hand. "Take that for now, Joe, until I can pay you better, and come with me. I want to buy some Christmas presents for the kiddies."

Joe protested vigorously. "It ain't right, sir. I can't let you do it. Marthy'd not like me takin' pay for doin' a kindness."

"You're not taking pay for doing a kindness, Joe. I'd pay that money to anybody for bringing me in here to-night. Don't forget you saved my life this afternoon, and I'll not forget it either. As for the gifts for the children, you're just doing me another kindness to let me buy them, and you wouldn't deprive the kiddies of a little happiness, would you? I have no children of my own, but please God I'll have my wife with me to-morrow if all goes well, and if I win her back it will be thanks to you and Mrs. Robinson. You can tell your wife that you two taught me more of the Christmas spirit to-day than I ever learned in my life."

Joe shook his head uncomprehendingly, but gave way, and followed his companion in a bewildered manner as he went from one store to another. There were only half a dozen stores in the tiny village, but Andy managed to pile the sleigh high with parcels, overriding Joe's objections and horrified exclamations at the money spent. There was the finest doll in the village for little Polly and a doll's chair and table. Unfortunately, no train could be found for Freddie, but a toy automobile was substituted, and "I'll send him a train from the city," promised Andy. There were games and a drum, a horn, a knife, a doll's tea-set, picture-books and blocks. There was a new dress for Marthy and a new coat too, a dress for Polly and a suit for Fred. There were candies and nuts, oranges and bananas, and, last of all, a monstrous turkey, the like of which had never been in the Robinson's oven.

"They'll still be eating that turkey when we go down for New Year's, Nonie," said Andy the next evening as he sat beside his wife before the glowing fire.

"Let's never buy gifts for rich people again, Andy," said Nora, her blue eyes bluer than ever and her cheeks like delicate roses. "Let's always hunt up some family who need a little encouragement and send our gifts to them. The really poverty-stricken ones are sure to be looked after, but often there are people who have known better days who are suffering for just a little help and love and sympathy. We will have to be tactful but if we watch during the year I'm sure we'll always find some one we can make happy at Christmas time. Don't you think it would be a good idea, Andy?"

"I do," said Andy firmly, "and if we do that, Nora, we'll be keeping Christmas in our hearts all the year through, and that's the only way to find the true Christmas spirit."

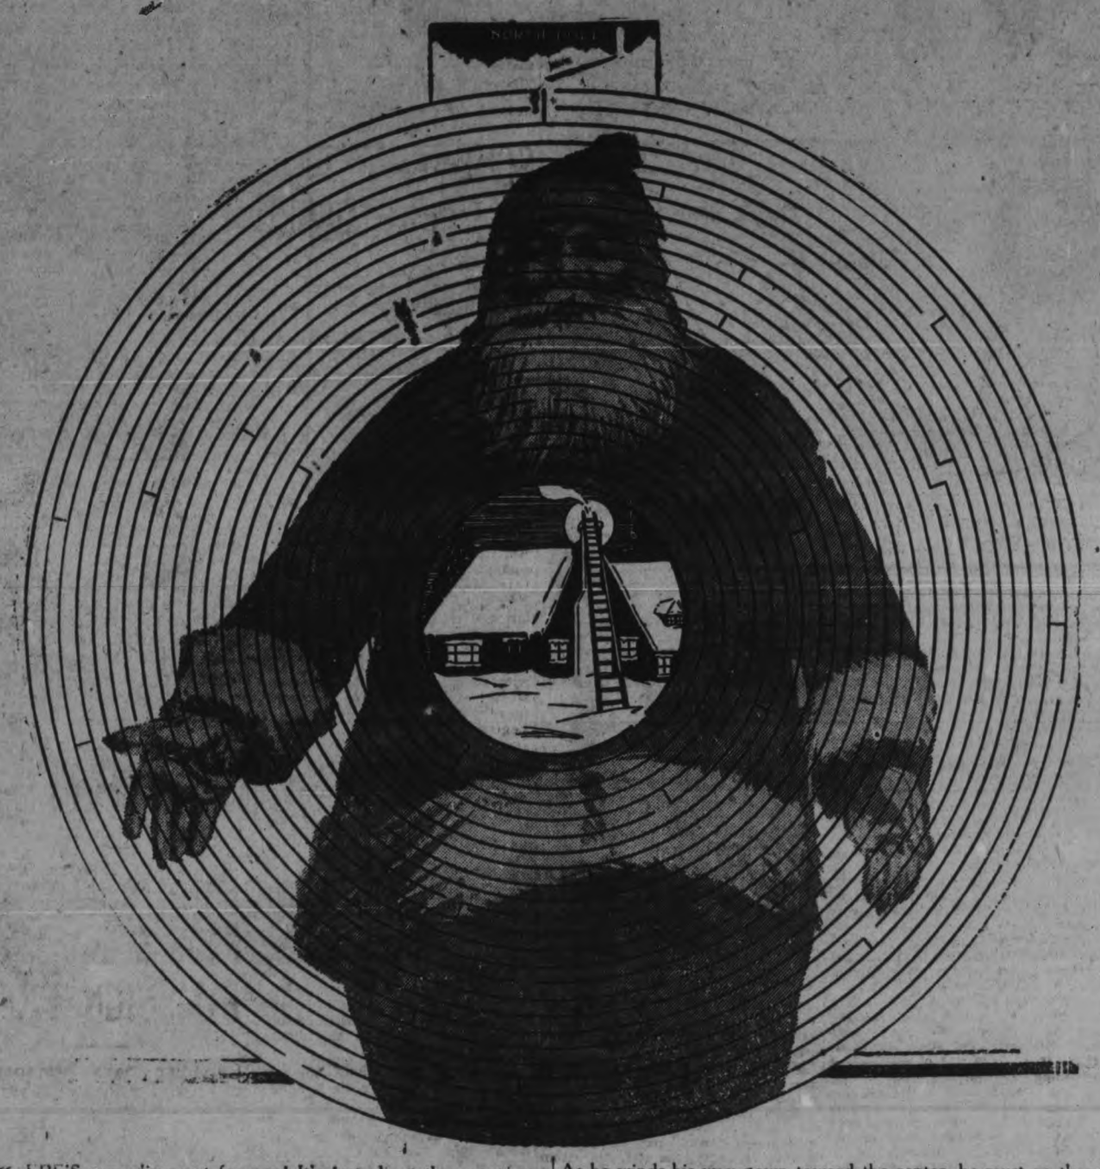
And the grandfather's clock in the hall boomed tick, tock, peace, peace on earth, good-will to men, to the hearts of Nora and Andy McPhee who were keeping Christmas together after all.

While far away in a lonely house in the snow-bound country Joe and Marthy sat side by side before the kitchen stove and smiled at each other over the rosy, sleepy faces of two supremely happy children.

"It was the Lord's doing, Joe," whispered Marthy. Joe nodded. "It was the Christmas spirit, Marthy."

A Christmas Puzzle for You---

HOW'S SANTA GOING TO FIND HIS WAY TO YOUR HOUSE?



HERE'S a predicament for you! It's just about the worst predicament that could be imagined!

Old Santa Claus is crying "Help! Help!"

You can see his trouble at a glance, of course.

How's Santa going to find his way from the North Pole to your house—the pretty, snow-blanketed little house in the center being considered yours for the moment.

It's against the law, understand, for Santa to cross any lines. As he winds his way down toward the center, he must go through open gates.

Get your pencil and see how much help you can give him.

You'll say before you have gone very far that it's a rather baffling problem. But keep at it, and eventually you'll arrive at the foot of the ladder.

When you get through check up your solution with the one which appears on the last page.

WHY SANTA CLAUS STILL USES A SLEIGH

(It is Christmas Eve. The scene is laid in Santa Claus' boudoir. He has just successfully tucked his beard outside of his red flannel undershirt, and is now pulling on two pairs of woolen socks. He looks at his wrist watch and calls out in a lusty voice.)

Santa Claus—Oh, ma, have the sedan brought around. It's about time I was gettin' started.

Ma Claus—Sorry, Santy darlin', but Anna's using the sedan to-night. She's gone over to the Arctic Country Club's dance with that young Eskimo bond salesman.

Santa (impatiently)—Well, then tell Fritz to bring around the limousine. It's gettin' late.

Ma Claus (who now stands down in foyer)—Oh, Santy dear, Mary and Alice went up to see the football game this afternoon and they haven't brought the limousine back yet.

Santa (thoroughly angry by now)—Well, for the love o' Nick, get me the town car. It's nearly eleven-thirty. This is some family. I'll say, kiddin' around with the cars on a night like this!

Ma Claus (hiding behind pantry door)—Dick and thag girl from the Polar Prep School drove down to the movies in the town car. (She sticks her fingers in her ears, prepared for the worst.)

Santa (explosively)—Of all the blankety-blankety-blankety families! What would ye all be doin' anyhow if it wasn't for me. I tell you, the younger folks nowadays are a caution.

Ma Claus (diplomatically)—Remember, darling, don't lose your temper. It's Christmas eve, you know.

Santa (resignedly)— All right, send around Sleigh No. 2 and a couple of good reindeer. It's five minutes to twelve and I've got to be hoppin.'

THE END OF THE ROAD

By Jeanette

I SWARE a vow before them all that I, because I had not seen the Grail, would ride a twelvemonth and a day in quest of it."

The boy who was reading the "Idylls of the King" looked up for a moment from his book. The dappled sunshine fell across the page, and in the old apple-tree where he had made a nook for himself the light came green through waving branches. He took a bite from his apple and munched contentedly as he turned the leaf. The of Homer O'Rourke was present, but his mind was elsewhere. The intelligence that animated the freckle-faced lad with the snub nose and quick blue eyes was far away. He was a knight in armor, riding to the Quest of the Holy Grail. On his arm floated the favor of hsi ladye faire, and between the green hedges of England he rode a milk-white steed, on his way to a foreign land to wreak righteous wrath on a pagan foe.

The hawthorn hedge vanished. The milk-white steed became thin air. Gone was the token of romance and the floating pennon on his trusty lance of brave English oak. Homer O'Rourke was again a little boy whose mother's voice called—a clear, clarion call to duty, not to the fray of the tilting-field, but to a lusty attack on a pile of chips wherewith to make a fire for the mid-day meal.

"Yes, ma," he answered meekly, as he shinnied down the thick trunk of the widespread apple tree. He gulped a last hasty bite and threw the core at Tiger, the mottled yellow cat sitting in the sunlight on the back porch. Tiger, missed by a close shave, arose, waved his tail in offended dignity, and stalked into the barn.

It was wash day. Mrs. O'Rourke, hanging out a late basket of clothes after a pick-up lunch, confided to her neighbor, Mrs. Hutchinson, over the back fence:

"Homer is a good boy, though I do say it myself as shouldn't, but he's no match for the other youngsters. He'd a much sight rather be readin' poetry in the old apple tree than playin' ball with the lads in the back lot. Maybe it's all my fault for the name I gave him. They say there's a deal of influence in a person's name. But I always liked the sound of Homer, somehow——"

Mrs Hutchinson nodded sympathetically. She had her own ideas about names. "Homer" was a foolish handle for a child, she thought. The Hutchinson brood had sensible names. William and John and Thomas and Catherine they were, and they were sensible, tow-headed children, who would have turned their noses still higher in the air than Nature had fashioned them already, at the thought of reading poetry. She had a volume of Browning in her parlor, of course, bound in leather, but its sacred, gilt-edged pages had never been profaned by a touch, and it rested in undisturbed privacy in the sanctuary that housed a stuffed owl, an organ and a fine collection of enlarged ancestral portraits.

Two.

The white dress of Molly Cavanagh was a call to the blood of Homer O'Rourke as he vaulted over the green gate that separated her from him and reached her side in a few quick steps. His cap under his arm, the evening light falling warmly on his crop of red hair, he swept her a low bow.

"I bid you good even, fair damozel," he declaimed gallantly, as he faced the laughing girl, whose twinkling merriment and bright, free grace seemed to make a fitting accompaniment to his youthful zest and vigor.

"What book is that, Homer?" she said with curiosity, as she reached out a little hand to touch the volume under his arm. Capturing the hand, he drew it under the same arm, and, side by side, they made their way to the low stoop and settled on the steps. Homer on a lower level, so that he could turn his face up to her from time to time.

"It is Rossetti's "Blessed Damozel," he answered, fingering the little volume with loving touch. "Listen to this, Molly," and he quoted the immortal lines commencing with: "The Blessed Damozel leaned out, o'er the gold bar of heaven"—

Molly's eyes grew dreamy as she listened, and it was a responsive glance that met the upturned gaze of her lover as he finished.

"Molly," he said, recapturing the little hand, "I would like to do something wonderful with my life. You can't imagine how I long to achieve something great. Life is so short, after all. Doesn't it seem right to you that we should aim for the very highest?"

She nodded gravely. He went back to the little book.

Presently, the light waning, they went into the house. Molly got out the parchesi board and later, they played backgammon with her father and mother. At half past ten o'clock, Molly walked with Homer to the gate and watched the tall figure go swinging down the moonlit road. She went slowly back to the house.

"Did Homer say anything about the shop?" asked her father, who was closing the windows in preparation for the night.

"No," answered Molly, with a quick glance at him.

"Molly, girl," said her father tenderly, "I don't like to say it, but Homer O'Rourke will never amount to much. He hasn't gumption enough in him to keep that shop going. He is going to fail one of these days, and fail hard. He's a nice lad, child, but he's a dreamer."

Molly said nothing. She turned rather wearily to the stairs and there was the glint of tears in her soft eyes as she stood at the window of her little room, looking down the moonlit road to Homer's house.

"I know Dad is right," she whispered "but oh, dear Lord, I love him so Make him do something with his life Don't let him be a failure."

Three.

The drums of war sounded through the streets of the little Canadian town. In the windows of the main stores hung posters, with lettering that said, sharply significantly under the picture of a stern-faced soldier: "Are you doing your bit for your country?"

Homer O'Rourke turned with a dogged air to enter the door of the recruiting office. They had been hounding him for months, and for months he had been trying to make up his mind to enlist. His sensitive imagination shrank from the horrors of warfare, and his very flesh rebelled at the thought of killing a fellow-creature, but the idealist in him responded to the call of patriotism and the glamor of soldierly trappings, to the motive of self-sacrifice, and the thought of merging one's individuality in the great struggle for the freedom of mankind. An extract from Tennyson's "Ode to the Duke of Wellington" rang in his mind: "That all good things await, the one who cares not to be great, save as he saves, or serves, the State."

It was with a hesitating step that he entered the recruiting station, but it was with a quick, triumphant air that he marched out later and up the street to his home and his weeping mother.

And it was with the same quick step that he went away, along with the rest of the lads, singing lustily, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" as they followed the drums to the station, and, in the dizzy heat of departure, lost the sense of desolation that remained with those left behind.

"Homer, God bless him—he always wanted to do something great. Now he has his chance——" said his mother, as she pored over the letters with their foreign post-marks and read them over and over again to Molly Cavanagh. "He'll be coming back one of these days with stripes on his arm and a medal on his chest."

Molly nodded her head eagerly.

Four.

The company sergeant swore heartily. He was cut off from help. A surprise attack by the enemy had pocketed him and his men in a tiny copse of a wood that became famous in later despatches as the scene of one of the bloodiest encounters of the Great War. For three days and nights they had crouched there, and now only ten remained of the twenty who had been with him in he beginning.

"D——n that sniper," he muttered savagely, wiping the sweat from his forehead. A puff of dust rose at his feet as another bullet almost found its mark. He moved hastily and once more swore with deep meaning.

"Come on, lads, we'll make a break for it. Over the stream, every man of you, and may the Lord have mercy on us."

The men leaped to their feet. Bullets pinged through the air about them. Under the fusillade one fell, then another. The first man rose to his feet, blood trickling from his arm, but the second lay still. The men turned back. Wavering, they looked at the sergeant.

"Go on, lads, you can't do anything for him," he ordered, but there was a sob in his throat as he gasped, bending for a last look at the boy; "Homer O'Rourke. Shot through the heart." They gained the sanctuary of the wood, and passed into the dense growth.

That night, "Big Maggie" found the range, and the wood, an inferno of flame and lead, was recaptured from the enemy. From the body of Homer O'Rourke they cut the identification tag and forwarded it, with an official notice of his death, to his mother in Canada. His body they bundled, with a dozen more, into a common grave.

Five.

It was Christmas Eve. Former Christmas Eves in this house had been gay affairs, when holly wreaths hung from the windows and the oldor of preparations for the morrow's feast scented all the little rooms. But to-night——

With shaking hands, Mrs. O'Rourke closed the box that held a curl of bronze locks and the letters that had come from far-away Flanders.

"You were a fine lad, Homer, and your mother will never forget you," she sobbed. "You were a good boy always, even though you were a dreamer."

In the white house down the road, Molly Cavanagh kissed the picture of her soldier sweetheart. "You always wanted to do something great, Homer," she murmured wistfully. "God will not forget you."

And—in a great cathedral in far-off England burned softly the light that would never go out, night or day. Under the bronze statue of a soldier rested the wreath that a king had placed there, on the day when he had come surrounded by belted earls, princes and bishops, to do public homage to a man who symbolized for a nation the bravery and the knighthood of their race. On the tablet was the inscription:

"And he gave all that man could give, life itself, for God, for king and country, for loved ones, home and empire, for the sacred cause of justice and the freedom of the world."

Homer O'Rourke, who had dreamed of being great, had achieved his desire. He was England's Unknown Soldier.

The Man Who Became Acquainted With Himself - By William Edgar

It was on a Christmas morning, that Phillip Murchison, exactly a quarter of a century old, first got on terms of real familiarity with himself, to the extent of speaking his mind to that august personage, and seeing him, exactly as he was, or at least as he had been, for the very act of recognition had produced a striking development.

Phillip, as he beheld himself that morning was a totally different specimen of mankind from that which he, and as he had deluded himself into thinking, the rest of the world had contemplated during his previous years of existence. Phillip, or Phil, as he was known to the privileged few whom he permitted to be on terms of intimacy with him was an admirable illustration of the effects of heredity and environment, and a faithful reflex of his early training. He carried himself with the air of a man who knew he was alloted to one of the high places of the earth. Napoleon himself did not think with more assurance of his destiny than did Phillip Murchison. He always did exactly the correct thing and hated anything that was "low." His pet aversions were labor unions, and the sight of a working man rarely failed to stir within him a feeling akin to that of the Pharisee who prayed, "Lord, I thank thee, I am not as other men." Phil, in spite of his lofty ideas was not by any means born with a silver spoon in his mouth.

His father was a medical practitioner, with only a fair income. His mother came from a decayed family, which still looked regretfully back to the days when it had owned a few barren acres in the north of England.

Shrewd observers who knew the Murchisons said the lad was more to be pitied than blamed, and were unanimous in ascribing Phil's self-sufficiency, his petulance and the thinly-veiled contempt he manifested towards his "inferiors" (and they were legion) to one cause—the inflated ideas of himself and his own importance assiduously instilled into his young mind by a fond, foolish mother.

Mrs. Murchison worshipped the fetish of gentility. One of her favorite expressions was that she would prefer to see her son a gentleman rather than rich, or clever, or popular. "Never forget, Phillip, that you are a Murchison" she would often say. "You are a gentleman and have royal blood in your veins"—(a distinction which modern investigation shows to be shared by millions of Anglo-Saxons). Mrs. Murchison's ambition was laudable enough. But although living in this era of opportunity, with so many examples of men who have risen from the ranks of the toilers to positions of honor and affluence, Mrs. Murchison clung to the conviction that gentility was incompatible with a grimy face, greasy overalls or hands stained by manual labor. Thus, her husband's suggestion (for men are more rational on this point than women) that Phil be apprenticed to a trade was promptly etoed as calculated to lower the dignity of the family. So the problem of finding a career for the young hopeful was one not easy of solution. His school record was far from imposing, and he had a decided aversion to prolonged studies and frequent examinations—which ruled out his mother's suggestion of medicine, or the bar.

A bright idea struck Dr. Murchison at one of the family conferences, "Let Phil decide himself. What does he want?" he queried, laying the newspaper on his knee. Phil was silent. He had already confided his desires to his mother. A lad from his school had lately left for a military college. A commission in the Imperial Army—but here she had raised her hands in horror. "Don't even mention that to your father" she urged. "Why, he would go wild if he heard you. Phillip, my boy, remember your father is not a millionaire. Commissions in the army are all right for young men whose parents can support them for all time." Thus it was when his father put the question to him, Phil simply looked meaningly at his mother, who unseen by her husband, shook her head emphatically and closed the discussion by saying hastily, "Oh, let him wait. Something will turn up."

Something did turn up. Phil, finding the army closed to him decided that he would become a Napoleon of finance, and placed himself at the lowest desk in a silk-importer's office, confident that he now had his foot on the bottom rung of the ladder that would eventually lead him to that inner sanctum beyond a door marked "Private" where he would sit in state and, Aladdin-like, press a knob which would immediately bring into his presence a suave, deferential, black-coated genie, eager to honor the slightest whim of his master, the President of the Phillip Murchison Co., and numerous allied concerns.

Phil's enthusiasm soon tooled. The way was long, the going was hard, his progress was slow and he often thought longingly on his former schoolmate who was in India with the British Army. Then, the incredible thing happened. A pistol shot from a revolutionary fanatic at Sarajevo set in motion the train of events that led to the almost overnight metamorphosis of clerks and civilians all over the British Empire into officers and soldiers of His Majesty's forces.

Phil's first impulse was to enlist in the ranks and trust to his innate slumbering military genius to do the rest; but another method suggested itself. Between mother and son, Dr. Murchison's existence became intolerable until he bestirred himself to pull the strings in influential quarters and secured the necessary signatures on Phil's application for a commission. Fortune had at last smiled on Phillip.

No reformed crook ever dreaded the revelation of his past as Phil did during the months prior to embarkation for France. He was attached to a new army regiment, composed largely of officers and men from the Home Counties of England, Phil and Lieutenant Wightman being the only officers from the industrial north. Many were the discussions among the men as to Phil's origin and his status in civil life. Some opined that he was a distant connection of a famous Canadian peer. Others had the best authority for the statement that he was the son of a millionaire jam manufacturer. Still another story affirmed his relationship to a well known Liverpool merchant. Now and then Phill heard these speculations and smiled, not at all displeased. Anything was better than the truth.

Although he was on the best of terms with all his brother officers, he was attracted more to Wightman than any of the others. From the moment he joined the regiment he regarded Wightman as the personification of elegance and good breeding. Wightman's manners were perfect and his sang-froid admirable. Phil soon learned that Wightman was the son of a north-country lawyer who had a considerable practice. Wightman always seemed to be in affluent circumstances. He spoke familarly of eminent sociaty figures, known to Phil only through the newspaper columns. Nor was this a mere pose, for on more than one occasion, Phil saw Wightman the object of flattering attentions from the sons of some of the most aristocratic families in the land. "School-fellows of mine at Eton," he confided to Phil on one occasion. Wightman asked Phil no awkward questions about himself, seemingly being content to accept Phil at his own valuation. By the time they were ordered to the seat of war, the two youths were on very amicable terms. One could hardly say they were fast friends, for where there are few confidences exchanged, there is little real friendship. But Phil was intensely proud of the connection and his letters home were full of enthusiastic references to "My good friend, Wightman."

Fortune has long possessed a bad reputation as an elusive coquette. Phil, to his sorrow and dismay, soon found her to be also a dame of excessive timidity. How else can one explain her shameful desertion of her protege in the course of his first perilous journey across that incredibly narrow strip of land between the British and German first line trenches? It was partly through his own misunderstanding of orders received and partly the fault of a superior officer who did not survive his error; and the result was that Phil, bleeding profusely from a nasty bayonet wound on the neck, found himself, along with thirty men of the regiment, being escorted behind the enemy lines by a troop of Westphalians, commanded by a typical Junker and sabre-rattler with a copious vocabulary of guttural oaths and filthy objurgations.

Phil's active service was over.

Phil felt distinctly aggrieved that his release was delayed too long to permit of his being home in time for the public rejoicing which greeted the return of the troops from the Front. Except among his own immediate friends and relations, his return created little stir. How different it was from the return he had so often pictured. A public reception, he had thought, would be about the thing for an officer who had suffered wounds and imprisonment. He was mortified and angry to find that he was considered of so little account. He felt himself robbed of something that was his by right. Poor Phil! He was destined to suffer greater disappointments.

It was only after much cogitation and heartburning that he realized all hopes were vain of retaining his commission in the Army, from which officers and men were being demobilized with all possible speed, and that nothing remained but for him to endeavor to pick up anew the threads of his commercial career. He called on his former employer. Then it was that the real tragedy of his position was revealed to him. The unpalatable tidings were conveyed to him as delicately as possible. There was no room for Phill in the office. Like many others who had manfully spent themselves in defence of their Homeland, he had returned to find himself a misfit!

In the Murchison household, the effects of steadily rising prices and stationary income were soon apparent, and all Mrs. Murchison's skill and economy were necessary to steer clear of financial disaster. With no specialized knowledge of any kind, Phil's quest for "something genteel" in employment was speedily seen to be hopeless and at last, almost dying with shame, he yielded to relentless economic pressure and accepted a post as a machineman in a large factory near his home. His work was very simple: operating a vertical boring machine. But he hated it! He felt he was disgraced. The thought of the future appalled him. Life held nothing for him now, he told himself, but the prospect of a life of drudgery as an unskilled laborer, a nobody, a slave of a hooter.

During each journey to or from his work he suffered the torments of the lost. He avoided the main streets and sought the least frequented alleys. The sight of an acquaintance caused his heart to sink like lead. His jaundiced imagination fancied himself the butt of coarse jokes among every group of men he passed: every laugh, he thought, was from someone mocking his "degradation." His feelings were akin to those of the Oriental despot suddenly hurled from his throne to be the slave of a conqueror.

But youth cannot remain for all time in the deepest trough of depression, and in the course of a few weeks, even Phil was constrained to acknowledge that his prospect was not entirely one of unrelieved gloom. His earnings were far in excess of his salary as a junior officer. His contempt of the men among whom his lot was cast was modified considerably by the discovery that a large number of them were better educated than he and of intellectual calibre superior to his own. They were all very good-humored and seemed to vie with each other in suggesting little time and labor saving devices to him. After his barrier of reserve had broken down, he often found himself joining in the general conversation. Although there were many ex-soldiers in his department, Phil was unique in being the only one among them who had been a prisoner of war; and his accounts of experiences in Germany never failed to bring around him a knot of interested listeners. Slowly he recovered the appetite he had lost on account of his mental distress. He slept soundly at night; and he experienced a certain amount of satisfaction from the knowledge that his contributions to the family exchequer had recuperated the straitened financial position of the house. Still, he was as yet far from being reconciled to his lot: indeed he dreaded to think a day might come when his occupation would no longer be repugnant to him. A single glance tn the mirror as he returned from work was sufficient to repress any incipient feeling of contentment and to revive all his unavailing desires and distracting regret. Moreover, a vague fear ever haunted his mind that some of his fashionable acquaintances in the army might discover his location and his "menial" position. The very thought filled him with dismay.

He felt his position very keenly during a visit to the plant of some financial men who had big interests in the concern. These men came into his department on a Monday.

Monday in the factory was always a bad day for Phil. He always experienced a sensation of depression on returning after a week-end of freedom to the dust-laden atmosphere of the drab, dreary workshop with its ugly whitewashed brick walls, and its deafening, unnatural clamor of hundreds of machines. Moody and irritable, he watched the shareholders walk slowly down the narrow passage, inspect ng the mach nes and follow ng closely the explanat ons of the works manager. Ph.l's eyes followed them unt.l they disappeared behind the sliding iron door that led to the next department. How he envied them! The sight of these prosperous looking men accentuated his despondency. If only he could have—

"Here's another" said, or rather shouted his neighbour above the din created by a plate leveller behind them, who was trying to hammer into shape a recalcitrant sheet of light iron. "'ll bet he overslept. Been sitting up late playing poker, likely. He's all right though. He has old Keegan with him and Keegan knows the ropes."

Accompanied by the old foreman, a well-dressed stranger had entered the department. Not desirous of being seen idly looking around, Phil busied himself with his work, until he became conscious that the two men had paused a few feet beyond him where Keegan seemed to be explaining the intricacies of a machine on the other side of the passage. His neighbour, however, appeared troubled by no scruples. He eyed the two men keenly. "He is a lot younger than the rest." he grunted to Phil. At this remark, Phil looked up again. He started. A deep flush suffused his face and receded, leaving a deadly pallor on which the grime spots stood out in bold relief. Well he knew that elegant figure, that air of easy indifference and self-possession. Wightman, a shareholder! Wightman, the last man on earth he would wish to meet! Phil uttered a low cry of humiliation and despair. He thought desperately of cowering behind the machine; but that would only arouse attention. Too late now! Wightman turned ever so slightly and Phil encountered that steely unseeing glance. For one brief, awful moment, Phil stared at him, immovable, helpless, quivering as though red hot iron had seared the most sensitive fibre of his being. Wightman gave not the slightest sign of recognition. Presently, Keegan led the way towards the door. Phil watched them as if fascinated and his eyes, preternaturally sharpened by his intense anxiety distinctly saw Wightman's lips curl very slightly in a cynical smile as he threw a fleeting glance backwards.

No sooner had the door closed on them than Phil darted for his jacket which he threw on him with feverish rapidity. "Where away, old fellow?" bawled his neighbour. Phil gave him no answer. At the exit, he met Keegan returning. "What's the matter with you," demanded the latter, somewhat aggressively. "'m sick of this, sick of everything, let me get away." Phil did not realize that his passionate complaint was only partially audible to Keegan. Thirty-five years among the rattle of machinery had not improved the veteran's hearing.

Out in the cool air, his excitement wore off rapidly. He began to think. Once more he was unemployed. Doubts as to the wisdom or manliness of the course he had adopted assailed his mind.

Succeeding days intensified these doubts. Week followed week in which he found himself one of a steadily increasing army of unemployed. He exhausted all his savings in fruitless journeys and in abortive application for work—work of any kind. The dingy factory seemed Elysium now, and the men, he thought were simply splendid fellows; bold, independent and untrammelled by the absurd notions that had made his recent life a martyrdom. The scales were slowiy, but surely dropping from his eyes. But his regeneration had yet to come. On Christmas morning Phil was sitting in his own little den, alone with his gloomy thoughts and revolving one plan after another, when he was aroused by a knock at the door and the entry of his mother who said, "A gentleman to see you, Phillip. He is in the sitting room." Phil arose and proceeded to the room where he found himself confronted by Wightman who greeted him with surprising cordiality.

"I'm glad to see you on your feet again," he said. Phil was somewhat puzzled by the remark, but asked no explanation, and acting on the impulse, he seated himself beside his visitor and unburdened himself of the story of the motives that had led to his hurried departure from the factory, omitting nothing and making absolutely no endeavor to minimize his folly. Wightman listened attentively and heard him to the end without a single interruption.

Then he rose to his feet and shook Phil earnestly by the hand. "I am honored by the fact that you have confided in me in this way," he said, "but I must correct some little errors you have made. In the first place, you were mistaken in thinking I saw you on toe day I first came to the factory." Here Phil observed that his friend had a glass in the socket that ought to have contained his right eye.

Wightman noticed his glance. "Yes, perhaps that explains it. The Original is in Flanders. It was not very long after you were taken."

"And I fancied I saw you smile in contempt as you went out," muttered Phil, ruefully.

"Well, perhaps I did," acknowledged Wightman. "I remember distinctly reflecting on what would be the attitude of some of my former fashionable friends and brother officers—I did not realize one of them was then actually watching me—if they knew I was reduced to working a machine as a hired laborer in a factory."

"What did you say?" asked Phil incredulously, "working a machine?"

"That's what I am doing at present. You made mistake number two in thinking I was a shareholder. A shareholder! I wish you were not mistaken. My dear chap, times have changed with me too, and I am working a machine similar to the one you were at. What else could I do? My father died a year ago, practically a ruined man and I was left the sole mainstay of my mother and two sisters. An expensive education, with no special qualifications for anything worth while left me a derelict in the labor market. Well, I just had to throw off all false pride and appeal to Keegan as my most influential relative."

"Your what?" asked Phil faintly.

"My uncle, my mother's brother."

Phil could hardly conceal his astonishment. Old, grinding Keegan a relative of this young exquisite; dignified even in his misfortune! The thing was incredible.

Wightman proceeded:

"Keegan took me to the factory and showed me the machines. Next day I set to work. Of course he was not very sure that I would stick it, but I think that, without boasting, I can say I have rather surprised my worthy old uncle. Then I soon heard of you and found out that it was really my old army companion who had been in the place before me."

"I wish—oh, I can't tell you how much I wish—that I was going to work beside you." Phil spoke very earnestly. Wightman smacked him on the shoulder.

"What's to hinder? My uncle thinks you have been ill. He got the impression that it was a sudden attack of nausea that upset you. So I told him I would call on you today. All I have to do is to report you ready for action and your place will be open for you. I can tell you I shall be glad to have you beside me. We can talk over old times together."

He rose to go and pleaded an engagement to have Christmas dinner with his uncle as an excusefor hurrying away. Phil escorted him to the door.

As the footsteps of his friend died away, Phil stood for a few moments, immersed in silent thought. Then he looked at himself in the mirror and abused himself roundly. He had been a fool and a snob, despising better men than himself. He had been a coward, and a slave to imaginery fears and ills.

He was interrupted by his father, who looked at him quizzically. "What's the matter, son?" he asked. Phil answered:

"I've just been getting to know myself for the first time, and to be candid," he added, flushing, "I don't think very much of my latest acquaintance."

"Where are you off to, asked Dr. Murchison, as Phil left the room hurriedly.

"I am looking for those old overalls of mine," answered Phil. "I'll need them on Monday."

What Is Santa Claus

Santa Claus is the spirit of Christmas. That's who he is. To say that he is only "Father" is to miss the whole idea of the "family" at Christmas time. There are two worlds. The world of reality and the unreal world. The latter has nothing to do with the body. The former has all to do with it. The unreal world is full of spirits, the spirit of kindness, the spirit of love, the spirit of forgiveness, the spirit of spiritual or ideal beauty—and bad spirits too.

Santa Claus is the spirit of family love and human kindness, dressed up in human garb. It may be father or brother or even some stranger within our gates, who wears the clothes of Santa and moves as the spirit of Christmas tells him. But without this spirit there is not and cannot be, any Santa Claus. Unless this spirit is there and directs all the movements of those who stand by the chimney piece or at the Christmas Tree there is no Santa Claus. It is a cold cheerfess giving of gifts, if even that. But it is not Santa Claus, for he alone is the spirit of Christmas, working through father or brother, who is, however, no more Santa Claus in reality than Santa Claus is father or brother. And when you hear knowing people, young or old say with a wink and a nod, or a scoff, that Santa Claus is "your father" they don't know what they are talking about. They have missed the whole "Spirit of Christmas." Tell them in a kindly way about it and they will see their mistake.

"Hark!-I hear the mysterious footfall of Santa Claus as he walks about the chimney-piece, filling the stockings. He comes but once a year and then makes father do for him what he has not time to do himself. That is the whole story and the reason he employs daddy. But unless 'father' is a fine, good, dear man, Santa Claus won't ask him to do his work and I am told that Santa always asks 'mother' first, and if she smiles sweetly and gives her consent, then all goes smoothly. If not then there's no Santa for that house and the little ones will have to go somewhere else. Let them come to our house—or perhaps we may go to theirs. Dear old Santa Claus!"

SCHOOL APPEAL IS DISMISSED

Claims of Separate School Boards Are Not Upheld.

RECEIVING GRANTS.

TORONTO, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—The appeal of the Separate School Boards of Ontario against the Crown, complaining that Separate Schools are not receiving grants of money to which they are entitled under the Act of 1863 and complaining that certain Ontario Acts contravene sections of the British North America Act was dismissed with costs today. Chief Justice Sir William Mulock and Justices Magee, Ferguson, Hodgins and Grant writing out the judgment.

Chief Justice Mulock says: "I think the rights and privileges enjoyed by the Roman Catholic schools within the meaning of the British North America Act are limited to those expressly conferred by the Legislature." Concerning the grants and the complaint that some are not being paid, he says: "The annual grants referred to are those provided by the Act respecting common schools in Upper Canada, 1859. The grants in which the Separate Schools are entitled to share are annual grants of the Legislature and other public grants, investments, and allotments for common school purposes. Such grants mean grants for division among all common schools and do not include grants of less general character as grants to particular schools."

Chief Justice Mulock disagrees with the contention that continuation and high schools are common and therefore entitled to common school grants.

"I am of the opinion," he says, that there is nothing in any Act passed since the union which prejudicially effects any rights or privileges with respect to the denominational schools which Roman Catholics had by law in the Province at the union and this petition fails."

In addition to making a success as a contractor and builder Mrs. Rosa Grots is tax collector of the English town af Bacton, clerk of the parish council and an assistant overseer of the poor.

RUSSIA SUFFERS FROM HOSTILE FOREIGN PRESS

Canadian Says Newspapers Won't Print Good Points.

LEADERS SINCERE.

Working Hard To Rehabilitate Country—Difficulties Tremendous.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—"Russia is suffering from a hostile press in the rest of Europe, particularly the press of Great Britain," said Col. Herbert J. Mackie, of Pembroke, Ontario, who returned yesterday from Europe, after spending some time in Russia. For each of the last five years Col. Mackie, whose father, the late Thomas Mackie, was a senator and the owner of a great lumber business, has been spending about eight months in Russia.

"When I came out of Russia in 1921, I met a group of correspondents at Riga," said Col. Mackie. "I was astonished that if I touched on any other subject than the sensational or what might be considered as detrimental to the Soviets, these correspondents said their home press was not interested. Today the same thing, while not quite so marked as then, is still applicable. They want to know, not what is good, but the other.

"What impresses most about Russia to-day is the sincerity of its leaders in an effort to make good their government and to give the people legislation that will rehabilitate the country. But the difficulties are tremendous as well as numerous and agitation by politicians in foreign countries is adding to the burden of the task. You will find in Russia, strong desire for the participation of American capital in industrial development, but invariably the question asked by the merchant or the industrialist of this country, as well as of England, is 'What security?'"

Miss Carrie L. McLean, who has been elected to the North Carolina legislature, is a successful lawyer and the only woman in her State ever honored with the presidency of a county bar association.

DENMARK RETURNS TO GOLD STANDARD

Adopts Measure Permitting Conversion of Danish Notes Into Gold.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.— Denmark has formally returned to the gold standard, at all events in her dealings with foreign countries. The Danish parliament to-day adopted a measure permitting the conversion of Danish notes into gold at a fixed rate, beginning January 1.

This step by Denmark was only a question of time, as the krone reached par a few months ago, but a cabinet crisis intervened early in December.

Immediately upon assuming office, the new minister of commerce, M. Slebsager, promised to do his utmost to speed up the settlement of the question before Christmas.

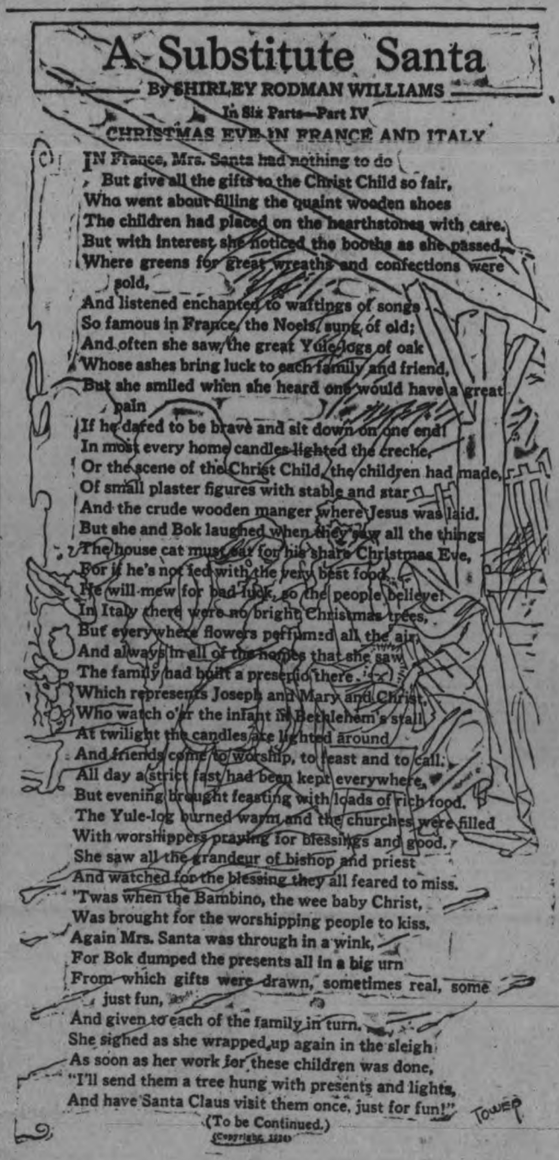
Don't let indigestion after meals, biliousness, heartburn, or dyspepsia take the pep out of you. Take Seigel's Syrup. Any drug store.

A Substitute Santa

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

In Six Parts—Part IV

CHRISTMAS EVE IN FRANCE AND ITALY



IN France, Mrs. Santa had nothing to do
But give all the gifts to the Christ Child so fair,
Who went about filling the quaint wooden shoes
The children had placed on the hearthstones with care.
But with interest she noticed the booths as she passed,
Where greens for great wreaths and confections were sold,
And listened enchanted to waftings of songs
So famous in France, the Noels sung of old;
Whose ashes bring luck to each family and friend,
But she smiled when she heard one would have a great pain
If he dared to be brave and sit down on one end!
In most every home candles lighted the creche,
Or the scene of the Christ Child, the children had made,
Of small plaster figures with stable and star
And the crude wooden manger where Jesus was laid.
But she and Bok laughed when they saw all the things
The house cat must eat for his share Christmas Eve,
For if he's not fed with the very best food
He will mew for bad luck, so the people believe.
In Italy there were no bright Christmas trees,
But everywhere flowers perfumed all the air,
And always in all of the homes that she saw
The family had built a presepio there
Which represents Joseph and Mary and Christ,
Who watch o'er the infant in Bethlehem's stall.
At twilight the candles are lighted around
And friends come to worship, to feast and to call.
All day a strict fast had been kept everywhere,
But evening brought feasting with loads of rich food.
The Yule-log burned warm and the churches were filled
With worshippers praying for blessings and good.
She saw all the grandeur of bishop and priest
And watched for the blessing they all feared to miss.
'Twas when the Bambino, the wee baby Christ,
Was brought for the worshipping people to kiss.
Again Mrs. Santa was through in a wink,
For Bok dumped the presents all in a big urn
From which gifts were drawn, sometimes real, some just fun,
And given to each of the family in turn.
She sighed as she wrapped up again in the sleigh
As soon as her work for these children was done,
"I'll send them a tree hung with presents and lights,
And have Santa Claus visit them once, just for fun!"

NO TRACE FOUND OF MISSING CAR

London Taximan Victimized By Men Who Robbed Chatham Driver.

CHANGE CARS.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 23. — No trace has been found of a new sedan, owned by the Davis Taxi Service, of London, which was taken from William Davis, proprietor, on Tuesday night, at midnight, by two armed men, who threw him out on the roadside after robbing him. The men, the same who robbed William Hughes, a Chatham taxi man, in a sensational hold-up the day before, abandoned the Chatham car near St. Johns, six miles north of London in the first stages of the events that ended in the robbery and abandonment of Davis in a swamp 2½ miles north of Strathroy. Coupled with the warning that if he raised any alarm they would fill him full of lead, the men offered the promise that if he refrained from notifying the police he would find his car within a block of his own garage in London before 9 o'clock yesterday. The car, of course, was not brought back, although the police suppressed the fact that the robbery had occurred.

Davis claims that while he was in the office of his garage on Richmond Street North, a stranger, a tall slim youth with greenish grey fedora hat and overcoat of similar color, entered and asked for a taxi immediately. Davis picked out a new seven-passenger sedan and started off with his fare. He was told to follow a small sedan north on Richmon Street his passenger claiming to be a motor car salesman. The stranger said he had sold the car ahead to the man who was driving it, that the buyer had stopped payment, and that it was the salesman's intention to follow and seize it in the buyer's garage, north of London. He said he could not take it on the highway. North of St. Johns the first car stopped, the excuse being that it was out of gasoline. Davis stopped beside it, but was presently told to get back into his own car and drive as ordered. The command was backed with two revolvers, and he complied, both men accompanying him. For three hours or more he drove north and west of London, stopping once for gas. Later near Stratchroy he was dragged over into the back seat and his pockets were rifled, $6.00 in cash and other valuables being taken. He was then thrown out on the roadside and the pair drove away with his car. Yesterday, Hughes of Chatham, came to London and claimed the abandoned machine.

Davis stated that the taller of the pair appeared to be a drug addict. The other was a thick set youth with grey cap and brown overcoat. Each man carrier two revolvers, and on the trip boasted of criminal exploits and prided themselves on how easily they had taken possession of Davis and his car. The 1926 number of the Davis car was 110,598. The machine had the name Davis in large letters on the lower sash of both front doors.

FOUR NOMINAT D

Health, he had forced vaccination at Mays school house, thus checking an epidemic which has broken out in other municipalities.

"Last year's council set aside a special area for road purposes, and although there had been no more money levied this year than was raised under the old statute labor rate the vacant lot owners had not been assessed as much, and the large land holders more. The county rate will be a little higher next year than this, on account of the raising of the equalized assessment by the county."

As regards fire protection, the reeve said that efforts had been made to co-operate with the city council, but their rate was found to be too high. He considered $150 for the first hour and $50 for the succeeding hours as an exorbitant price to ask, and he claimed that this rate was established on the cost of the fire department in the city plus the cost of the water mains. The township of Monaghan made a proposition to the city that $50 be paid for the first hour and $15 for the next succeeding hours, but the city aldermen, in their dignity, would not allow Monaghan to dictate to them.

Reeve Rye, in closing appealed to those present to elect Mr. Lillico.

R. T. Lillico reviewed the school question. He stated that he did all he could to relieve the ratepayers of Monaghan who were sending children to the collegiate, but the county had refused to give a grant. He endorsed the action of the council of 1926 in regard to the sanitary bylaw, and he thought to make it a complete success the rates should be charged against the property holders.

Ex-warden T. M. Hunter declined to accept the nomination for the reeveship, but was undecided as to whether to stand for the council or not. He thought the city of Peterborough should take a more reasonable stand with regard to fire protection, as it was in that city that the residents of Monaghan spent their money, and the city got everything except the taxes which are paid. In regard to higher education the speaker was of the opinion that it should not be charged to the ratepayers.

Robert Dobbin.

Robert Dobbin who is contesting the seat for deputy reeve, said that the present council had worked in the interests of the township, but there was only one thing that was going to get Monaghan on a solid basis and that was efficiency and economy.

Fred Wilson was undecided whether he would run or not as was G. A. Wood. It is also understood that W. T. Byers and K. M. Denoon will not run for a seat on the council, and some of the other men are undecided.

At the close of the meeting William Byers called Mr. Rye to the front and after reading a short address in which a number of the ratepayers thanked him for the splendid services which he had rendered the township, he was presented with a case of pipes. Bruce Johnston, township clerk, acted as chairman.

completion of the storm drain system in the west end. All these plans have been carried out, he said, and he had helped them along. He said that he hoped that future councils would initiate drainage systems in other parts of the City. These should all have been done years ago, he said in conclusion, stressing the fact that economy was spending money at the right time and getting value for it.

Walter Stocker

Ex-Alderman Walter Stocker referred to his record during the three and a half years he was a member of the City Council. During those years he had held the posts of chairman of the Board of Works and chairman or the Fire, Water and Light Committee. He would, if elected, take an independent view on all matters, and said he favored the use of day labor as far as possible in city contracts. This he said had proved its value on the Park street drain, saving the City $25 000. He asked the support of the electors in his campaign.

Ald. R. Denne

A promise to do the best he could for the city in which he had been born, with a reference to his past record on the City Council and the Board of Education, was made by Alderman Roland Denne, in asking the support of the electors in his campaign for re-election. He said that the Council had endeavored to spend the City's money wisely, but told the electors not to expect any reduction in taxation.

William Boulton

William H. Boulton said that a public position did not appeal to him, and that he would rather see someone else have it, but that he felt there was a service every citizen could and should give. If he should run and be elected he would deal with all problems with an open mind, endeavoring to serve the city to the best of his ability.

John E. Patte

John E. Patte was absent when his name was first called and arrived just as Mr. Armstrong was asking Mr. Stocker to lead the singing of the National Anthem. He said he had been a resident of the City off and on for 27 years and a property owner for seven years. If elected he would do his best for the city. Believing himself well qualified to hold office, he asked the support of the electors.

Immediately after the close of the meeting, Aldermen J. O. Fife and N. E. Phelan qualified, followed closely by E. A. Stinson.

This Lassie Has Her Colds "Rubbed Away"

The mother of this attractive little girl, Mrs. E. B. Emmans, of 215 Seventh Ave., N. E., Portage La Prairie, Man., is one of the many Canadian mothers who are enthusiastic about the vaporizing salve, Vicks VapoRub, for treating children's colds. Mrs. Emmans writes: "My little girl had croup at night pretty badly and Vicks did her a lot of good. I have also used it with very satisfactory results for head and chest colds."

Vicks is just "rubbed on" for sore throat, tonsilitis, bronchitis, croup or deep chest colds. When so applied, Vicks has a double direct action: internally medicated vapors are inhaled while, at the same time, externally, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin.

CANADA FACING

Their appeal for freight rate concessions were met with the argument that the Canadian National Railways was not prospering. This answer, he pointed out, came in the face of knowledge that the Intercolonial Railway was never intended to be a money-making proposition, under promises made at the time of its construction. Other railway questions were examined by the speaker. "It seems to me that they have a great deal of right on their side in railway claims," he declared.

Grievances concerning canals and immigration also found an exponent in the speaker, who said the Maritime felt they paid an annual tribute for both and got little in return. "It amounts, they feel," said the speaker, "to taxation without proportionate participation." At some length he recited that the tariff policy of the Dominion was not benefitting the Maritimes. In regard to the steel and coal industries, he submitted that the British Empire Steel Corporation, incidentally the largest corporation in the country, was in a regrettable plight because of hard economic facts and through no mismanagement.

The recommendations of the Duncan report were explained by the speaker in detail; the increased annual subsidy of $1,600,000 to the three provinces; the reduction of freight rates to the same level of other provinces; the establishment of harbor boards; granting of bounties to the steel industry to enable competition with American interests; and other proposals of importance.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THREE LOST IN FIRE

flames to the balcony with several lines of hose. As the firemen climbed another stairway, one of the walls bulged threateningly, and a warning shout was raised by the crowd of spectators that had gathered at the scene. The warning came too late and the fire-fighters were carried with the smouldering rafters, bricks and plaster, into the auditorium below. The debris blocked all avenues of retreat, and those who were not seriously hurt were compelled to claw their way through the blazing timbers and suffocating smoke.

Rescue workers fought frantically to gain entrance to the building, and several firemen and volunteers narrowly escaped death as a second wall crumbled from the opposite side. The injured were rushed to hospital and searchers were forced to abandon their hunt for the three men who failed to answer the roll call.

Not until the fire had been brought under control did the rescuers venture into the theatre. Portions of the ceiling and balcony were sustained only by charred beams, and intermittent showers of brick and plaster rendered the work doubly hazardous.

Reports last night held out little hope for the recovery of A. Smith, one of the injured, who suffered serious head burns.

It is not yet definitely known how the fire originated. The building had been vacant for the past five weeks, but a watchman was kept on the premises. It was during the watchman's temporary absence that the outbreak occurred.

FREAK LINGUISTIC CASE.

HONOLULU, Dec. 24.—A freak linguistic case came to light here recently in the court of domestic relations. Robert Soares, born here and now 11, cannot speak the language of Hawaii; that is, English, nor can he speak Portuguese, the language of his forebears. He is a fluent speaker of Japanese, however. He has lived with a Japanese couple since his parents deserted him.

Patrons Express Approval of Proposed Cold Storage.

BUNBRAE, Dec. 24.—The local cheese factories have been busy winding up business for the year. Prince of Wales Co. held its annual meeting on Friday of last week with Menie meeting on Saturday. Both gatherings of patrons expressed approval of the proposed system of cold storage in Campbellford advocated by the U.S.C. as local dairymen feel that it would be advantageous to have cooling facilities and grading stations closer at hand than Belleville. While cheese prices have not been quite up to expectations this year both companies report successful years with makes well up to the average. At the close of the cheese season, the Menie Co. shipped some whole milk to a milk powder plant at a good figure. Some of the patrons were so well pleased that they have continued shipping during December. There seems to be a scarcity of milk this fall and the demand is much greater than usual at this season of the year.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

PROTESTANT HOME.

The annual Christmas tree entertainment was held yesterday afternoon at the Protestant Home. It was a great success. Rev. J. E. Todd of George street United Church, acted as dispenser of gifts, his genial manner conforming admirably to the occasion. He was assisted by lady members of the Board of Management. Vocal solos were given by Miss Daisy Murray and humorous readings by Mrs. V. Walker; also violin selections by Arnold Spencer, with accompaniments by Miss Laura Macfarlane. The gifts were numerous and were very much apreciated by those receiving them. The tree was beautifully decorated and illuminated by Mr. Neil Hurry of Flint, Mich., formerly of this city, who sent the special decorations and illuminations for the affair.

Tea was served later by the Board members to those assisting in the programme.

ST. ANDREW'S S. S.

The Sunday School Department of St. Andrew's United Church held a very enjoyable Christmas party and treat for the children in the auditorium of the Sunday School building on Wednesday evening. A large number of the members and parents attended for a pleasant evening which had an interesting programme. Mr. Fred McNeely's class contributed an hour and a half of comic movies, followed by a programme of readings, songs and music by members of the Primary, Beginners, and Junior Departments, and a "Living Christmas Magazine," presented by the C. G. I. T. girls, who gave verses and stories appropriate to the season. Santa Claus arrived later and distributed the gifts from a well-laden tree. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McKone were in charge of the entertainment.

SHORT STORY

When Mary Anne was just a tiny girl her mother had said to her. "Always remember, dearie, that anything you want in life will come to you, so long as it is a good desire. You must just keep your mind constantly on attaining it. You must never want what belongs to someone else and you must never, under any circumstances, want anything wicked or harmful to anyone." Thus it was that the power of the mind and imagination to bring forth good things from the heart of the world was early instilled into Mary Anne's, receptive brain. And as she grew up guided by her wonderful mother, she developed an utterly trustful nature, believing in that great unseen power that works out all one's problems so simply and so easily—if one just believes in the gift before it becomes a material fact.

Also as a tiny girl Mary Anne's extraordinary beauty of spirit was manifesting itself physically. Her eyes were big pools of warm blue-gray and her hair a sheaf of waving wheat with a glint of red sunset flitting over it. Her mouth was softly curved and childlike even in her mature years and seemed always ready with innocent and untarnished words of wisdom.

Her mother and father were justly delighted with her and fostered the growing tendency to live in a world made up of friends of her imagination, yet friends whom she would one day find and love.

Of such fancy was Mary Anne's Cottage on the Hill. As early as her seventeenth year, when, unconsciously, thoughts of a mate somewhere in the world came to her, she pictured vividly the Cottage.

It would be on the top of a hill commanding a view toward all corners of the wonderful universe and must be a low, rambling bungalow type that caressed closely and securely the warm breast of the hill. There would be sentinel trees, a few of them, and just a scattering of fruit trees so that the blossoms could scent the air in the springtime and then blow out over the hilltop—little spirits of the wind.

Needless to say, when Mary Anne entered the world of men and her charm swept them headlong into loving her, she wondered which one of them might ultimately be associated with the Cottage on the Hill.

There came a day when she was slightly troubled since her suitors were becoming a tiny bit trying. She made a background of her Cottage on the hill, and one by one tried to visualize any one of the men in it, but always a flat in town or a house in the suburbs floated across the vision and left Mary Anne puzzled.

"Perhaps," she said wistfully to her mother, "perhaps God doesn't think it wise for me to have my Cottage—maybe it's one of the things I am not to have."

"You're young, dearie, and lots of good things require a long time to materialize. Why not take the trip abroad with the Elmers and come back refreshed to think things over."

Mary Anne did take the trip abroad. She went to France, to England, the Ireland and to Scotland and most of all she loved the rugged beauty of the highland country.

It was heather time on Loch Lomond and the Elmers and Mary Anne were staying at an inn on the very edge of the Loch.

And during the long, glorious evening of sunset that seemed to linger for hours on the hills, Mary Anne took a walk along the Loch side.

Suddenly Mary Anne felt her eyes being drawn upward and she stopped and held her breath.

"My Cottage on the Hill!" she cried, and couldn't quite believe that she was not dreaming.

A few yards ahead a tiny winding pathway led the way up the hill and there bathed in the glory of the setting sun was, indeed, the Cottage. It was whitewashed, with a slate roof, and lay there on the brow of the hill as if the Creator, in fashioning the hill, had put the cottage there as a finishing touch.

Mary Anne could no more have restrained her feet from following that path up the hill than she could have turned her back on all her dreams.

Then, within a short distance of the door itself and so confused with the joy of actually seeing something that had been a mind picture for nearly eight years, Mary Ann stumbled, turned her ankle and cried out swiftly with the sudden pain.

A second later a big man sprang toward her, lifted her tenderly up and carried her within the door of the Cottage on the Hill.

"The poor, wee thing—" some soft motherly voice said, and the soothing hands of a woman were attending to the business of caring for her ankle, half conscious of the big man with the burr of Scotch in his voice and the old gold of his hair and the bronze of his cheeks, hovering about with a vast and tender light in his eyes. There was also an old gentleman with silvery locks and the three of them apparently thought Mary Anne was some strange flower dropped from the sky, so lovingly did they care for her.

And suddenly Mary Anne seemed to be a tiny girl again and her own precious mother was saying to her. "Remember, dearie, that anything you want in life will come to you, so long as it is good."

And she opened her heart to that good thing which had come to her—it was in David's eyes and those of his mother and father—in that Cottage on the Hill.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

ARE YOU A BEAUTY OR AN ARTIST?

"Why don't you do an article on 'Are You a Beauty or an Artist'." When this question was propounded I was at first conscious chiefly of the fact that here was a mere man, for it was a man who asked the question, who was doing two things, first, observing with keenness the actions of women, and second, which was far more unusual, reading these talks.

So I listened respectfully, for, knowing my sex, I said to myself, "If a subject is presented by a man the women, bless 'em, are likely to take a special interest in the discussion." And this is what was in the man's mind. He had seen a flapper busily polishing her nose, painting her lips, and, yes, even "making up" her face in general, as he expressed it, in the midst of a public festivity and he was met thinking. This man has daughters of his own, lovely girls, every one of them, and this is what he would have them and other girls do.

To be a beauty in the opinion of this observant gentleman, a girl must needs have a natural complexion, with its coloring heightened by red blood corpuscles rather than rouge. "Food iron," I said to myself, with a sage nod! "And gluten bread, and lentils and bran and molasses, and greens and beans and spinach and turnip tops and corn and dates and egg yolk and lean beef and olives!"

Then the man continued: "A girl who is to be a beauty need not have regular features or what in the ordinary sense is called beauty, but she must look healthy. Her muscles must be strong so that she can play tennis as well as dance, and incidentally, she is more beautiful when dancing the waltz than the Charleston!"

"Protein foods in proportion," I murmured at this juncture. "Whole milk and nuts and lean steaks and roasts in moderation and whole wheat and white bread and cheese!"

"But what about the artist part of it?" I interpolated.

"Oh, that!" said the man. "Well, isn't a woman who makes up her face skillfully an artist in one sense?" To which I replied fervently. "Undoubtedly!"

"Well, there you are!" Thus, with masculine brevity, closing the topic!

But it had set me thinking! Let us not, of course, go back to Victorian times when a fifteen-cent can of "powder," innocent talcum, though it might be, was counted a sinful extravagance. Exquisite grooming is an uplifting force for our very souls, but why not ponder on what this man has to say?

Why not just try the experiment of ascertaining what may be accomplished by food and diet and exercise and fresh air and recreation and work, all used and proportioned to make a harmonious whole?

It is dry work thinking only of the chemical side of diet. Dull, indeed, to apply ourselves to the task of "dieting" unless we are to reap suitable rewards therefor. And what greater reward for the average woman than to have a man say she is beautiful?

These numbers replace Nos. 1831 and 1230, unclaimed at the time of to-day's draw.

Should there be no claim for the new numbers by Monday next, a further draw will take place from the remaining stubs at the regular weekly euchre drive on Wednesday evening next. The draw will be continued until a winner has been declared.

The officers and members of the Canadian Legion, Peterborough Branch No. 52, wish to extend to the citizens of the City of Peterborough the heartiest season's greetings, to thank them for their support during the past year, and to say that the renovated quarters are about ready for re-occupation. To all those citizens of Peterborough who are eligible for membership an invitation is extended; to all participants in the late war particularly this invitation should appeal. Should the Canadian Legion not live then the last opportunity of the returned men to secure redress through an organization of veterans will be lost. — C. Ackerman, President, Canadian Legion B.E.S.L., Branch No. 52, Peterborough.

The Monkey Cage

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

MOST folks include the big apes, the chimpanzees, gorillas and orangoutangs under the name of "monkeys" when as a matter of fact it's a wrong usage for there is more difference in physical structure between the monkeys and the apes than between the apes and man. The monkey's native home is the warm regions of both hemispheres. They live in communities in the trees with a wise old male for a chief. When in captivity they are happier in groups in cages than alone, for they like company and fun. In the forest morning and evening seems to be monkey playtime for they leap and swing and chase each other through the trees like a bunch of school boys. Because they are so droll and companionable they never fail to attract a crowd of children, big and little ones, at the zoo.

AT the zoo, to guard the monkeys
There's a tall fence made of wire,
And it's there we hang and watch them
All the day and never tire.
There's a funny monkey, Jocko.
And his little monkey cousins,
With his aunties and his uncles
And relations by the dozens
Who jump and clamber in and out
And all the time they climb about
They jabber, jabber, jabber.

Our most favorite monkey, Jocko,
Seems to know a treat we're bringing
'Cause he reaches through the wires,
By his great long tail a-swinging;
And then he tries to thank us
By his chatter loud and frantic,
And politely entertain us
With some specially funny antics.
Then while he feasts there on a limb
The others beg a bite from him,
And jabber, jabber, jabber.

Wheat Suffers Setback On Heavy Deliveries

CHICAGO, December 24.(Canadian Press.) — Heavy new deliveries on December wheat contracts here led to an early setback in wheat values to-day. Word that an unofficial estimate of the Argentine exportable surplus of wheat has been largely increased, tended also to weaken the prices.

Opening unchanged to 7-8 off, the Chicago wheat market underwent a moderate general decline, but then rallied somewhat. Corn and oats were also easier, corn starting unchanged to 1-4 off and subsequently sagging all around. Provisions showed strength.

Opening prices were:

Wheat, December, 139 3-4; May 140 3-8; corn, December, 73 1-8; May 81 5-8; oats, December, 45 3-8; May 50.

Amulet and Noranda Active In Mine Market

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Amulet and Noranda were leaders in the general upturn on the standard mining exchange this morning when the volume of trading continued heavy despite the fact that it was a pre-holiday session, the exchange closing at noon. Amulet climbed 10 to 2.00 and Noranda 55 at 23.75. Moderate gains were scattered through the whole list. Duprat firmed 2 1-2 at 31 1-2, Area five at 94 1-2, Tough Oakes two at 54, and Laval Quebec, still an active leader, gained 1 1-2 at 38.

Quiet Holiday Session With Few Price Changes

TORONTO, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press). — The quieter pre-holiday session of the Toronto Stock Exchange which adjourned at 12.30 p.m. today, effected few drastic price changes. After a slack opening the majority of issues firmed at or about their yesterday's close. British Columbia Fishing, after dropping to 81 3-4, finished with a net gain of half a point at 85 1-2. British American Oil improved 3-4 at 80 3-4. Industrial Alcohol remained soft, finishing another 3-4 lower at 28 3-4. Brazilian strengthened 7-8 to 104 3-8 and Atlantic Sugar firmed to 30 7-8. Gooderham and Worts opened strong at 45 1-4, but eased to 44 3-4 at the close unchanged. Seagrams was steady at 16 1-2 and Imperial Oil and International Petrol firmer at 38 and 32 5-8.

Stock Market Shows Gain In To-day's Session

NEW YORK, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press)—The stock market showed the traditional "Christmas Spirit" today by moving upward under the leadership of high priced industrial shares. A few soft spots cropped out in various sections of the list, but these were disregarded by operators working for higher prices, who based their campaign on the prospect of further special dividend distributions by large corporations.

The scarcity in the floating supply of many high grade issues indicated that large blocks of stock had been taken out of the market by investors during the past few weeks, making it difficult for "shorts" to cover commitments except at advancing prices. Gains of two to five points were quite common.

The upward movement received fresh impetus during the early afternoon, when the call money rate was lowered from 6 to 5 1-2 per cent. It had been expected in some quarters that the higher rate would be maintained until after the first of the year. Wall Street generally was in holiday mood, due to the wide spread distribution of Christmas bonuses among the larger banking institutions and brokerage houses.

General Motors, after being comparatively dormant for some time, was in brisk demand and sold at least four points above yesterday's final quotations.

(By F. D. C.)

A clean cut victory over the North Toronto team was registered by the Peterboro seniors in the initial local O.H.A. game of the season at Brock Street rink last night when Eddie Wright's senior O.H.A. champs defeated the new senior entry 7 goals to 1.

The blue and white led all the way, in fact they came within a few second of scoring a shutout, the solitary North Toronto marker being registered just before the final bell.

North Toronto were without the services of several regulars including Tracey Shaw, but although these players might have helped to cut down the Petes' margin the stuff shown by the winners would have been enough to have beaten the visitors at full strength.

The Petes had too much speed, puck-carrying cleverness, combination and checking ability for the North Toronto crew. They played smart hockey on the attack and the poke checking barrage laid across the ice by the blue and white forwards, coupled with steady work by the defence pair and Dwyer's fine goal keeping made the game a tough proposition for the visiting attackers, although to give them credit they tried until the finish and were finally rewarded with a goal.

It was a nice exhibition of hockey as it should be played, fast and clean all the way. Not a mean move was made by any of the sixteen players and Referee Mike Rodden's penalty sheet went without a mark on it, the sixty minutes passing without a man being banished.

North Toronto were not by any means outclassed. Led by the sturdy Jack Cain who played a whale of a game going both ways the visitors showed plenty of speed and they uncorked more than one smart attack, that with a little more luck might have been rewarded by goals. They lacked the combination shown by the Petes, however, and the smart checking of the blue and white tangled up their individual rushes badly.

The Petes led by 3 to 0 at the end of the first twenty minutes, got the only marker in the second period and ran in three more goals in a row in the last session before Graham, North Toronto sub, averted a shutout for his team by an accurate shot as the puck came to him from a scrimmage in the corner.

The most pleasing feature of the game, from a Peterboro standpoint, was the consistent passing done by the senior champs. Most of their goals were the result of combination play and they worked inside all night on clever passing, the kind of stuff that wins games. Ken Kane was perhaps the only blue shirt who showed a tendency to hang on to the rubber too long, but he'll soon learn to fit into the team work that is necessary. The rest were thoroughly unselfish, four of the seven goals following snappy combination.

To pick out individual stars on last night's showing would be neither easy or wise. The three starting forwards, Ranger, Collins and Bogardis played clever hockey, both on the attack and their clever checking at centre ice, which disorganized the North Toronto rushes and enabled the local line to get away repeatedly. Young Eddie Williams went well whenever called upon and Kane showed some neat stickhandling. Ray Rose and Bert McLeod teamed up effectively on the defence and both rushed to great advantage, Rose packing in two clever goals and McLeod registering another after coming close three or four times. As for Joe Dwyer he was unbeatable until Graham's shot finally fooled him in the last few seconds. He blocked long shots and smothered the close-in ones in great style all through the piece.

Jack Cain was North Toronto's outstanding performer. He not only checked well but he was the visitors' most successful puck-carrier and he tried time after time to work his way through for a goal. Heyd and Bousfield were the best of the forwards while Courtney, although beaten seven times had a host of nice saves to his credit, often when his defence had been beaten.

How It All Happened.

The game opened without much fireworks and the first really dangerous threat was made by Gibbs, who stickhandled inside, only to be fooled by Dwyer. Two minutes after the first bell Ray Rose started the Petes on their way to victory when he shot down the centre of the ice and let drive as he reached the North Toronto defence. The puck rifled into the net before Courtney could move.

It was fast hockey for the balance of the period, with the visitors attempting to meet the Petes' combination with individual dashes. On one of these Heyd cleverly worked in on top of Dwyer, but the Petes' captain made a fine save. The Petes missed several good opportunities or were fooled by Courtney. Finally however, their persistence was rewarded when Collins and Ranger combined neatly. Courtney blocked Collins' shot and also saved when Ranger snapped the rebound at him. Bogardis, however, secured and shot from the side and Courtney pulled the rubber down into the net, giving the Petes their second goal.

A nice rush by Eddie Williams and a neat pass at the right moment to Ranger enabled the Petes' left winger to beat Courtney at close range for the final goal of the period.

Early in the second session Bogardis increased the lead when he broke up a North Toronto rush at mid-ice and beat the defence pair, to score on a close-in shot. The clever play was responsible for the only goal of the period. The poke checking of Ranger, Collins and Bogardis featured the balance of the session. Repeatedly they halted the visitors at mid-ice and broke away on their own account for dangerous attacks, which came within an ace of scoring.

The last period saw the Petes going great guns. Five minutes after the session began Ranger and Rose combined for a beautiful goal. Rose took the last pass close in, and although he was tripped as he shot and slid into the end of the rink, his swift drive into the open side of the net gave Courtney no chance. Rose also figured prominently in the next goal which was exclusively a defence affair. McLeod broke away and Rose teaming up with him took the pass and slammed in a hot one which Courtney blocked, only to have McLeod bat the rebound past him.

Kane bagged the Petes last counter on a solo effort. He secured the puck at centre, skated around the North Toronto defence and circling across the net beat Courtney easily.

The game was almost over when North Toronto averted a shutout. From a mix-up in the Petes' corner the rubber slid out to Graham in front of the net and his fast shot eluded Dwyer. The bell rang immediately after.

The Petes play the Marlboros in Toronto on Monday night and will be seen in action at home on Thursday when they meet Toronto Canoe Club here. The hockey shown by them last night should ensure a capacity crowd for the next battle.

RICKARD SUED BY HOCKEY CLUB

Excessive Heat Hampers Players Attired in Heavy Pads.

ARENA TOO WARM

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Canadian hockey stars have been hampered by what they term the "excessive" heat of the Madison Square Garden, it was revealed yesterday, when the New York Hockey Club, incorporated, brought suit against Tex Rickard and officers of the Garden.

In two petitions filed in the supreme court the club asked for an injunction to restrain Rickard and his associates from permitting the mercury to rise over 40 degrees fahrenheit, while the team is playing on the Garden ice.

On occasions, the petition said, the temperature rose to 60 degrees.

That, it was argued, was too warm for players attired in heavy pads and militated against a fast game.

COLLINS SIGNS WITH ATHLETICS

Former Sox Manager Goes Back to First Love.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 24.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, yesterday announced that Eddie Collins, former manager of the Chicago White Sox, had signed a contract to play second base for the Athletics.

Collins broke into major league ball with Mack's team and after a lapse of twelve years finds himself back with them. Mack sold him to the White Sox in 1914 for $50,000 when he broke up his famous $1000,000 infield. Collins is 29 years old.

TY COBB ASKS AMERICAN KIDS TO KEEP FAITH

Always Kept in Mind Obligation to Hero Worshipping Kids.

MORE SENTIMENT

Declines to Comment on Possibility of Third Major Circuit.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 24.—The baseball-loving "kids" of America, were asked by Ty Cobb yesterday, to keep their faith in him.

In an exclusive interview with the United Press, Cobb said he would like to send a message to the "youth of America."

"I want the youngsters to know that I always kept in mind my obligation to the hero worship kids of America, for I was once a kid myself. The last thing in the world I want to know is that they have have lost their faith in me," Cobb said.

"I want the kids of the country to know that I always tried to be everything they thought I was. I never broke that trust.

"The great American baseball fan is the youngster. The kids have simply got to believe in me."

Ty arrived home from Chicago yesterday. He no sooner stepped inside the door of his home than the 'phone began to ring, and neighbors started to call.

The whole staged a celebration last night and a banquet is scheduled for today.

"Ty Cobb's hometown believes in him," read a banner which one merchant had nailed above his store front.

That was the sentiment everywhere.

Cobb declined to comment on the possibility of a third circuit in which he and Tris Speaker would be the dominant figures.

"I don't believe it feasible at this time," he said.

More than any other one thing, Cobb wants to put across the idea he and Speaker didn't get a fair deal.

"I think the fans of the country want the whole thing opened up, so everybody can see," he said. "They should see that Speaker and I have been woefully mistreated. To think that two of the men who worked so hard to make baseball what it is should get such treatment sickens me."

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

The same to you and many of them, Mac. And that goes for all the customers, too. If they been wading through this column of banana oil all year they oughta have a chance to be merry 1 day in the year anyhow.

I hope they all gets their stockings well filled tomorrow. I know some of them has them well filled all the time far as I can see, and I ain't short-sighted neither.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, I suppose you'll be expecting some chatter on the Thurs. game with North Toronto. The lads sure win the favour of the fans with the way they strutted their stuff in that set-too. They stayed on the ice, and most of them seemed to have drunk in the idea that it don't matter a red hoot who gets the goals as long as they is got. This young man Mister Kane was a bit inclined to forget that he had company out there with him, but he'll get over that.

Mister Wright's athaletes, too, are apparently over what the scientists would call their small rink complex. They looked more at home out there Thurs. than they has for a long time, and they ain't no reason I can see why they can't go right along winning on the local ice-box.

Anyway they made a good start. Next week they tackle the Marlboros in Toronto, and then Toronto Canoe Club seniors back here Thurs. Both games should be rattlers, and if the Petes can tuck them away in the old stick bag—and why not?—they'll have a nice lead to carry over into the New Year.

The Thurs. game'll help put the boys in good shape for their clash with the Marlboros. With Mister Joe Primeau as their ace, the former Saint Mary's has a smart club, but I'm picking the Wright entry to take them.

Our ex-fellow townsman, Mister Irvin Bailey, has been getting into the headlines since my last letter. A clash with Mister Conacher 1 night and a run in with Mister Cleghorn the next is a pretty busy menu for a bird what don't weigh 165 in his birthday suit. Any guy what'll pick out them 2 bimboes to start a argument with would tackle a Chicago bootlegger's machine gun crew with a toy shovel. Mister Bailey always had plenty of courage, but he don't need to try to lick all the big fellows in the cash and carry circuit to prove it.

I see where a bird proposes to do away with goalkeepers in order to give the pro customers a chance to see a goal scored once and a while. Up to the other night in Boston it looked as if them St. Pats could get along with 1 set of nets. Just give them a cage at 1 end of the ice to defend and that's all they'd need. 1 to shoot into wouldn't mean much to them guys, or at least it hasn't in most of the games they've played. However, for Mister Bailey's sake, local fans is pulling for the Toronto gang to get going, and a few games like they pulled in Boston would soon bring them up the ladder.

Well, Mac, the customers will all be wanting to finish their shopping and find out if they ain't a chance that the vendor might have chartered a special train to take care of the last minute orders, so I won't bother them with any more applesauce this week.

I'll just wish them all a very merry Christmas and scribble the well-known signature,

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

CONACHER STARS AS AMERICANS BEAT PIRATES

Leads New Comrades To 2-0 Victory Over Old Team Mates.

BOSTON WINS.

Ottawa Wins 1-0 Game From Rangers—Canadiens Beat Cougars.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.— It's a good thing Tom Duggan grabbed big Lionel Conacher for his New York Americans a week or so ago, for the young giant defence man played rings around his old comrades from Pittsburgh last night, and the star-spangled team won its second stranght victory. The Pirates were sent off the end of the plank by a score of 2 to 0.

Conacher was the whole show, or nearly so. On a brilliant dash of his in the second period, he almost knocked down Worters, the Pirate goalie with a terrific shot and Norman Himes drove in the puck for what proved to be the winning score. But to make matters more binding, Connie cut loose in the third and unassisted ran the whole length of the ice and caged another shot by a brilliant individual effort. The Pirate defence men saw him coming, and it was "low bridge" for he went like a whirlwind, and blasted the disc past Worters faster than the eye could follow.

Charlie Langlois, the old New York favorite, who was traded for Conacher was in the game, but the lanky Lionel outclassed him. Just before the first puck was faced, Billy Burch and the other Americans gave Langlois a Christmas present. It acted as all presents do, on the ball field or in hockey, with reverse English. The teams:

Americans— Forbes, goal; Conacher and Simpson defence; Burch, centre; A. McKinnon and H. Green; wings; S. Green, Reise, Bouchard, Himes, Scott and Roach, substitutes.

Pittsburgh — Worters, gaol; J. McKinnon and Langlois, defence; Milks, centre; Darragh and Arbour, wings; McGuire, Drury, ?. Smith, McCurry, and White substitutes.

Referee—Dr. "Jerry" Laflamme, Toronto.

CANADIENS 3, DETROIT 2.

WINDSOR, Dec. 24.— A rough game went into overtime before Joliat sent home the puck to give the Canadiens a 3 to 2 victory over Detroit Cougars in a National Hockey League game last night. Morenz and Mantah scored the other goals for the Montreal man, while the Cougar tallies were the work of Shepherd and Oatman.

Detroit was handicapped in the overtime by the fact that first Arbour and Kitchen were in the penalty box, Kitchen was off the ice when the deciding score was made. There was a total of nineteen penalties and much roughness. Morenz earned three stays in the box, one of which Referee Lou Marsh at first indicated as a major. He reduced the sentence, however, on consideration.

Morenz and Leduc stood out for the visitors, besides Joliat. Leduc was a flash with brilliant single efforts, and teamed effectively with Morenz.

Boston 2; Montreal 1

MONTREAL, Dec. 24 — Boston Bruins provided a National Hockey League upset for Montrealers here last night when they nosed out the Montreal Maroons 2 to 1 in as wild and weird a game as has been seen here his season. With the Bruins handicapped by a long campaign in the past two weeks and looking slack in the early stages, the Christmas crowd of 7,000 fans were all set for an easy Maroon win.

But Boston came to life in the latter part of the first period and developed a scrappy game which allowed them to overcome the Maroons' early tally by Broadbent, Herberts and "Red" Stuart culminating a fighting combination play with the goals that brought victory.

The game was continually delayed by the referees' whistle as infringements followed in quick succession. The arbiters were roundly hooted by the fans for their leniency.

Eddie Shore drew the wrath of the crowd on his head for an attack on Nelson Stewart after he had floored the Maroon centre in a rush on the Boston goal. It brought a major penalty and a fine to Shore and a major to Stewart, the latter's third of the season, which placed him under automatic suspension, subject to the pleasure of the league president.

Ottawa 1; Rangers 0

OTTAWA, Dec. 24 — Ottawa's Senators proved their strength as leaders of the International section of the National Hockey League by trouncing the American section, leading New York Rangers in a titanic battle here last night. A goal by the Senators' veteran forward, Cy. Dennenay, after a pass from Dutch Nighbor, gave the locals a one goal advantage six minutes and 40 seconds after the opening gong. The remainder of the stirring contest was scoreless.

The Senators had the edge on the battle for the first thirty minutes and worked with a driving combination attack that held the visitors at bay. Near the end of the middle period, however after a previously strong Ottawa forward line seemed to lose its checking strength, Rickard's men kept shots pounding in on the winners' citadel but the majority of them were long dribbling shots that could not penetrate the Ottawa defence.

TOMMY HOLMES' PAPERS HELD UP

Young V. C. Winner Must Wait Few Days For Hearing.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24—"Tommy" Holmes, the gallant Owen Sound lad who won the Victoria Cross for valor in France, must wait a few more days for the verdict of the Canadian Pensions Board concerning his case. Ottawa officials are very anxious to see that he gets generous consideration, and are prepared to do everything within their power to speed the machinery.

Yesterday Dr. R. J. Kee, Senior Medical Adviser of the Board of Pension Commissioners, telephoned Toronto to learn what had become of the medical report on the condition of the war hero. He was advised that the report had not left the Toronto office, and that the opinion of an independent medical authority was being secured. When the papers reach Ottawa, reassessment of Holmes's disability will be proceeded with at once.

PRESIDENT OF C.P. RAILWAY ISSUES WARNING

Railways' Prosperity Threatened By Demands For Higher Pay.

DIFFERENT IN U. S.

Addresses Ontario Commercial Travelers at London.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 24. — President E. W. Beatty, of the C.P.R., guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Ontario Commercial Travellers' Association here last night, issued an ominous warning of the consequences he asticipates if Canadian railway workers are to claim fu ther wage increases every time th scale advances in the United States. President Beatty did not argue for anything less than fair wage, but counselled a prudent moderation of the tendency to grasp for more just at a moment when the Canadian railways begin to feel the benefits of improved conditions in the country.

"Your railways are not prosperous, and have not been osperous since the war ended," he said. "It is true they have improved their position, the National Railways having substantially reduced their deficits, and the Canadian Pacific showing in 1926 a larger margin of safety after charges than in any year since 1917. We all hoped that this progress would continue, that the railways would not only keep step with any forward movement but in addition extend their facilities without exhausting borrowings in order to make an even greater contribution to the countrys prosperity.

"Two things have intervened," Mr. Beatty continued, "to make us apprehensive that this prospect will not be as good as we had hoped. The first is the numerous applications for increases in wages, which if granted, will add many millions to the payrolls of the companies; and, second, applications for decreased rates, which, if conceded, will take almost an equivalent number of millions from the company's earnings. No railway officer will deny the right of railway labor to fair wages, but neither can he concede that labor rates should inevitably be determined by those in the United States where living conditions are different and where earnings of the roads average two and a half times per mile more than those of the Canadian roads."

Grain Shipments on Lakes.

Describing conditions 41 years ago when the last spike was driven in the construction of the C.P.R. which resulted in the uniting of the various provinces of Canada into one Confederation, Mr. Beatty drew the attention of his audience to the fact that at that time the annual yield of grain west of the Great Lakes was 10,960,000 bushels. Today the total was 810,000,000 bushels while in the period from August 1 to December 20 of the current year, deliveries of wheat alone at country points had amounted to 258,000,000 bushels. Forty-one years ago the first export grain shipments from the head of the lakes had been loaded into a single boat; to-day a fleet of approximately 200 grain ships plied the Great Lakes. This immense development had been greatly aided, if not made possible, he said, by the actions of corporations with their officers who were loyal Canadians of vision and the initiative of equally patriotic individuals.

In conclusion, Mr. Beatty told the delegates that he regarded them as occupying a very important and influential position as business ambassadors from one part of the country to the other. They were, he thought, in a more favorable position to appreciate the problems and views of other sections of the country than those in which they lived and to communicate accurately and without prejudice their views to others. They were probably the most effective media of interchange of views of any body of men in the country and they could do much to forward this understanding.

Col. Geary Speaks.

Lieut.-Col. G. R. Geary, K.C., M.P., of Toronto, who shared with President Beatty the outstanding assignments of the travellers' program, devoted himself in responding to Canada and the Empire to a serious view of some of the aspects of the recent Imperial Conference report.

"I hope and pray and believe," he said, "that even in the years to come when one rises to reply to a toast of this sort that it will not be just to Canada, but still to Canada and the Empire."

He said that he did not believe that any great change had been made in the status of the overseas Dominions and he found no fault with the motives of those who had engaged in the London parley, but he does feel apprehensive of the consequences of committing to writing the unwritten constitution of the Empire. This he feared may open the door to misunderstandings of its meaning on the part of friend and foe alike.

"Unfortunately," he continued, "some of the proponents of independence have welcomed the document,not because it goes far enough to suit them, but perhaps because it gives them a new hope for the future. I do not welcome any doctrine which contends that the British Empire has ceased to exist."

FRIENDLESS EXILE SLAIN IN WINDSOR

Man Killed Was Former Favored Member of Italian Court.

WINDSOR, December 24. — Friendless and poor, Peter Isadore Busette, 62 years old, once a favored member of Court of Italy and voluntarily exiled from his native land for 35 years, was buried by the St. Vincent de Paul Society, Windsor, yesterday while the police were seeking the man who killed him.

Busette's death on Saturday resulted from a fractured skull suffered when he was knocked to the pavement at Pitt street and Ouellette Avenue, Windsor by an unidentified man. Busette was standing by the curb when the stranger walked up to him and said: "What business have you coming to Windsor to look for work? You belong over at Ford with the rest of the foreigners."

Busette replied that he was not looking for work. As he turned away the stranger struck him on the jaw. His death occurred a few minutes later.

Papers found in Busette's room by Sam Low, manager of the Carling Brewing Company by which he was employed, and remarks made to Low in the past, established the fact that Busette had belonged to the Italian nobility 35 years ago; that he had been a sculptor and a major in the Italian Army.

He first went to Montreal and later to Port Arthur. Ten years ago he moved to Windsor.

GRAFT CHARGES HURT RUNNERS

Bootlegger Announces Retirement From Business in U. S.

NO PROFIT.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 24.—"The enforcement of prohibition in the United States has grown so strict that the business is becoming increasingly difficult to handle," said Albert A. Charboneau, who is registered at the Halifax Hotel here as from London, England.

"I am quitting the business," he continued. "The graft charges and costs of landing a cargo are so high as to cut seriously into the profits and will effectively kill the business more effectively than the repeal of the Volstead Act."

Mr. Charboneau is an alert-looking young man, well groomed and showing little trace of the pinch of poverty. He says he is a New Yorker and knows the liquor situation better than most men, because at one time he operated 40 rum-runners off the American coast. He arrived in Halifax on Monday on the Red Cross liner, Silvia, from St. John's, Nfld.

KNIGHTS ENTERTAIN ORPHAN CHILDREN

Kiddies From Shelter and St. Vincent's, Guests at Party.

Children from the Shelter of the Children's Aid Society and from St. Vincent's, Orphanage, totalling about sixty altogether, were guests of the Knights of Columbus last evening in the K. of C. Hall on Simcoe Street, at a very jolly Christmas tree party, which the small boys and girls seemed to enjoy immensely. The big hall was decorated for the occasion in the Christmas fashion, and the large tree was glowing with tinsel and holly and colored lights, and the burden of gifts for the children, distributed by Santa Claus in person, assisted by Mr. George Lynch. Grand Knight A. Costello was in charge of arrangements.

The big event for the children was the moving picture programme, with one of the funny "Buster Brown" comedies, for which the Knights were indebted to the managers of the Regent Theatre. The boys from St. Vincent's Orphanage also provided an entertainment of songs and recitations, and the children were welcomed by the K. of C. lecturer, Mr. F. J. Overend.

Each of the little girls in the party received from the tree a pair of pure wool mittens, handkerchiefs and a doll, the older girls also being presented with handsome Eversharp pencils and chains. The boys each received a pure wool sweater, a hockey stick, and the bag of assorted candies, nuts and fruit which also went to each of the girls.

The Sisters from the Orphanage and Mrs. D. Rogers, matron of the Shelter, who accompanied the children, received boxes of chocolates. The children were brought to the hall and returned home in motor buses.

REV. D. S. K. BYRNE GOING TO FLORIDA

Says Holder of Notes Must Wait Till Money is Secured.

TORONTO, Dec. 24 — David S. Byrne, who is being sued by Cameron Husband on three promissory notes, said yesterday that, in company with his solicitor, S. H. Bradford, K.C., he would go to Florida in January and claim the assets of the estate to which he says he is entitled.

Asked yesterday if he still thought that he had the fortune coming to him as it is twenty years since he first made the announcement to the press, David S. Kidd Byrne replied: "Why, of course, I do." He said Mr. Husband, according to the terms of his own agreement, must wait for the sale of the Byrne estate before he can realize on his notes. He said he was made a Doctor of Divinity through the Chicago Ministerial Council.

APPEAL TO GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, Dec. 23 (United Press). — John L. Clements, a live stock broker, has made a plea to the gangsters of Chicago that he be given information as to the whereabouts of his brother's body, as a Christmas present.

"I am sure my brother, Hilary, is dead, taken for a ride," Clements said.

"But we have not any idea where his body is, and the suspense is killing mother and Hilary's wife. If there are any good sports in the gang that took him for a ride, I wish they would speak up."

According to the live stock broker, his brother gave up dealing in illegal liquor last summer and has been in constant fear of his life since that time.

Hilary disappeared December 16th.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

COLORFUL STORY OF MIDDLE AGES

FAMOUS SABATINI NOVEL

Full of Romance, Drama and Colorful Swashbuckling—Has Noted Cast

Just like the "The Big Parade" by the same director so thoroughly caught the spirit of war and transferred it to the screen with its pathos, grim humor and drama, now does "Bardelys the Magnificent," King Vidor's latest production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer capture the spirit of the colorful, romantic, swashbuckling era of the middle ages, 'the days of old, when knights were bold."

"Bardelys" is everything that could be desired in the way of screen entertainment. It is a spectacle picture, which means that it employs thousands of men and women, horses and vehicles, to gain its effects, but it is not a spectacle in the sense that the humans around whom the drama revolves are never subordinated to the mass effect.

Gilbert Courtier.

John Gilbert, the star, is seen in a distinctly new screen characterization. He has the title role of "Bardelys", the handsome courtier "who could win any woman he set his mind to" and was not above boasting of it. And just such boasting leads him into a wager that the fair heroine Roxalanne played by Eleanor Boardman, is susceptible to his wiles.

An amazing series of adventures follows. Hardly has the fair Roxalanne been brought into a plastic mood when we see Bardelys about to be sentenced to death as a traitor to his king and his rival, the treacherous Chatellerault, portrayed by Roy D'Arcy, leading Roxalanne to the altar.

But to the altar is as far as the villainous Chatellerault gets. Bardelys, who is able to vault over a line of charging spearsmen, scale a wall at least one hundred feet high, swim raging rivers on horseback, and do a few other stunts, somehow eludes the hangman's noose and we find him reinstated with the king and the beauteous Roalanne on his arm.

Vidor's picture is another contribution to classics of the sreeen. It has the fascinating plot twists of "The Sea Hawk," the sweep of romance and color of "The Thief of Bagdad," the dramatic qualities of 'Scaramouche", and yet is totally unlike all of these.

The work of the supporting cast is flawless. Special credit must go to Karl Dane, who won his comedy spurs in "The Big Parade," George K. Arthur, Arthur Lubin, and John T. Murray. The cast includes Max Barwyn, Emile Chautard Daniel G. Tomlinson, Joseph Marba, John T. Murray, Fred Malatesta, Edward Connelly, Theodore von Eltz, Emily Fitzroy and Lionel Belmore.

"Bardleys the Magnificent" comes to the Capitol for the first half of next week.

"THE TWO-GUN MAN."

The title of this picture is exceptionally appropriate, but the action, although filmed with a Western background, is not of the stereotyped order in any sense. Fred Thomson, as Fred Randall, is a real "two-gun man." There is something really exciting and very thrilling in the way he handles his brace of six shooters, and the scene in the ranch house, where the level-eyed young man holds at bay a dozen of his enemies, is well worth seeing, on account of the atmosphere of reality injected into it by the likeable hero and his type of acting.

Fred Randall is the son of a man who has been scourged and defeated by enemies. His cattle have been stolen and he dies with the knowledge full of him that his wealth has been dissipated by villainous rivals and his son left to carry on the war. Fred Randall does this in a peculiar way. He steals back his own cattle from the range, then is employed by Buck Johnston, the villain of the piece, to bring them back. Buck does not know the son of his ancient enemy, and the latter delivers the cattle and collects the cash reward at the point of his two guns, facing the enemy in his own ranch house. Riding double, his sweetheart, also a hostage of Johnston, clinging to him on the back of the mighty horse, Silver King, he gets away, and there is another unexpected touch of comedy in the manner in which he delivers his pursuers into the hands of the waiting sheriff and his men.

It is a likeable picture, with magnificent scenery as a setting for its interesting action.—Jeanette.

KEN MAYNARD GALLOPS INTO FAME AT PREMIERE OF PALACE PICTURE

Film Critic Who Disliked Cowboy Stories Won by Finishing Acting of Daredevil Star

Ken Maynard galloped onto the screen of the Regent Theatre last night in a brisk, punchy picture, called "The Unknown Cavalier" and immediately all our old distaste for Westerns trotted down the long lane of forgotten and forgiven prejudices.

The new star of the West is not only one of the best stunt riders that ever wore chaps (Ringling Brothers made him their star broncho buster in the circus days before the war) but he is a finished actor as well.

We couldn't decide whether the highlight of the show was when Ken was riding four horses at once, beating up a bunch of bandits, or simply standing still, tied to a tree in a scorching desert, giving one of the most polished bits of pantomime screened in months. The whole show is a knockout. It made us realize that a cowboy picture can be as interesting as the biggest special or the most sophisticated screen plays. Kathleen Collins, David Torrence, Otis Harlan and James Mason head the excellent supporting cast.

First National has found some bully new blood for the movies and Ken Maynard's demoniac devilties on horseback will set your own blood tingling whether you're sixty or six — but especially if you're sixteen.

Al Rogell is hereby promoted to the rank of one of the ten best directors in the business for his excellent job on "The Unknown Cavalier." Charles R. Rogers is to be congratulated on the smoothness and finish of the whole production, and Ken Maynard—well, Ken will certainly soon be crowned the King of Cowboys.

HOLD MEETING.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—The reported attitude of Commissioner Landis whose failure to make a ruling in the present baseball case was said to be due to the opinion that none is needed, inasmuch as the principals, Cobb, Speaker, Leonard and Wood, are all out of organized baseball, is striking no responsive chord among Detroit baseball fans.

After an impromptu meeting of friends of Cobb here last night, a telegram was despatched to the Commissioner by Joseph Benjamin, a prominent merchant, declaring Landis should tell the public whether he thinks Cobb and Speaker innocent or guilty.

PIRATES OF AIR CAUSE TROUBLE

Many Good Ways of Dealing With Such Stations.

In radio as well as practically every other phase of business or life there are those who prey upon others, not inflicting any bodily harm but causing much inconvenience to transmitter and receiver alike.

These people are known as pirates, getting this name because of their failure to abide by the wave length allotted them, using anyone they so desire and ultimately stealing it from some other station. As power is a big factor in radio transmission one might easily change its wave length and with sufficient power, affect the broadcast of the original station having the same wave length, but of less power.

You have no doubt experienced a certain mumbled signal at a certain place on the dial. This has been discovered to be caused by two stations with the same or nearly the same wavelength, which are, as it were, riding each other.

Many good suggestions have been advanced for fighting such conditions and some have even been tried out with gratifying results. Recently, station and some have even been tried out with WGN of Chicago was granted an injunction against WGES of the same city because the latter assumed a wave length which interfered with WGN.

The pirate stations are being blacklisted by a great many artists because if they broadcast over these stations, they will be refused by other "fair" stations.

There is a movement on in the United States whereby the next Legislature will be asked to deal with these wave-jumpers.

WEDDING BELLS.

GOULD—BROWN.

On Wednesday, December 22 at 11 o'clock the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown, Norwood, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their only daughter Eva Margaret, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Joseph W. Gould, the elder son of Mrs. Blanche Gould of Hastings, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. M. L. Hinton.

The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the drawing room which was decorated in pink and white, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Edith Tedford, and stood under an arch of evergreens and rosebuds.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white flat canton trimmed with georgette and pearls with silk net veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses. The only ornament worn was a white gold bar pin set with diamond, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid, Miss Ruby Allen, wore jade green duchess satin and georgette and carried pink carnations. Mr. Walter Dodd attended the groom.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a French vanity case, to the organist a silk crepe scarf, and to the groomsman, gold cuff links.

During the signing of the register, Miss Edith Tedford played "Love's Confiding," after which the bride led the way to the dining room, where a dainty wedding dinner was served to about 50 guests. The tables were beautifully decorated with white carnations.

The happy young couple left on the afternoon train, amid showers of confetti, for Toronto. The bride travelled in a dress of rose canton crepe trimmed with silver with rose hat to match, a French blue coat trimmed with silver grey fur, with shoes, stockings, gloves and purse to match. On their return they will reside in Hastings.

The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts.

CANADA USES MILLION TREES FOR CHRISTMAS

Forestry Experts Say This Is Insignificant Drain on Wealth.

U. S. USES 100,000,000.

Some of These Come From Canada—Forestry Cares For Situation.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Forestry experts and conservationists in general regard the use of Christmas trees as an insignificant drain on the country's forest wealth. A forest of 20,000 acres, less than a township, would be sufficient in size to provide Canadians with Christmas trees forever at the present rate of demand. Under the direction of a competent forester the entire area would produce trees; as one crop is cut another would be planted, says an article written in the office of the Canadian Forestry Association.

Over one million Christmas trees, it is conservatively estimated, are used in Canada each Christmas and the United States uses well over ten million, some of which are imported from Canada. The cutting and marketing of these trees constitutes a thriving, though temporary, industry. The trees are shipped long distances to supply the demand of the larger cities and in some cases where the supply is not sufficient to meet the demand Christmas tree nurseries have been started.

An Expert's View

Dr. C. D. Howe, Dean of Forestry at the University of Toronto, when interviewed, stated: "It is easy to explain the concern of tree sowers and forest conservationists over the use and particularly the export of Christmas trees. It is a response to sentiment and the trade is easily discernable for it enters every home. Most people, however, do not see the enormous destruction of young spruce and balsam trees by forest fires. I venture to say that for every small tree destroyed for the Christmas trade, a million small trees are killed in Canada each year by forest fires. Let us be logical and first check the big cause of the depletion of our future forest supplies. The sale of small trees during the Christmas season is good business and good forestry. Most of the trees come from farmer's group-up pastures, swamps and waste land. If the farmer can grow a profitable crop on these waste areas that are useless for agriculture, it is beneficial to himself and to the community."

Dr. Howe condemns the cutting of large trees for the sake of a few feet of their top and the uneconomic distribution of trees that results in larger numbers of trees going to waste for want of purchasers. It would be in the interests of economy to regulate this needless wastage by municipal or provincial legislation.

Species Most Used

Spruce, hemlock, balsam, cedar and Douglas fir are the trees chiefly used in Canada, but in the United States many other substitutes are used as these species are not always available. Of the species mentioned balsam and cedar are known as "weed trees" as they have little or no value except as Christmas trees. The cedar used is almost exclusively an open-grown tree that might in time grow into a fence post, but the balsam has little or no value. Substitutes in the shapes of artificial trees are now on the market. These are made of wire feathers, paper and paint and are chiefly used in the large cities where there is a scarcity of real trees.

As an example of how the use of Christmas trees enters into a plan of forest management and closer utilization of the forest, the case of Denver, Col., may be cited. Denver will use, 40,000 Christmas trees this season all supplied by the U. S. Forest Service from the Pike National Forest. The cutting of these trees opens up the forest and improves it it produces.

MAN GOING HOME FOR HOLIDAY DIES SUDDENLY ON C.N.R. TRAIN AT STATION ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Richard Brown, of Lindsay, Was On Way To Visit Mother.

HEALTH WAS GOOD.

Complained of Pains Before Leaving Lindsay on Journey.

Death came with startling suddenness and under very pathetic circumstances to Richard B. Brown, who died on a Canadian National train in the station here on Christmas morning while on his way to spend the day with his widowed mother who resides in Belleville.

He had been working in Peterborough for the past couple of weeks as a fireman on the yard engine, being sent here from Lindsay. Apparently in the best of health, he completed his work on Friday afternoon as usual, leaving for Lindsay that night. The next morning, it is said, he complained of pains in the stomach, and on the train reaching Peterborough he went to see a doctor. He came back to the train, intending to complete the journey to his home, but shortly after he reached the station he collapsed and died in a few moments.

Dr. F. O'Reilly, who happened to be a passenger on the train, was called, but on examination he pronounced the man dead.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, the coroner, was notified. He told The Examiner this morning that an inquest would be held in a couple of days.

BLOW DESTROYS SIGHT OF EYE

Campbellford Man Painfully Injured While Cutting Wood.

AXE HITS LIMB.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27—An unfortunate accident befell Mr. Robert Stocker last week, which deprived him of the sight of one eye.

Mr. Stocker was cutting wood for Richard McKelvie, when in some unaccountable way the axe came in contact with the limb of a tree and either the back of the axe or the limb, Mr. Stocker was unable to say, struck him full in the eye.

He was taken to a Peterborough hospital, where it was found necessary to remove the optic.

At the time of writing Mr. Stocker was resting as well as could be expected.

SCARES HOLD-UP BY HER SCREAMS

Would-Be Bandit Becomes Frightened By Cries of Intended Victim.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—Attempting to hold up and rob the wife of C. J. Mummery, retired Detroit detective at the point of a revolver, early Saturday morning, Hugh Ferguson, 26, of 325 Monmouth Road, Walkerville, ran into a tartar.

Failing to impress William Hooley, 108 Aylmer Ave., with the brandished gun, Ferguson, it is said, stopped Mrs. Mummery a half hour later at the intersection of Mercer and Pitts Streets, Windsor, near where her husband was staying with friends for the holidays.

Instead of complying with Ferguson's demand to "throw up your hands," Mrs. Mummery shouted and screamed for help. This caused Ferguson to run away, but not before the ex-detective was on his trail. After a sprint of two blocks, Mummery reached the fleeing bandit. There was a short sharp fight during which the gun was discharged, the bullet entering the left foot of Ferguson, who is now at Grace Hospital under surveillance of an officer.

Hard Luck Championship Won By Reckless Driver

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 27.—(A.P.)— Clarence Leonard, of Milwaukee, claims the hard luck championship.

Running away from a policeman who was shooting at him Saturday night, Leonard ran into an alley and blundered into the back door of Central police station.

Fleeing from another officer, Leonard scooted into a door and collided with a desk of the sergeant in charge.

"Merry Christmas," said the sergeant, "What charge do you prefer?"

Just then Patrolman Arthur Schmidt, who had attempted to arest Leonard when the latter's automobile crashed into a truck, came up puffing. He answered the sergeant's question by preferring charges of reckless driving.

THOUSANDS FLEE FLOODED LANDS; FOUR DROWNED

Damage in Tennessee and Neighboring States Estimated Near Million.

RAINS EXPECTED.

Nashville Worst Hit By the Great Floods Over Week End.

MEMPHIS, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—With thousands already driven from their homes and property damage estimated variously into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi and Kentucky to-day were preparing to meet an even greater emergency.

The general rains predicted for to-day were expected to make more acute the conditions which were taxing relief resources.

Nashville, Tenn., with more than fifty blocks inundated and 2,500 people driven from their homes, was probably the most severely hit point in the area affected by the floods.

Four were known to be dead as a result of the swollen rivers and other smaller streams in the affected area. At Pine Bluff, Arkansas, two men were drowned when their car turned over into a small stream. A similar accident cost a Columbus, Miss., man his life. Exposure from wading in a creek was the cause of the fourth death, a man from Zelmar, Tenn.

THE WEATHER.

Christmas day was favored with comparatively mild conditions. The temperature did not reach within ten degrees off the zero mark, and most of the day it was but a trifle below the freezing point. Sunday was much the same, and while this (Monday) morning, was sharp, being but three degrees above zero, the day has been an ideal Canadian winter one. At noon there was a trace of spring-like warmth in the sun's rays. While spring is yet a long way off, still every day of this beautiful weather will perceptibly shorten the cold months yet ahead. Have you ever noticed how seldom we now hear the merry jingle of the sleighbells? While there is good sleighing, it is seldom it is the musical notes of sleigh bells that warn us of the approach of a vehicle, but rather the harsh, discordant, musical and vulgar "Honk Honk!" of an automobile. A fortune should await the man who invents a pleasant warning signal for the automobile.—W. P.

Auto Hits Truck-Load Of TNT—Driver Faints

BLUFFTON, Ind., Dec. 27. (A.P.)— Samuel Weakley, of Payne, O., had almost recovered yesterday from the scare given him Saturday when another automobile collided with the truckload of nitroglycerine he was hauling to shoot an oil well east of this city. Weakley's truck was badly damaged, but the nitroglycerine did not explode. Weakley fainted.

ELEVEN QUALIFY FOR ELECTION TO CITY COUNCIL

Six of Those Seeking Election Have Had Previous Service as Aldermen.

FIVE FOR UTILITIES.

One Ex-Member, a Former Alderman, and Three Newcomers in Lists.

With the qualifying of ex-Alderman Malcolm McIntyre for the aldermanic contest and of M. H. Quinlan for the Utilities Commission, there are now eleven seeking election to the City Council, with five to be elected, and five seeking the one vacancy on the Utilities Commission.

Four of the five retiring aldermen have decided to let their names go before the electors. They are Nagle E. Phalen, John O. Fife, J. Mendell Greene and Roland Denne. Alderman J. W. Meyers, who was also nominated, has decided to drop out. Two ex-aldermen, Walter Stocker and Malcolm McIntyre, are also in the contest, with William Boulton, S. A. Lowe, J. E. Patte, E. A. Stinson and H. C. Huffman, newcomers to the municipal field, also seeking election.

Five men have qualified for the contest to choose a successor to E. F. Mason on the Utilities Commission. They are: Ex-Mayor George H. Duncan, who has also served on the Commission, ex-Alderman E. Mel. Turner, F. Hills, E. R. Shirley, and M. H. Quinlan.

There was no last minute rush to qualify this year. S. R. Armstrong, the returning officer, remained in his office at the City Hall until the closing of the lists at 9.00 p.m. on Friday, but the only ones to qualify during the evening were M. H. Quinlan for the Utilities Commission, and ex-Ald. McIntyre, seeking re-election to the City Council after a year's absence. Both of these candidates had over an hour to spare, and the little coterie that gathered in the office was able to chat undisturbed for the remainder of the evening.

TOKIO MOURNS DEAD MONARCH

Million People Line Streets as Funeral Cortege Passes.

IMPRESSIVE PARADE.

TOKIO, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press. — Silent and bare-headed, more, more than a million mourners lined the four-mile route from the Harujuku Station to the Imperial Palace tonight from the Royal Villa at Havana, where he died on Christmas Day. The streets were sprinkled with white sand as a ceremony of purification.

The new Emperor, Hirohito, and the new Empress preceded the cortege. Troops of cavalry, Princes and Princesses of the Imperial family, Court ladies, Imperial guards, Ministers, made an impressive parade.

MOUNTIE BURNED.

R.C.M.P. Constable Loses Life When Post is Destroyed.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27. —(Canadian Press). — In a fire which destroyed their quarters at Rae, a remote post in the North West territories, on Dec. 6, Constable F. Rhodes of the Royal Mounted Police was burned to death while another constable was severely hurt, according to a report reaching police head-quarters here to-day. Details of the origination of the blaze were not given.

BRITAIN MAKES STRONG PLEA WITH POWERS TO ASSIST CHINA FOREIGN CONTROL IS OPPOSED

New Policy of Conciliation Is Now Fully Revealed.

REVISIONS URGED.

Immediate and Unconditional Grant of Washington Surtaxes Urged.

LONDON, December 27. — The complete text of the official memorandum on British Chinese policy, communicated on Dec. 18 to the representatives at Peking of the Washington treaty powers, together with the full text of the memorandum sent by the British Foreign Office to the United States Embassy in London last May, advocating relaxation of foreign control over China, were made public last night by the British foreign office.

They breathe in every line a conciliation spirit far different from the aggressiveness which has so frequently characterized the previous policy of the Occidental powers towards the Celestial Empire.

In its memorandum to the United States the British Government came out emphatically against further attempts to force upon the Chinese increased foreign control. Similarly, the statement of the contemplated new British policy towards the Chinese presupposes recognition of the changed conditions in China, especially the growth of the Chinese nationalistic spirit.

Cantonese Success Noted.

Account is taken of the success now crowning the campaign of the Cantonese Nationalists against the Peking government and the futility of considering the latter as representative of all China. Especially interesting is the British suggestion that the foreign powers not only condone the "Washington surtaxes" by the Cantonese treaties, but that they sanction the levying of these surtaxes throughout China.

It is frankly recognized by the British government that in many respects the treaties of foreign powers with China are now hopelessly out of date, and that if order is to be brought out of the chaos now engulfing China, the Occidental powers must face the realities, take account of the changed conditions, and by working along new lines preserve their position in China without resorting to the antiquated appeal of brute force.

One of the strongest arguments now advanced by the British is that since last May, when the British government submitted its memorandum on China to the United States Embassy in London, events have proved the soundness of the suggestions outlined in that memorandum.

THREE KILLED AT INTERSECTION

Ford Sedan Struck By Westbound C.N.R. Flyer Near Windsor.

NO WITNESSES.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—Three young people, two men and a girl, were killed when a Ford sedan in which they were riding was cut down by the westbound Canadian National flyer at the Puce level crossing between Tecumseh and Belle River at 1.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The dead are:

Harold Purser, 22, 1523 Ouelette Avenue, Windsor;

Aubrey Patrick Hamerton, 21, 1728 Church Street, Windsor;

Miss Lillian Berkley, 19, of 13,517 Charest Avenue, Detroit.

The car was being driven east by Purser, who was taking Hamerton home from college at New York, for the holidays, and Miss Berkley, Hamerton's financee, for a tour of the interesting places along the border.

Chief of Police Martingale, of Puce, who is investigating the accident, has so far been unable to find a witness of the crash. Purser, who was driving in the direction of Belle River, it is believed, was well acquainted with the location of the level crossing. Chief Martingale

Pola Negri Asks $15,000 From Valentino's Estate

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 27.—(A.P.)—Pola Negri, fiancee of Rudolph Valentino at the time of his death, has filed a claim against his estate for $15,000 with interest, which the Polish actress says is due her on a loan made to Valentino a year ago.

"It was a business proposition from one person to another," said Miss Negri. "The money was loaned to meet a payment on Beverly Hills property on which Mr. Valentino had contracted to build a pretentious home. This happened about the beginning of the year 1926 and at the time the loan was extended, it was apparently very much needed."

PRESTIGE OF U. S. THREATENED BY NICARAGUA WAR

Intervention Has Made Civil Strife Diplomatic Issue.

REBELS PROTEST.

German Papers Comment on "United States' Imperialism."

(By Ludwell Denny, United Press Staff Correspondent).

WASHINGTON, Dec., 27 — The little war in Nicaragua turned into a big diplomatic issue in Washington to-day, involving United States prestige and policy in Latin-America and a challenge to Mexican recognition of the Nicaraguan rebels. With United States forces occupying the rebel east coast Nicaraguan ports, Dr. T. S. Vaca, Liberal envoy here to-day charged the State Department with Imperialism and intervention in behalf of President Diaz whom he termed "a tool of the New York banker." Similar charges were made by Secretary Selva of the Nicaraguan Federation of Labor.

Libearl Leader Protests.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 27. —(United Press). —Saying that it would require 15,000 American soldiers to put down the revolution in Nicaragua and calling charges of communism a smoke screen for an unfair campaign, Juan Bautista Sacasa Nicaraguan Liberal Leader, to-day, protested against the landing of the United States Marines at Puerto Cabezas. "We are the victims of a nation that without right or provocation has attacked the dignity of this country.

Searched Government Buildings and ordered the executive cabinet to leave Cabezas, the legal seat of the government," Sacasa said.

Germany Comments.

BERLIN, Dec. 27. —(U.P.). German newspapers to-day condemned the landing of United States sailors in Puer to Cabezas, Nicaragua. There were many references in the press to "United States Imperialism."

The Berliner Tagblatt described the incident as a "bloody Christmas in Nicaragua."

The Mentag Morgan headlines the story "Americans land troops for Christmas.' Several newspapers charged that the United States was encroaching on the independence of South and Central American Republics.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)— A foreigner, aged about 45 years, wearing a Toronto made suit of clothes, with the name Malevan sewed in the coat, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon when he fell 45 feet from the temporary lock gate of the Welland ship canal at Port Weller, landing on the concrete sill. The remains were removed to a local undertaking parlour and there await positive identification.

M. Joubert found that six hens whose daily food was augmented by a small amount of wins produced 169 more eggs in the six months period than did six other hens of the same breed and age who lived on a strictly prohibition fare.

ENGINEER DIES AS OFFICIALS DECIDE CAUSE

Train Wreck Due To His Failure To Take Siding.

DEATH TOLL SWELLS.

All Except Two of the Victims Have Been Identified.

ROCKMART, Ga., Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Robert M. Pierce, engineer, died in a hospital late Saturday about the same time Southern Railway officials announced that his failure to take a siding had wrecked two crack trains on Friday night and cost 19 lives besides his own. More than thirty persons were injured but it was believed that most of them would recover. Another body mangled beyond recognition was found in the wreckage early Saturday night.

Pierce, a road foreman or travelling engineer had relieved S. J. Keith, regular engineer at a point just 12 miles from where his train number 2, the Ponce de Leon, crashed into number 101, the Royal Palm. The Ponce de Leon was loaded with people coming home from Florida for Christmas.

A statement issued at the Chief Dispatcher's office in Atlanta said that the wreck was apparently caused by the engineer (of number 2) overlooking the order to take the siding at the south end of the passing track at Rockmart for number 101.

It was also stated that Pierce and his firemen, H. R. Moss, who also was killed, thoroughly understood the orders. Pierce was conscious for half an hour before his death, it was said at the hospital at Rome, where he died. Whether he explained why his train did not go on the siding could not be learned here. He was badly injured and in great pain whein taken to the hospital where it was planned to amputate his left arm and left leg.

All of the dead had been identified Saturday night except wo persons, one a woman. The bodies of most of the victims were taken to Atlanta in plain pine coffins to await arrival of relatives. Traffic over the road was resumed yesterday morning, trains using the side track until the main line could be cleared.

Two interstate commerce commission inspectors were ordered here to inquire into the wreck and H. W. Miller, vice president of the Southern, in charge of operations, issued a statement saying that the wreck was due to a human failure of an employee whose previous record was clear, and that it was clear that the train orders were disregarded.

The Royal Palm was standing on the main track waiting for the Ponce de Leon to enter the siding when suddenly the latter train crashed into it. Rescue work was impeded by the confusion that followed and by a driving rain. It was several hours before all the dead and injured had been removed from the tangled debris of the Ponce de Leon dining car and day coach where most of the victims were trapped. The day coach for white passengers, the second car from the engine was telescoped into the dining car immediately behind.

Screams of women pinned beneath the wreackage were mingled with the hoarse shouts of men and the prayers of a negro waiter who finally was released uninjured. He refused aid until the passengers were cared for and then when blow torches cut away the iron that held him, he crawled out and said 'the Lord has smiled on me," and laughed. It was the only note except that of grief and pain that was heard.

Sherman Hill Missing; Friends Fear Body Claimed by Otonabee

Lockmaster Last Heard of C hopping Ice at Lock 23's Old Dam on Friday—Big Part ies Are Unsuccessful in a Two Day Search.

WIDOW AND FOUR CHI LDREN MOURN PASS ING OF WAR VETERAN

Sherman Hill, lockmaster at lock 23, a short distance above Nassau, has not been seen since Friday and it is feared that he fell through the ice and was drowned. Mr. Hill was last seen about 3.00 o'clock on Friday afternoon. He had gone down a ladder to cut ice away from a stop log at the old dam. His wife was in Lakefield doing some shopping, and when she returned found a note saying that he was working on the dam. When he did not come back at dark, she instituted a search and his tools were found.

Searchers from Lakefield and Peterborough, headed by Provincial Constable Norman F. Maker, conducted a search on Christmas Day and on Sunday, and resumed their search today. The opinion was expressed by Constable Maker that the missing man had probably been swept down and over the new dam that is being built below the new one.

William Jobe, overseer for this division of the canal, assisted in the search with a large number of employees of the canal and other boatmen.

Sherman Hill was a war veteran, having gone overseas with the 93rd (Peterborough County) battalion. He had worked at the lock since shortly after his return from the front. He was married and is survived by his wife and four small children. He was well-known in Lakefield, being one of a family of eight boys who had always taken an active part in all phases of village life, and his passing has cast a gloom over the entire community. Lakefield war veterans provided a large proportion of the search parthe old one.

Abolition Of Women Was Delayed Too Long

LONDON, Dec. 27. —(Canadian Press). — Lord Darling, speaking at the annual dinner of Greys Inn Debating Society, took a fling at the Cambridge Undergraduates who recently offered a resolution that women ought to be abolished. It is a pity the resolution was not passed before they were born, he said.

U. S. Military Attache Says Hearing Would Not Be Given.

MEN ARRESTED.

Berlin Paper Says They Tried To Sell Invention To U.S.A.

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—The Montag Morgen to-day publishes a sensational article, claiming to have discovered that the arrest of two Germans, Dr Goldmann and Herr Dietz, several months ago, at Elberfeld, on a charge of revealing military secrets, was really because they attempted to sell an artillery invention declined by the Government of Germany to the United States Embassy.

Col. Arthur L. Conger, Military Attache at the United States Embassy, this morning informed the Associated Press that no such offer had ever been received. "Firstly, we would never receive any German to offer or demonstrate a military invention without first notifying the German Government," he said, "and, secondly, the names Goldmann and Dietz, as well as the alleged invention, are unknown to us."

COLD CHRISTMAS IN ALL EUROPE

Blanket of Snow in Portugal —Zero Weather in France.

QUAKE IN ALBANIA.

LONDON, Dec. 27. —(Canadian Press). — Christmas brought real winter weather to Eastern and Western Europe. All France is freezing with scores of deaths reported in the last three days. The temperature is below zero along the Swiss border and Lisbon, Portugal, is under a blanket of snow, almost unheard of in those parts.

England had a shivering Christmas but only complaint was of the shortage of coal due to the coal stoppage.

In Albania, a thousand or more persons are without shelter in consequence of an earthquake. Premier Mussolini of Italy has ordered relief measures for the little neighboring country.

TWO WOMEN HURT BY FALLS

Sleet Freezing On Sidewalks Causes Accidents on Friday.

BONES BROKEN.

The sleet which fell practically all day Christmas Eve, freezing on the sidewalks and rendering them almost impassable for pedestrians, was the cause of at least two serious accidents.

Mrs. Martha Clarke, Louis Street, slipped and fell on George Street, directly in front of the Hall Store, sustaining a compound fracture of the leg. Dr. Malcolm McCulloch attended the injured lady and had her removed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

SAVED BY COTTON.

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 27.—Attorneys were just about to foreclose on the home of a widow living near Dallas recently. A cotton broker told the woman the calamity could be averted if she could sell her cotton crop at 25 cents a pound. R. B. Elifritz, hotel proprietor, purchased the cotton at 25 cents a pound, declaring he would place a bale of it in the lobby of his hotel and put a sign on it telling the world that he was going to hold it until the market price of Texas middling cotton reached what he had paid for it.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

DEMONSTRATION OF LIGHTING IS MUCH ENJOYED

Rotarian Ross L. Dobbin Talks of Development of Electric Lamp.

DIFFERENT METHODS.

Utilities Engineer Demonstrates Various System of Lighting.

Rotarian Ross L. Dobbin, engineer of the Utilities Commission, provided a very interesting and instructive demonsration for the benefit of his fellow-Rotarians at the weekly luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club to-day, when he discussed the development of the electric light.

Rotarian Dobbin was assisted by Messrs. H. Beattie and Howard Clegg of the Utilities staff in the various experiments by which he showed the effect of different kinds of lighting upon colors and shapes. A model show window which the speaker used to illustrate the change in appearance made by various methods of lighting was a convincing proof of the necessity of merchants paying proper attention to the method in which their windows are lighted.

Rotarian Dobbin showed a sample of the various kinds of electrict light from the first incandescent lamp of Edison's down to the latest lamp, including the daylight light. He also demonstrated the various types of street lighting, showing the newest lamp, suspended in the middle of the street, with which he explained the Commissioners proposed to illuminate the west-end of the city in the near future.

The address and demonstration were greatly enjoyed by the Rotarians.

President C. H. Rogers announced that baskets of Christmas cheer had been distributed to needy families on behalf of the club by Rotarians Father Paul Costello and Adjutant Frank Ham. The directors, he said, would consider at their next meeting the question of helping to supply gymnasium equipment to the Salvation Army Temple.

Among the visitors to-day was Major "Bill" Cavanah of Chicago, former Peterborough hockey star.

SHORT STORY

Jim Warburton stood on the hill where the dividing line separated the Hinman property from the land of his ancestors, now his own. The Warburton acres had taken on a new value when the great motor highway had cut through part of the property only to swerve aside and diverge from the Hinman acres and cross the bridge, leaving the latter property marooned amid its rich pastures and woodlands. Perhaps, it didn't matter, especially, Jim was thinking this May morning, for so far as he knew or cared the Hinman house was still empty and desolate. Hinmans and Warburtons had been unfriendly for some years—owing to a marriage that ended in divorce between two members of the families.

"There was only one Hinman worth looking at in this world," gloomed Jim Warburton, "and that was Sylvia —and she turned me down flat for that Meade fellow. Don't know as I blame her for I'm not much account and he has barrels of coin."

He walked along the imaginary boundary line, remembered something about white birches and, finding them, scratched the mossy turf and found an ancient landmark—a small square of white stone on which small lettering was chiseled. It proved to mark the property of James Warburton, in the "yr. 1830." He walked down to the highway but could not find the other marker. He knew that the line was a straight one "east from white marker."

If the new highway had only run on for another fifteen feet some of the Hinman property would have bordered on it—but what difference would that make to the Hinmans—Sylvia and her aunt were the only ones left, and they lived in New York City.

A week later, Jim, coming back home from the county seat for a week-end in his lonely house, heard strange news from his man of all work, Hanson.

"Yes, sir, Mr. Warburton, there be squatters on your property," declared Hanson. "Such a nerve——"

"Squatters? Gipsies?" asked Jim, frowning.

"Nothing like that! Two wimmin be building a little bungalow—all themselves, one of them portable things, and the outside is nailed with silver birch logs and there's a sign a-swinging—"The Green Ladies Tea House"—Shucks, to be trespassin' and all."

"Thank you, Hanson, I'll take a look around after dinner, whenever your wife has it prepared."

After the early dinner, Jim, cool, satisfied that Hanson's story was somewhat exaggerated, walked down the long garden, through the rustic gate and across the old orchard of dead trees to the open hillside where scattered birches marched down the hill to the new highway.

The new bungalow, all silvery white where it wasn't stained green or brown, was there, and from the kitchen in the rear, came the aroma of good things to eat—fried chicken, new asparagus, strawberry shortcake—Jim's mouth watered. Mrs. Hanson's cooking was below par. He frowned again and walked up to the white birches, to look at the boundary mark. He could see the little bungalow, built just inside the Warburton property, so as to take advantage of the coveted position on the motor road, and he could see a number of cars parked on the private road on the other side that led to the Hinman house.

Inside the little house it was cosy enough. Green tables set with worn but exquisite damask, and dainty old china and silver. In the background was a tall, silver-haired woman in a green dress, and waiting on a group of prosperous-looking motorists, was a pretty waitress also wearing a short green frock and a crisp organdie apron. She did not see Jim Warburton until she had brought dessert to the large table, then she came to him with a tumbler of cold water and a napkin.

"Jim Warburton!" she exclaimed with a guilty blush.

"Sylvia—Mrs. Meade?" he stammered awkwardly. "I never dreamed it could be you or your aunt."

"Why not?" she asked lightly, still with that blush of embarrassment. "Auntie and I must live—and the old house is too far back from the road to be profitable—and we even plan to sleep here, because it is so lonely down there in the woods."

"The old place has been closed too long, Sylvia. Now, why can't you and Miss Hinman come over to Warburton and stay in the south wing until you are settled here."

"I will bring Aunt Winifred," said Sylvia and departed without taking his order at all. Later on, they thre dined amicably together, and Jim told them that he had come there intending to oust them from his land.

"Your land?" repeated Sylvia's thrilling voice. "Why, Jim, we have the old deeds, you know, and the line is a curve from the white mark up above to the three white birches opposite the magnolia tree on your south lawn! So we are on Hinman property and your garden trespasses a bit—but what is that between neighbors?"

Jim blushed. "You said Meade did not come with you?"

Sylvia laughed. "Why should he? When I refused him, he married a charming actress and lives in Hollywood."

"Then," exclaimed Jim, "suppose we go outside and discuss the boundary line."

MALCOLM SMITH SCHELL

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—Malcolm Smith Schell, one of the outstanding citizens of Oxford County and former Liberal M.P. for the riding of South Oxford, died at his home, Clairemont, East Oxford, on Saturday, after a lingering illness. Mr. Schell had been in poor health for a considerable time, but rallied somewhat during the past summer. Later, however, his condition, became worse and the end had been expected for some days. Mr. Schell, who took a prominent part in the public affairs of his native county, was born at Hillview, the old family homestead in East Oxford on Nov. 13, 1855, and spent all his life in this district. He was one of the earliest students of the Ontario Agricultural College and had a brilliant academic career at that institution. After graduating he settled on the farm on which he died ,and was one of the most progressive farmers of the county. He took a keen interest in the export business and was one of the pioneers of the export trade in poultry, cheese and apples. With his brother, the later Walter, he was also interested in the lumber business and owned several mills in various places. Mr. Schell was also president of the Beachville White Lime Co.

In 1904 he was elected as Liberal M.P. for South Oxford, succeeding Sir Richard Cartwright. In the next election in 1908 he was successful in defeating Donald Sutherland by 93 votes, but in the next election in 1911 when reciprocity was the issue, Mr. Sutherland in turn defeated him by 24 votes. While a member of the Commons Mr. Schell was particularly active in all matters pertaining to the interests of agriculture. He was a Methodist and a member of the Central United Church. For a long period of years he was its recording stewart and in 1925 when it entered the United Church he was elected one of the elders.

Mr. Schell is survived by his widow, who was formerly Miss Josephine Russ, daughter of the late Rev. Amos Russ; by two daughters, Mrs. C. Ankermand, of Chesley, Ont., and Mrs. Frederick Wright, of Hanover, Penn.

PRINCE CAROL STILL ABSENT

Believe Prince Has Quarrelled With Fair Charmer in Paris.

CAUSES COMMENT.

PARIS, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press) —Former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, whose disappearance from his Neuilly villa several days ago aroused much speculation, is most likely spending the Christmas holidays on the Riveria. But wherever he is, he has left Mme. Lupescu, his latest love, behind. His departure from Neuilly unaccompanied serves to confirm credible reports in Bucharest and Paris that he had broken off his affair with his red-haired charmer, who seemed in a fair way to cost him his throne.

It is quite definitely stated by sources that ought to know that Carol and Mme. Lupescu ended their romance about ten days ago.

The Neuilly is still manned by uncommunicative servants, but the silent and faithful detectives, who pounded the pavement outside the door for many weeks, spent Christmas at home, and have not come back. They have been relieved from sentry duty "for the present," their superiors said, and this is taken to mean that Carol is expected to return and again be guarded.

Not much credence is given in well-informed circles to the rumor that the former Crown Prince has gone to Bucharest, as a sudden visit there might cause all sorts of complications.

BIG TAIL CROP.

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 27. — More than 170,000 pounds of salted whales' tails were sent to Japan during a period of two weks recently. The delicacy is in great demand in Japan where it forms one of the items of diet. The amount sent, 170,000 pounds, represents a value of about $41,000.

GOPHERS FIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27. — Gophers were eating up the prize vegetables of Seth Van Patten of Van Nuys, Calif., so he dug a hole in the middle of the gopher run and lit a small can of sulphur. When he came back to see how many were dead he found that the gophers not only had put out the sulphur blaze with soft dirt, but had plugged up all the holes leading from it to their underground chambers.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

MILLBROOK CONTINUATION

MILLBROOK, Dec. 27. — The school building presented a very attractive appearance on Wednesday evening, every window alight and bidding welcome for the occasion of the annual entertainment, given by the pupils of the three rooms of the public school.

The assembly room of the Continuation School was used for concert; Mr. J. Arthur Vance, chairman of the school board, being the efficient chairman.

Every available sea was occupied by parents and friends, and the hearty applause which greeted each number on the programme showed the enjoyment and appreciation of the audience.

Suitable Yuletide decorations gave the rooms a festive appearance, the big Christmas tree in one corner of the library, with its gay ornaments, and numerous parcels, being the feature of special interest.

The chairman, in his address, took occasion to voice the appreciation felt by the trustees and the parents in the capable staff of teachers both in the Continuation and the Public schools, and the regret experienced by the board because of the resignation of Miss Jean Erskine, teacher of the Intermediate; from remarks which the parents had made, the speaker said he felt assured that they also sincerely regret Miss Erskine's severing her connection with the school. A male teacher will be engaged to fill the vacancy.

The programme included the following items:

Opening chorus, "Sweet Bells of Christmas Ring Out," by the pupils of the Public School.

Recitation, "Welcome to Our Christmas Concert," by Audrey Garside.

Song, "Seven Happy Cooks (in costume), by Irene Gallagher, Jean Todd, Marjorie McDowell, Audrey Garside, Doris Watley, May Birchard, Lenore Lambert.

Pantomime, "Johnny Goes to a Christmas Party," Margaret Russell and Ernest Powell.

"Good Night," Chorus by the Pupils.

National Anthem.

The entrance of Santa Claus (Mr. A. H. Barnes), in his red suit with trimmings of white fur, and the distribution of gifts from the tree, every pupil being remembered, brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

Misses B. Montgomery, Jean Erskine, and Annie McMahon were the accompanists of the evening.

Mr. B. B. Dawson is principal of the Public School; Miss Erskine and Miss Montgomery being the other two teachers. Miss Erskine, whose resignation is now in the hands of the trustees, joined the staff at the reopening of school last September. The board had over 400 applications in response to its advertisement for a teacher during the midsummer holidays, and on the recommendation of Colonel J. W. Odell, public school inspector, Miss Erskine was engaged. The latter has given good satisfaction during the term in which she has taught the Intermediate room, and as the chairman explained, is quite conscientious in handing in her resignation; for purposes of discipline it has been thought best to have a man as teacher for the coming term.

AT WESTWOOD.

WESTWOOD, Dec. 27.—The annual Christmas concert at Fife's school, was given on Wednesday afternoon in the school house. The pupils and teacher, Miss Bessie Sargent, supplied the programme. Stanley Fife, one of the pupils, made an excellent chairman, welcoming and extending the season's greetings to those present.

After an interesting programme, the following address was read to the teacher by Kathleen Lynch:

Dear Miss Sargent,—We, the parents and pupils of S. S. No. 5, Asphodel, have gathered here this afternoon to thank you for the great interest you have taken in our work in the past two years. As a slight appreciation of your untiring efforts in us as pupils, we ask you to please accept this small gift.

Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year with us.

(Signed). The Pupils.

During the reading of the above, Helen Collins presented a beautiful French ivory mirror. Although taken by surprise, Miss Sargent replied with a few well chosen words.

Santa's arrival caused great excitement among the children and he was soon busy unloading the tree of its many gifts. A vote of thanks to the teacher was moved by Mr. Robert Collins, and seconded by Mrs. Scott Fife. The audience responded by a hearty clap of hands.

AT BURNBRAE.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 27.— Christmas concerts are quite the order of the day in this district and are proving very popular. One of the most interesting of these was held on Wednesday afternoon, when the pupils of the Burnbrae school, S. S. No. 1, presented their annual entertainment in the Orange Hall at Petherick's Corners. The event took the form of a section re-union and invitations were sent to every family in the section with the result that the crowd almost filled the hall. Most of the families in the No. 1 section were present with a goodly number of visitors from neighboring communities. The children, under the leadership of their popular teacher, Mr. Earl Fairman, presented a miscellaneous programme which proved most acceptable to the audience and reflected credit on both teacher and pupils. The choruses were exceptionally well rendered with considerable volume by a small army of forty children. Special mention may be made of the excellent singing of Miss Susan Atkinson both in the leading of the choruses and in various solos and duets. The dialogues and recitations were well rehearsed and provided much entertainment. Other numbers rendered by those other than the pupils were, violin selections by Mr. Fred McMullen, mouth organ music by Douglas Ingram, recitation, Mildred McKenzie, vocal solos by Marshall Millar and comic songs by Will Fry.

Santa Claus was fortunately able to be present and scattered the many gifts among the children.

A pleasing feature was the pupils' gift to Mr. Fairman, a fine pair of driving gauntlets and a box of stationery.

Mr. Garnet Lloyd capably filled the office of chairman, but passed up the honour of making a speech and called instead on the Rev. Chas. Daniel who was among those present.

After the completion of the programme the ladies served lunch which was thoroughly enjoyed. During the luncheon hour, Mrs. R. Millar and Mr. McMullen furnished music. Those who were able to attend are very grateful to Mr. Fairman and his school for the opportunity of having a get-together event of this kind. Even in the comparatively small confines of a school section there are those who seldom meet, and an afternoon spent in this way does much to foster a desirable community spirit.

THREE KILLED

believes that when Purser heard the engine of the express whistle, he applied the brakes, but not in time to prevent the car skidding along the slippery pavement onto the tracks. This is indicated by Marks west of the tracks.

Noise of the impact was heard by proprietors of a gasoline station 100 feet from the crossing. The car was dragged 200 feet along the right of way and then thrown upside down in a ditch. Hamerton was dead and Purser died at the home of a farmer. Miss Berkley, who suffered a double fracture of the skull and internal injuries, was taken to the Hotel Dieu where she succumbed ten minutes later without regaining consciousness.

Purser was the eldest son of Gordon F. Purser, Windsor plumbing contractor. He was prominent in church work and in his pockets was a copy of Christmas carols, mute evidence of the interest he took in the work of the local carolling society.

Young Hamerton's father is an employee of the Windsor Hydro-Electric Commission. The family formerly lived at Woodstock.

Dr. Paul Poisson, coroner, of Tecumseh, opened an inquest this morning at the morgue of Albemy Janisse, Sandwich Street East, Windsor, where the bodies were ordered taken by the coroner.

Fifteen years ago, on December 14, 1911, Roald Amundsen reached the South Pole. A month later Capt. Robert F. Scott and his party also reached the pole—but perished on the homeward journey. BOY ESCAPES BOLT.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 27.— Ray Shoaf, 13, was unhurt recently when the pony he was riding was killed by electricity. The boy says that as he rode past a pole the pony fell and he leaped to the ground. Thinking his pony had tripped, he went to get help. Men found that the body of the beast was charged with electricity. It is believed the saddle and the boy's rubber shoes saved his life.

BROTHERS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Thrown From Cutter When Horse Bolts at Passing Car.

HORSE INJURED

MARMORA, December 27. — Christmas shoppers had a startling experience on Friday evening. The brothers Charles and Bert Leonard, were descending the Royal Hotel hill in a cutter when the horse took fright at a passing car and bolted, throwing the two men out, and later crashing into one of the plate glass windows of the store run by Sweet Brothers. The brothers escaped injury but the horse was injured internally and had to be shot.

3,000 DEER SHOT.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 27.—During the four-day open season in Colorado this year more than 3,000 buck deer were shot, according to reports reaching P. G. Parvin, state game and fish commissioner. About the same number was killed during the open season last year, Parvin said. The game and fish department is considering recommending a closed season for two or three years to give the deer a chance to multiply.

POULTRY CONGRESS PLANS ADVANCE

Representations From Over Thirty Countries Are To Attend.

During the past two years reference has been made in these columns to the World's Poultry Congress which will be held at Ottawa July 27th to August 4th, 1927. Many people have no doubt seen the items and read them along with other news. Some have paused and wondered how it affected them, and a very few have written the Congress Secretary for further information. The event was something for the future.

How many have stopped to consider the gigantic task facing those in charge of the organization work? To form some estimate of this it is necessary to know some of the details.

The World's Poultry Congress is being held at Ottawa next year at the invitation of the Canadian Government.

It is the third of such meetings, the first having been held at the Hague in 1921, and the second in Spain in 1924.

They were originated by the International Association of Instructors and Investigators in Poultry Husbandry, whose president Edward Brown, F.L.S., of London, England, automatically becomes President of the World's Poultry Congress.

The object of the Congress is to bring together those interested in any phase of poultry work with the object of stimulating interest in world poultry affairs; coordinating education and research internationally, educating in the most efficient methods of production, standardization, distribution and cooperation; through exhibits to graphically illustrate important phases of the poultry industry; and to promote international acquaintance and good fellowship among the poultrymen of the world.

Invitations were sent to all foreign powers and to all British dominions, colonies and dependencies. Those to foreign powers were sent through the British Foreign office, and those to all parts of the British Empire direct from the office of His Excellency the Governor General.

Canada has never before in her history issued such a world wide invitation. From the response to date indications point to over thirty countries having representatives at the World's Poultry Congress next year. These will include England, Scotland, Northern Ireland, the United States, Finland, Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands, Germany, Poland, Russia, Latvia, Roumania, Italy, Spain, Dutch East Asia, Australia, South Africa, Barbados, Bermuda, Brail, Columbia, the Philippines, Peru, Ecuador, and the Dominion Republic.

These countries have in many instances formed National Congress Committees, and through these a very thorough propaganda is being conducted. In addition great help is being given by various Canadian agencies outside of Canada, and by the foreign press.

The Congress organization in Canada is being gradually completed. Chief patron is His Excellency the Governor General, the Viscount Willingdon. Other patrons are the Lieutenant Governors of the provinces, the Prime Minister and some of the members of the Cabinet, the leader of the opposition, the Premiers of the provinces, the Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, and the presidents of the Canadian National and Candian Pacific Railways.

The Minister of Agriculture, the Honourable W. R. Motherwell is honorary chairman of the Congress Committee and the Deputy Minister Dr. J. H. Grisdale—chairman. This committee consists of the provincial ministers of agriculture, federal and provincial departmental officials, representatives of the breeders' organizations, the trade, transportation companies, etc. A Congress executive drawn from this large committee is under the chairmanship of F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, who is also General Director of the Congress.

Provincial Congress committees have also been appointed under the chairmanship of their respective Ministers of Agriculture, and these committees are handling all matters pertaining to the Congress as affecting the provinces.

Publicity,transportation, accommodation, exhibition, reception, function, automobile entertainment, ladies tourist, seeing Canada, customs, inspection, motion picture, general information bureau, grounds and membership committees complete the congress organization.

All this organization machinery and the work it turns out will be of little or no avail unless the enthusiasm spreads to the Canadian people. A great many will no doubt say that they are not interested in poultry they don't keep chickens. That is neither reason nor excuse for not booting the World's Poultry Congress.

Poultrymen were able to start these World Congresses, because their industry is backed by a wonderful organization. They are organized from the backyarder who keeps half a dozen birds to the dealer who exports and imports eggs and poultry, and to the scientist who is working out the vitamine content of the egg. This perfection or organization has placed the industry on an international footing, and secured for it official recognition.

Much good is derived by these countries having the honor of staging a World's Poultry Congress. Some six thousand people, drawn from thirty different countries, in all parts of the world, will attend the Congress. They are primarily interested in some phase of poultry keeping, it is up to the people of this country to interest these delegates in Canada. Show them Canada at her best, a warm hospitable country offering her unbounded acres, her vast forests and mineral wealth, in fact all her wonderful natural resources to any and all who care to make Canada their home. If this is done the delegates will return to their own countries full of enthusiasm for Canada and her possibilities. Each and every one will become a potent factor in Canadian development along immigration lines, and the World's Poultry Congress will have accomplished a great purpose.

SHOULD HAVE A CHANCE.

The latest baseball scandal continues to occupy a large share of public attention, with Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, the two most eminent figures involved in the charges, finding many warm champions in all parts of the Continent.

It would seem to the man who is trying to look at the situation fairly and without prejudice that the request of Speaker and Cobb that they be faced by their accuser, Leonard, is an entirely reasonable one, and that judgment should be suspended until they have been given this opportunity of vindicating their names.

In fact, it is surprising to find that the case should have been given publicity until such a hearing had been given the accused diamond stars.

Both have denied the charges and both have asked that they be brought face to face with the player who alleges that they conspired to "throw" a game and to bet on a fixture they knew to be "framed."

They are at least entitled to the chance they ask to clear themselves, and furthermore, the public is entitled to know from Judge Landis whether or not he believes them to be guilty of what has been charged against them.

YOUTH WILLING TO SERVE.

A feature of the municipal elections this year, in addition to the large number of candidates in the running for the Utilities Commission and the Council, is the striking percentage of younger men who are offering themselves for municipal service.

Among the Utilities Commission candidates are Fred. Hills, E. R. Shirley and E. M. Turner, all young in years, although the last named has had considerable aldermanic experience.

Youth, at least so far as municipal politics is concerned, is represented in the aldermanic contest by Stan. Lowe, Nagle Phelan, J. E. Patte and Harry Huffman.

It is a most satisfactory condition to find so many of the younger citizens of Peterboro willing to assume some of the burdens attendant upon municipal government.

There is no particular reason why these burdens should always be left to older shoulders to carry, although the tendency here, until recently, has been that most of the responsibility for carrying on the city's affairs has been shirked by the younger citizens, who found it possible to interest themselves in almost everything else but municipal politics.

The decision of a half dozen of the younger men to volunteer for service is a very welcome change.

JUST A WORD OF THANKS.

Christmas of 1926, with its joyful reunions, its happy family gatherings and its outpouring of love and friendship, has passed on into history.

It was, The Examiner trusts, a day of real happiness for every citizen of Peterboro and district.

There were among the army of workers whose efforts combined to make the celebration possible many who especially deserved to be happy on Christmas Day.

In the joy of the day itself we are often a little tary in recognizing how much we owe to those to whom the Christmas season means a period of working long hours at high pressure.

The Post Office staff, handling the record rush of incoming and outgoing Christmas mail, the letter-carriers finishing their last route late on Christmas Eve with flashlights needed to read the addresses, the truck-drivers sitting long hours at the wheels of machines that slipped and skidded on icy roads, the express men working under most distressing conditions to see that all the precious bundles and parcels were distributed and no one disappointed, the staffs of the city's stores successfully trying to be courteous and helpful to the last-minute swarm of customers despite tired bodies and jangling nerves—to these and all the other workers to whom the Yuletide brings extra labour and responsibility, general thanks is due.

EXCELLENT MATERIAL.

The electors of Peterboro cannot very well grumble at the size or quality of the fields from which they must elect a member of the Utilities Commission and five Aldermen on New Year's Day.

Five candidates have qualified for the Commission, the largest field for one municipal position in local history, and the list offers the voters a chance to select a Commissioner well qualified for the responsible position.

With eleven candidates in the running for five aldermanic positions there is also plenty of choice. Four members of the present Council, Roland Denne, Nagle Phelan, J. M. Greene and J. O. Fife, are standing for re-election. Two former Aldermen, Walter Stocker and Malcolm McIntyre, are again offering their services to their fellow-citizens.

The balance of the aldermanic field is composed of well-known citizens, Stan. Lowe, of the firm of Lowe & Outram; J. E. Patte, manager; Harry Huffman, contractor; William H. Boulton, insurance manager, and Elias H. Stinson.

With eleven to pick from, six whose municipal record is before the people and five whose qualifications as shown in their own business, are known to local ratepayers, citizens have an unusually fine choice.

Out of such excellent material it would be impossible to select a five that would not be capable of good service.

THE NEW GOVERNOR.

After an unusually successful term as the occupant of Government House, Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt is about to relinquish the seals of office, and his successor has been officially designated by order-in-Council of the Federal Government. During his tenure of office the present Lieutenant-Governor, who is an honored citizen of Brantford, has brought his high office into intimate association with the every-day affairs of the people of Ontario. With singular success, in the accomplishment of which considerable tact and administrative genius were required, Mr. Cockshutt has related his office to all the varied interests of the Province. In this respect he has set an example that will no doubt exert a directing influence in all the future administration of the office.

It appears to be generally conceded that the new Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. William Donald Ross, will be a worthy successor to Mr. Cockshutt at Government House. He is a man of large affairs in the financial world, and has been prominent in the directorates of numerous financial institutions and industrial concerns. In this capacity he has had association with wide and varied interests, and has thus acquired extensive administrative ability. He is a Nova Scotian by birth, and thus, perhaps, will bring to his office the broader view which is so essential in Provincial affairs. It has been quite generally understood, since Mr. Cockshutt initiated his aggressive plans to make Government House thoroughly democratic in the service of the people, that the office is no longer a mere sinecure, but an institution that holds large potentialities of usefulness in the life of the Province. There will be every disposition to give the new Governor every encouragement in his high office, and to wish him unmeasured success in all his efforts to serve the people of the Province and the related interests of the Dominion.—Brantford Expositor.

A STALE SCANDAL.

It now becomes clear why the already excessive salary of Commissioner Landis was increased by $15,000 a year at a recent meeting of major league club owners. The former judge, who is credited with having saved organized baseball after the scandal of 1919, has saved it again by tracing down and exposing another scandal that occurred in the same year. The strong probability is that if it had not been for him this latest scandal would never have been heard of, which, obviously, would have been a very serious thing for baseball. As matters now stand the ship of organized baseball will brave the storm and reach harbor even though it has been necessary to cast overboard two distinguished Jonahs in the persons of Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb. What will now cause students of the American national game to wonder is that the ship ever got so far on her voyage with these two passengers aboard. How much pleasanter and safer would the trip have been if they had never shipped! It is true that for a couple of decades they have been regarded as two of the most valuable men in the sport, and between them have drawn some millions of dollars to the parks, as well as having advertised the game from Winnipeg to Houston and from Maine to California. They have become idols to hundreds of thousands of boys. Even critics have been imposed on to the extent of flatly declaring that Cobb was the greatest player who ever went to bat, while Speaker, as a centre fielder, never had an equal. Yet in the course of this long period Cobb has admitted that occasionally he bet on the outcome of ball games, and the same thing is hinted against Speaker, though he denies it with appropriate fury. It was time these men were hurled from their pedestals, and former Judge Landis was the man to do the hurling.

It is the allegation of "Dutch" Leonard, formerly a Detroit pitcher, that in 1919 Speaker, then managing the Cleveland team, agreed to lose a game to Detroit. The object was to let Detroit, by winning this game, make certain of finishing third. Detroit won the game, but did not finish third, so that this object was not attained, and if there were a conspiracy the standing of any club, and the consequent profits of any club owner, were not affected. Having agreed to let Detroit win, it occurred to the four men who knew of the arrangement—namely, Cobb, Speaker, Leonard and Wood—to make a little bet on the game. Two of them did actually make a bet, it appears, and they were Leonard and Wood. Cobb and Speaker, the alleged main conspirators, did not even, according to the venomous statement of Leonard, bet. So that they did not profit by it in any way. The account of the game showed that Speaker, who was supposed to have agreed to lose the game, distinguished himself at bat, and that if the other Cleveland players, who are not alleged to have been in the plot, had played as well, the Cleveland team would have won. On the other hand, Cobb, of Detroit, played less effectively then usual. None of the reporters who saw the game, nor the umpire, whose duty it was to send a report of it to the league President, noticed anything amiss. Leonard, who makes the charge and presents as substantiation two letters which might or might not be accepted as evidence, admits that he had a grievance against Cobb, who released him because he had lost his usefulness. He has refused repeated invitations from Commissioner Landis to meet the men whom he accuses. Yet, although they have retired from baseball, their names are thrown to the winds of scandal. No matter how innocent they are their reputations are irretrievably ruined. It is not the sort of conduct one would expect from a former judge. If the worst that has been said against these men is true their punishment has been brutally severe.—Mail and Empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Five for Utilities Commission, eleven for the Council. Who said anything about apathy in municipal affairs?

Now, if the world would only remember that there are lots of folks who need help after Christmas as well as before!

Peterboro should resolve to start the New Year right by piling up a good vote on New Year's Day.

Judge Landis is finding the newest baseball scandal is developing a boomerang tendency. But the Judge's $65,000 a year salary helps to make criticism bearable.

There was plenty of sunshine for Christmas Day, and The Examiner hopes that it was found in every home, as well as outside.

LAKEFIELD CHIEF PRESENTS REPORT

Fire Brigade Responded To 40 Alarms During Eleven Months.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 27.—The following is the report of the Lakefield Fire Chief, Mr. A. H. Clarke, presented to the Village Council on December 15th, at a statutory meeting:

To the Reeve and Village Council:

Gentlemen.—I herewith beg to submit my annual report up to midnight, December 14, 1926, for your consideraton:

Number of general alarms	11
Number of telephones	29
Number of practices	21
Number of false alarms	1
Underwriters' test, general	1
Total amount of chemicals used, gallons	445
Estimated fire loss for the year	$300

During the year the equipment of the department has been greatly improved by the addition of a combination motor truck to replace the horse-drawn wagon. This truck has speeded up the work and has been instrumental in securing for the village lower insurance rates. Having ladders and other appliances available immediately on responding to alarms, has, I am quite safe in saying, prevented some serious fires within the past year.

Other equipment purchased includes 200 feet of new water hose; one 36-ft. extension ladder; new Siamese coupling; one 5-gallon water pump tank; also the replacement of some damaged equipment.

During the year 200 feet of hose has become useless through age and wear, freezing during the winter operations, including flooding of rink, being one of the causes of this. The water tank on the school hill is in the course of construction and, when completed will prove a great asset toward protection in that area.

The stationary pump is at present stored in the village stables, and I would advise that, when finances permit, this pump be installed on the river front adjacent to the main business section—thereby giving that section more protection.

During the year I have endeavoured to promote fire prevention to the best of my ability, have made frequent inspections, made an official visit to the school during prevention week giving demonstrations on the use of hand extinguishers, had the clergy of the village assist in work and recently secured a film of work and had the same shown on the screen at the local theatre. I attended the annual convention of Dominion Fire Chiefs at Windsor in August and learned many points on the subject which I have tried to put into practice here.

Dirty chimneys still continue to be our greatest concern and are responsible for the largest percentage of our alarms.

I would recommend that the following equipment be added this year: 1 Foamite Extinguisher, 200 feet new hose to replace lost amount, 100 feet chemical hose to replace that on engine which is now practically useless. The foam extinguisher which I am asking for is used for combating gas and oil fires and which we felt the need for recently in fighting a tar fire at the skating rink.

I would like to extend my thanks to the citizens in general for the support afforded me in carrying on the clergy for their assistance on Fire Prevention week, the local press in assisting in all times in furthering the prevention spirit, the chief of police for his able assistance at all times in carrying out his duties, the men of the brigade who, I am proud to say, area credit to the village, and finally the members of the Council for supporting me at all time.

I would ask that this report be presnted at the first meeting to the incoming Council.

Your humble servant,

ALLAN H. CLARKE,

Chief of the Fire Department.

After outlining developments in agriculture, mining, and the pulp and paper industry the Premier continues: "It is difficult to forecast even the immediate future owing to the possibility of unforseen circumstances, but under normal conditions Ontario should experience a substantial increase in production and turnover during the coming year, which will contribute largely towards the prosperity of our country.

PRESENTATION TO SCHOOL TEACHER

Miss Eva Hill Is Leaving S. S. 3, Douro, For Lakefield.

DOURO, Dec. 27.—A number of the pupils and their parents in this vicinity gathered together at S. S. No. 3, Douro, on Tuesday afternoon, December 22, to bid farewell to their teacher, Miss Eva Hill, who is leaving their midst to take up a position on the Lakefield Public School staff.

The following address was read by Brigid McMurray, after which Kenneth Reid presented Miss Hill with a beautiful signet ring in loving remembrance of her pupils and many friends:

"Dear Miss Hill,—

"We learn with regret that you are leaving us this term, and we want to express our thanks for your work for us.

"Will you accept this gift from your pupils with our best wishes for a happy Christmas and for your success in your new school.

"We hope you will always have pleasant memories of the days spent with us.

"Signed by the pupils of S. S. No. 3, Douro."

Although entirely taken by surprise, Miss Hill thanked her friends and pupils for their kind thoughtfulness, and assured them that it would be many days and years before the pleasant memories of the time spent amongst her friends would be erased from her thoughts.

CENTENARY OF TORONTO VARSITY

Charter Was Signed By George IV on Jan. 1, 1827.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—On January 1, 1927, it will be exactly one hundred years since His Majesty King George IV. affixed his seal to a charter giving royal assent to the formation of a university in the City of Toronto, Canada. Now in the reign of King George V. the University is planning to hold a celebration worthy of the event.

Every one of the 22,000 living graduates of the University of Toronto will receive during the year an invitation and particulars of the main celebrations, which will take place on October 6, 7 and 8 of next year. Special efforts will be made to have present the 16,000 graduates living in the Dominion of Canada.

The general committee for the centenary celebration has announced that well-known scientific and literary men from Great Britain, France and the United States would be invited to attend and take part. All the universities in the English-speaking world, and some not in that category, will be invited to send representatives.

A new history of the university is being written specially for the event by W. S. Wallace, M.A., chief librarian of the University of Toronto. As it will be also the 60th anniversary of Confederation, an outstanding Canadian will be asked to review the history of the Dominion since the time of Confederation. A pageant, showing the development of education in Ontario in the last hundred years, has also been projected. A special convocation will be held to confer honorary degrees. There will be a rugby game, all kinds of class and faculty reunions, and every conceivable kind of function connected with a university.

FOOD IS SOIL FOR BODY'S GROWTH

Vegetable life extracts its nourishment principally from the mineral soil; having the ability to convert these minerals into useful substances to be used to further the growth and development of its plant structure.

Animals cannot live on this same food, but nature converts the minerals of the soil so that they become the organic minerals in the vegetable kingdom.

Iron from the rocks can be tested in much the same way in the laboratory as the iron found in such vegetables as celery, and it is difficult by chemical processes to tell the differences between these two kinds of iron, yet the human stomach knows the difference and the mineral iron cannot be converted into cell structure in the human body.

It is possible for one animal to get its nourishment by eating the flesh of another animal, and thus in a second-hand way replenishing its supply of minerals.

The 4,000,000 villi of the small intestines suck up nourishment from either vegetable or animal food, and the blood passing through these villi carries nutrition to all parts of the body. If putrefactive poisons are present in large quantities; of course, some of these are absorbed along with the good minerals, and intestinal toxemia is the result. The result of this is not only digestive trouble but the developing of such diseases as hardening of the arteries, Bright's disease, heart trouble and diabetes.

Bacteria are also absorbed and find lodgment in the liver and kidneys, which organs try to save the life of their owner by converting these bacteria into harmless material which can be eliminated. The gall bladder usually becomes a veritable cesspool of these poisons, and the kidneys are worn out in passing out both live and dead bacteria, and the poisons which they generate.

An occasional housecleaning of the body is often necessary if you have been living so that this toxic condition has been built up.

This season of the year, when fresh fruit is so plentiful, it is a good plan to take one kind of fruit for an entire day, changing to a different fruit each day; and keeping this up for about a week. This cleaning out process will once again restore the stomach and intestines to their normal tone, and make it possible for them to absorb good food, and take care of a reasonable amount of food in proper combinations.

Figs do not grow on thistle bushes, and you cannot expect to have a clear body grow from harmful food in an irritated stomach and intestines.

Start cleaning out to-day and practice good habits from now on.

THE VILLAGE SMITHY

(By Dr. FrankCrane.)

The village smithy is disappearing from under the spreading chestnut tree. He is being chased out by the automobile.

The town of George's Mills in New Hampshire advertised for a blacksmith recently. The only smith left because his business was ruined by automobiles; and for the first time in half a century the town was without a smithy.

This is a typical instance of what is happening everywhere.

In England they are announcing plans for transforming village smithies into up-to-date repair shops, which will bea r little resemblance to the old-fashioned blacksmith shops.

Many who are now children will grow to maturity and old age never having seen a blacksmith.

This smithy was a picturesque character, brawny and sturdy, and many of us will remember when we as barefoot boys loafed in his shop and watched him pound horse-shoes.

The horse, alas, is going, and the garage man is replacing the horse-shoer.

Somehow the automobile mechanic is not as picturesque a figure as the blacksmith who preceded him. He may be as honest, but his reputation is not equal to that of the smithy.

It all goes to show how the life of the community is changing, and many callings which heretofore have been hereditary are disappearing.

With the stage coach an army of hostlers were swept into oblivion and their place is taken by engineers and brakesmen.

Life becomes more complex, but it is not necessarily harder upon the working man, for the conductor of a railway train earns much more than the driver of a stage coach used to earn, and the garage mechanic is better paid than was his predecessor, the blacksmith.

NATION BESIEGES SHRINES OVER RULER'S DEATH

Gloom Grips Japan While Body Is Prepared For Burial.

ELABORATE FUNERAL.

Hirohita Proclaimed Emperor "Enlightened Peace Name of His Era.

TOKIO, Dec. 27.—Japan bowed in sorrow yesterday as the "era of Showa" opened, with crepe and half-staffed flags replacing the gay decorations usual at the season of Christmas, which has been adopted by the Japanese. The whole nation gathered subduedly at the principal shrines to pray for the late Emperor Yoshihito and for a long life of usefulness to the new ruler.

Hayama, where Yoshihito spent much of his childhood and made the final heroic struggle for his life, is tomb-like to-day. Only the necessary activities preparatory to moving the body to Tokio are taking place. The Dowager Empress took some rest, the first in many days, and the Emperor Hirohito retired at 5.15 Saturday morning after a night of momentous events. At 3.15 a.m. he had received the symbols of the throne—the three sacred treasures, mirror, jewel and sword, the Japanese believe were given to the first Emperor by the sun goddess Amaterasu. Simultaneously, Shinto rites were performed in the Imperial Palace at Tokio, informing the spirits of the Emperor's ancestors of Hirohito's accession.

The new Emperor will remain at Hayama until noon to-day, when he will return to Tokio with the body of his father, arriving at 7 in the evening. Six thousand picked police will guard the route of the funeral cortege from the station to the palace. The coffin will be carried by an Imperial motor hearse, followed by another containing the Emperor and Empress Dowager. The Court will observe absolute mourning for six days and then a year of mourning divided into three periods of varying strictness.

Funeral to Cost $1,000,000.

The new Emperor will be crowned at Kyoto late in 1928. He will hold his first court levee probably on Friday. The funeral will be held about February 10 at the Yoyogi parade ground in Tokio, where the funeral of Meij (Mutsuhito) was held. It will cost between 2,000,000 and 2,500,000 yen (about $1,000,000). Until then, all Japanese subjects are ordered to wear a black bow on the kimono or an arm band on European clothes. The posthumous name of Yoshihito will be decided at a Privy Council shortly. It is expected to be "Taisho," or "Great Righteousness," after the name of his era, which was Meiji. The present era is named "Showa," or "Enlightened Peace." It was decided by the Cabinet, approved by the Privy Council and announced in an extra Official Gazette, published immediately following Yoshihito's death. Simutaneously with the official announcement of the Emperor's death the Imperial House hold Department sent an urgent message to Prince Chichibu on the Majestic.

As the body leaves Hayama the warship Yamashiro, which has been watching off the villa, will fire a salute of forty-seven guns. At 8 o'clock the following morning all Japanese warship will fire a similar salute. After the new Emperor Hirohito holds his first levee all the warships will fire the same salute in his honor. Warships have been detailed to guard the coastline along which the funeral train will come to Tokio from Hayama. The police are exercising additional precaution to keep Japanese from harakiri, like that of Admiral Nogi and his wife when Mutsuhito died. All owners of firearms registered with the police were visited Saturday and requested to take care of their guns and not to lend them.

Prison warders were ordered to suspend all punishment and work for six days.

MANY HOMELESS BY RIVER FLOODS

Damage Wrought By Overflowing of Cumberland River at Nashville.

SEND RELIEF.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—At least two thousand persons were driven from their homes last night or were prepared to leave the flooded sections of North and East Nashville due to the Cumberland River flood, according to police headquarters estimates and survey of the inundated regions.

Relief work, begun Saturday morning, when families awoke to find themselves marooned, is being continued under direction of the police department and hundreds of volunteers.

Residents in the affected area generally were forewarned and able to escape the rising waters, and in most cases the household effects were moved and stored.

Ryman City auditorium, American Legion headquarters, a score of church buildings and other buildings were offered for housing refugees, many of whom are negroes.

The city temporarily was assuming liability for stores of coal and provisions for the refugees.

Neither deaths nor undue suffering had been reported early last night in spite of freezing temperatures. Transportation generally was provided for removal of household effects.

Relief workers late yesterday rescued an aged woman from a small shack in an inundated section of North Nashville after the water had climbed to a floot of the floor of her dwelling.

POLICE UNEARTH STOCK SWINDLE

Two Charged With Attempting To Sell Fraudulent Mining Shares.

INVOLVES $280,000.

BOSTON, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—Belief that they frustrated an alleged stock swindle involving $280,000 was expressed by the police with the revelation that William Burke, of New York, and Garland W. Tucker, of Halifax, N.S., have been arrested charged with conspiracy to steal.

Thomas W. Pelham, of Brookline, sales manager of the Gillette Safety Razor Company, brought about the arrest of the men in a back bay hotel Friday night after his suspicions had been aroused over the stock transaction.

Pelham said Burke and Tucker bought some worthless oil stock from him several weeks ago, and after paying cash, introduced him to a "wealthy New York stock broker." An absentee "Baltimore millionaire," the millionarie's secretary, and the story of a western mine once abandoned as useless but now paying its owner $25,000,000 a year, were next introduced. Pelham said he was told that he could pick up 35,000 shares of the mine at $15 a share in Philadelphia.

The Baltimore "millionaire's" secretary went one better ,however, declaring his employer could gather the same number of shares at $8 apiece. Pelham arranged a conference to complete the deal and invited the police. Burke and Tucker were arrested and the police are now hunting the other three figures in the case.

MANIAC SHOOTS CHIEF OF POLICE

Runs Amuck With Revolver While Wife Prepares Christmas Dinner.

PARADES STREETS.

MANDAN, N.D., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press). — Nels. M. Romer, Police Chief, was instantly killed about noon Saturday. His life was sacrificed in place of the lives of Mrs. Arnold Diele and her four children.

Arnold Biele, running amuck as Christmas dinner as being prepared, is in jail here after his family fled from their home and he instituted a reign of terror on residence streets when he ran about with a loaded weapon, after killing Romer. He was finally captured by Chief Charles McDonald and a garage employee as he threatened to shoot both of them.

Romer visited the Dieles home unarmed in response to a call from neighbors. He was killed instantly by five bullets from Diele's six-shooter. Diele then marched up the street, taking aim and firing at two persons, only to have the gun miss fire. In the meantime his wife and children had escaped to safety at the home of neighbors.

His widow and two children survive Romer.

ZERO WEATHER SWEEPS FRANCE

Scores of Deaths Have Been Reported in Last Three Days.

RARE OCCURENCE.

PARIS, Dec. 27, (Canadian Press)—All France is freezing, which is a rare occurrence, and the Paris lakes have an inch of ice. Scores of deaths have been reported in the last three days, for, although the lowest temperature has been only about 18 degrees fahrenheit in Paris, the air is bitterly penetrating, and the people are not accustomed to the cold.

There are expectations that skating may soon be indulged in along the Bois de Boulogne, and this does not happen every year. The statues in the public places are wearing garments of ice, which has the appearance of lace.

The coldest reported is five below zero, fahrenheit, on the Swiss border, and many places felt zero.

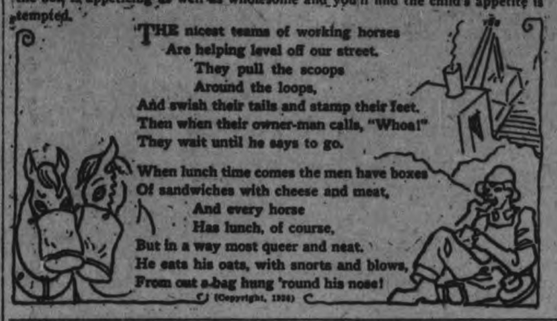
Horse Lunch Boxes

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

WHEN the children must carry their lunches to school much care and planning is necessary to make them adequate in food value, and equal to the lunch they would eat at home. It helps to have a lunch box with a small thermos in which warm cocoa, milk or broth can be carried, but warm drink or not, there should always be nourishing sandwiches for the main part of the meal and only a little cake or sweets.—Too many lunches I've seen have a tendency to too much sweet and fruit as against bread and butter with proper meat, egg or other sandwich content. Wrap everything attractively and well in wax paper so that the box is appetising as well as wholesome and you'll find the child's appetite is tempted.



THE nicest teams of working horses
Are helping level off our street.
They pull the scoops
Around the loops,
And swish their tails and stamp their feet.
Then when their owner-man calls, "Whoa!"
They wait until he says to go.

When lunch time comes the men have boxes
Of sandwiches with cheese and meat,
And every horse
Has lunch, of course,
But in a way most queer and neat.
He eats his oats, with snorts and blows,
From out a bag hung 'round his nose!

ELECT DIRECTORS AT ANNUAL MEETING

Sayles A. Clark Re-elected President for Morganston Cheese Factory.

NORHAM, Dec. 27.—At the annual meeting of the patrons and stockholders of Morganston cheese factory held in the factory on Thursday afternoon the following directors were re-elected: Clarence W. Massey, Fred. Purdy, Walter Glover, Ewart Huycke, Lewis Lawson, Sayles A. Clark and William Sommerville. These in turn were unanimous in their choice of Sayles A. Clark for President, who now enters upon his fifth year, and Hermin Reynolds for Secretary, who has the outstanding record of having served in that capacity for 25 years.

Egbert Demorest, who has manufactured the cheese for several years, has been re-engaged. A cheese-maker to hold a first-class certificate must produce at least 95 per cent. first grade cheese. Mr. Demorest last year produced 99 per cent, and was given no cut on account of feeding turnips, which was done with moderation. A vote was taken on Thursday to decide whether or not turnips should be fed in the future, and out of about forty votes cast there was a majority of two in favor of feeding turnips.

Mr. Clark, the President, in his resume of the past year's work, stated that the old way of selling cheese seemed to be growing more and more difficult. He stated that New Zealand cheese was placed on the British market side by side with Canadian cheese and that the New Zealand cheese was considered the choicest in the world. He thought though the United Dairymen's Co-operative Company was becoming more satisfactory.

Mr. Freure, manager of the Royal Bank at Warkworth, was present and spoke on accounting and banking, and promised satisfaction to those doing business with his bank.

W. E. Davidson was appointed auditor, and following is the report: Milk received, 2,697,860 lbs.; cheese manufacturer, 232,713 lbs.; cost of manufacturing cheese, $7,142.39; average price a lb., 16.86 cents; cost of manufacturing a lb., 3.06 cents; total value of cheese produced, $39,237.82; butter fat for season, 86,954.6 lbs.; number of standards of milk, 889; lbs. of milk required for a lb. of fat, 31.2; net price of standard of milk, $35.75; average milk test for season, 3.2; average price a lb. for butter fat, 36 and two-seventhe cents; one lb. of butter fat produces 2.67 lbs. of cheese; lbs. of milk required for a lb. of cheese, 11.55. Cream account —Lbs. of whey fat, 4,294.8; received from whey fat, $1,229.91; cost of separating, $386.53; patrons received from whey cream, $843.38; average price of whey fat a lb., 28.6 cents; butter used by patrons, 4,-265 lbs.; value of butter used by patrons, $1,204.30; balance on hand, $103.87.

EUROPE SHIVERS IN COLD SPELL

England Suffers Most Because of Shortage of Coal.

HEAVY SNOWFALLS.

By Clifford L. Day, United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Europe was decked in Christmas card fashions of snow an icicles Friday as a result of the coldest snap of the season.

Shivery blasts of wind caused hardship in thousands of heatless homes, especially in England where the aftermath of the coal stoppage still was making it difficult to obtain sufficient fuel in urban areas.

There was no lack of coal at the pit heads, but transportation facilites were not up to the job of moving so much as was needed in so little time.

Sleet, snow, and hale storms pounded parts of Scotland, Northern England, and Northern Europe, but the storms were intermittent, invariably being interspersed with sunshiny intervals.

Many steamers were ice-bound in northern waters. In 64 Swiss resorts the snow today averaged more than 18 inches in depth and several falls of snow of three feet were reported.

Temperatures at these resorts varied from zero to ten degrees above.

Ten French resorts today reported snow averaging a foot in depth with temperatures varying from 8 to 24 degreees above zero. Not even King George of England was able to relieve the suffering of the aged poor on the royal estate at Windsor. The king ordered eight carloads of coal as a Christmas gift to be distributed among his poorer tenants but the cars were lost in transit on Dec. 11, and were only located today.

DUKE OF YORK DISRUPTS PLANS OF PRINCE HENRY

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(United Press).—The trip of the Duke and Duchess of York to Australia, beginning January is reported to have seriously disrupted the plans of the Duke's younger brother, Prince Henry.

With the Duke's acceptance of the invitation to visit Australia, Prince Henry had to post pone his foreign service until next summer, that he might fill his brother's engagements while the latter is away.

"It's the very latest—"

To most women nothing is so old as last year's hat. Unless it be her last year's dress, or coat, or skirt-length.

Men can't understand it. They laugh genially at such simple-minded folly. And while they laugh, they are thinking of how queer the old car looks, even though it's only two seasons old, and how old-fashioned last year's neckties make a man seem.

In other words, men are just bout the same as women when it comes to wanting "the latest." It's a deesire shared by everybody who is young in spirit, eager to be in on everything new and different. It's the most human thing in the world—to want the newest, the latest, the best.

The surest way to know what is the latest is to read advertising. The advertisements in this newspaper show you what the new styles in millinery are. They'll settle the question of skirt-lengths. They'll show the newest models in overcoats; in touring cars and sedans and roadsters.

And they'll keep you posted on the latest developments in everything that makes up life. The newest theories of nutrition, the most recent additions to radio, the latest tooth-paste and silverware and household appliance. . . .

Read the advertisements in the newspaper faithfully. Get the habit. Not tomorrow—but today, at the very latest.

No advertisement dares to be out-of-date

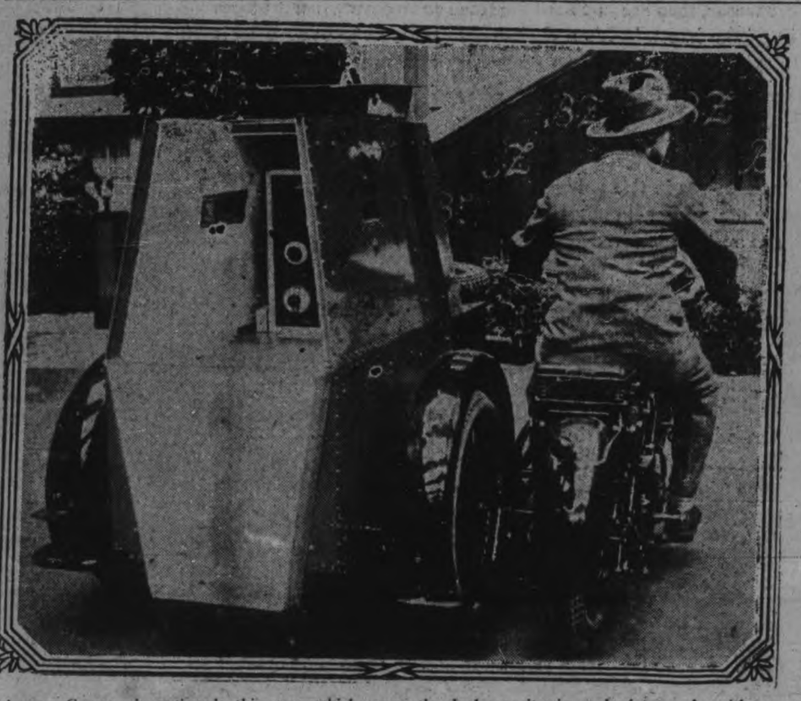
At the TOP RIGHT is seen Mrs. Barclay Warburton, formerly Rosamonde Lancaster, who obtained a Paris divorce in July. There have been persistent rumors that she will be the next Mrs W. K. Vanderbilt II., after the annulment decree is formally promulgated. The ground for the action of the Catholic church is similar to that in the Marlborough case, namely, that Virginia Fair was coerced into agreeing to marry the Vanderbilt heir.

Ven. Archdeacon George Warren, archdeacon of York, who, in commenting on the Marlborough-Vanderbilt marriage annulment, says that the judicial offices of the church of Rome are not required within the realm of England and that the Church of England does not acknowledge the Pope's authority in Britain.

Miss Marion Talley, youthful Kansas City opera star, who walked out on an audience of 1000 in New York, because a $3000 deposit was not made in advance.



A new German invention is this portable radio receiving and transmitting apparatus, housed in the sidecar of a motorcycle. The radio apparatus is housed in an armored case, which serves the dual capacity of protecting and shielding. The equipment for both transmitting and receiving is entirely self contained on the vehicle, and the set is ready for use for either purpose by simply opening the door of its case. Photo shows a view of the new German radio transmitting and receiving apparatus.

Lady Mosley has dropped her title for the occasion and in her speeches roundly condemns the "idle rich." Since the above was written her husband was elected.

Carlos Buhler, former Canadian musician, divorced by his wife in London, England, for neglect. Mrs. Buhler is a daughter of the late Sir Edmund Walker.

The aggregate age of this woman and her six brothers is 532 years! They are the children of Mr. and Mrs Job Tucker, of Bradford-on-Avon, England, and practically all of their long lives have been lived right there. SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"You tell her!" Bob Hathaway motioned wearily toward Cherry, who stood, drooping and trembling, beside Faith. Then his tall, lean body slumped suddenly to the pinao bench, and his disordered chestnut head went down hopelessly upon the keys of the piano, which uttered a dull, bass protest. "I thought I could do it, but I can't. Tell her the whole nasty, shameful scheme yourself! I can't hurt her that much myself."

Faith walked stiffly, blindly, like a sleepwalker, to the davenport and sank down upon it. "Sit down, Cherry. No, not by me. I—— don't think I want you to touch me—for a little while."

"Oh, Faith! Don't turn against me!" Cherry flung herself at Faith's feet, bowing her bright head upon her sister's knee. Faith's hands remained rigidly locked in her lap, and her eyes fixed in somber contemplation of a tragedy which she still did not understand. "Nobody knows what I've gone through since—since I told Mr. Cluny I'd marry him. I just did it because I was driven crazy by Albert Littleson's awfulness and Dad's whipping me, and Faith's being so good to me, so that I wanted to make up to her—" she was becoming incoherent, and her little hands were clawing frantically at Faith's dress.

"Go on, Cherry," Faith said dully, but, as if from years of habit, her cold hands unclasped and went slowly out to grasp her little sister's.

"Oh, Faith! You're so good to me, so good, so good! And I'm a little beast! I hate myself, and everybody else hates me! You said you weren't crazy about Bob! I asked you, you know I did! And I thought if you didn't love him very much, it would be all right if I could make him—make him want me again. He used to! He made me crazy about him—yes, you did!" she cried passionately, as Bob struck the piano a sharp blow with his clenched fist.

"Cherry's telling the truth, Bob," Faith said tonelessly. "I knew she still cared for you—I thought it was a way out for her—"

"And you didn't give a tinker's damn about me!" Bob Hathaway exploded, his blue eyes glaring at her with astounded incredulity. "You knew I'd lost every atom of feeling I'd ever had for her, and yet you'd sic her on to me—"

"You can say anything you like to me," Faith interrupted him with that toneless, dead voice of hers, "it's true. I would do anything to save Cherry. Go on, Cherry."

"Well," Cherry began, a note of triumph breaking through her sobs, "I was just desperate, simply desperate! That piece coming out in the papers tomorrow—I didn't know what to do! All I could think of was that I had to make Mr. Cluny not want to marry me, because I knew he wouldn't let me off just because I would ask him. He'd just laugh and chuck me under the chin and remind me of all—all the things he's bought for me, and all the things he's going to do for me—oh, you see I couldn't just ask him to let me off! After the announcement in the papers and everything!

"So I thought if Mrs. Seymour Allbright told him she'd seen Bob making love to me, and had heard me say I would marry him, why Mr. Cluny would be so angry and his pride would be so hurt, he'd be glad to get rid of me! And—and, oh, don't you see, Faith?" she pleaded, carrying Faith's hands to her lips and kissing them frantically.

"Yes, I see!" Faith said slowly, as if waking from a nightmare. "You figured that if Mr. Cluny jilted you, Bob would have to marry you, or be branded as a cad by his uncle and his family. Was that it?" She drew her hands out of Cherry's clasp with one sharp tug.

"There you have it!" Bob Hathaway sprang to his feet and strode to the davenport, looking down upon the huddle of Cherry with blazing hatred in his eyes. "That's the precious little scheme she cooked up, and that's where we stand now! Can you blame me for behaving like a lunatic, Faith? No matter how the mess is fixed up, I'm the goat!"

"But what did you say to Mrs. Allbright?" Faith, asked with painful slowness, if she were still half unconscious in the clutches of a nightmare.

"I don't know what I said!" Bob's hand again ravaged his thick mop of chestnut curls. "Something insane about Cherry's being a great little kidder, and that it was Uncle Ralph she was engaged to, not me. Stumbled all over myself, trying to think faster than I talked. Said something about her showing me how she'd accepted Uncle Ralph—acting it out to convince me that the old duffer could really make love. Not that Cousin Alice believed a word I said! She just stood there and looked at me, as if she thought I'd gone crazy, and I knew I had! Then she sailed out, looking as if she meant to keep right on sailing until she anchored in Uncle Ralph's house, to tell him the whole tale. And I'll bet that's what she's doing, this very minute!"

"Well," Faith drew a long, shuddering breath and stared up into his face until the color slowly drained out of it, leaving it pinched and white. "Well—you seem to have gotten yourself out of it already, rather neatly." Her voice was edged with bitterness.

"Faith!" the man bent and put his hands on her shoulders, gripping them hard, "I may have blundered like a fool, but what in the name of Heaven could you expect me to do—accept Alice Allbright's congratulations, let myself be forced into an engagement with a girl I don't love and who is already engaged to my own uncle?

"Think of someone besides Cherry for a minute, Faith. I'm not asking you to think of me—I've found out tonight that I'll never rank anywhere near Cherry in your heart—" his voice broke, and the grip on her shoulders hurt her, but he went on immediately, "Think of Uncle Ralph! He deserves better of Cherry than she was plotting to hand out to him. Imagine it! An old man, who had made a formal and honorable proposal to a girl and to her parents, being jilted by a silly little flapper in a disgraceful, public way like that! God knows why he wants her, but if he does, why, that's his funeral.

"And if he doesn't, after she tells him what happened tonight, or after Cousin Alice gives him her version of the affair, why, it's up to him to break the engagement. But I'm not going to be a party to any double-crossing scheme like Cherry tried to pull tonight. And if that makes you hate me so that you never want to see me again, why—I'm more sorry than you can know, but I can't help it!"

Without warning, he dropped to the seat of the davenport beside her, and her head, with its wide-open, staring, tragic brown eyes, against his shoulder, and murmured, in a voice so tender that for the moment it blotted out for her the violence and harshness of the scene that had taken place in that gay little room that night:

"Oh, my dear, my dear! What a blind, foolish, unselfish darling you are!"

A Substitute Santa

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

In Six Parts—Part V

HERE AND THERE IN ENGLAND

To the far ends of earth Bok next drove like the wind,
They whirled o'er the mountains to far Hindustan,
Through China and Egypt and Russia and Spain
To distant Australia and Isles of Japan,
And in every country the reindeer would pause
To give Mrs. Santa a peep at her list,
So no little children who'd hung up a sock
Would wake in the morning and not find a gift.
But it didn't take long at the rate that they sped,
For millions and millions of folks, big and small,
Cared nothing of Christ or a glad Christmas time,
And didn't believe in a Santa at all,
But she saw some wee children, so sweet in their sleep,
And some who were restless on small beds of pain,
That she left them a doll, or some beads, or a toy,—
And they never will know how the pretty gifts came!
The Isles of Great Britain were next on her list
And she leaned from the sleigh to be sure she saw clear,
For often had Santa recounted the scenes
Of a gay English Christmas of warmth and good cheer.
Throughout the whole land the Yule candles burned bright,
And everywhere tinsel and lights trimmed the trees.
With holly and mistletoe houses were gay
While laughter and merriment rose on the breeze.
In doorways and courtyards the carolers met
With lanterns and song, as in days long gone by,
And snatches of carols and chiming of bells
Were wafted to her as she passed by on high.
She saw in the pantries the huge Christmas cakes
And giant plum puddings, oh ten pounds at least,
All ready to pour fragrant spirit drops o'er,
Then, lighted, to serve burning blue at the feast.
Into many great homes had the Yule log been brought
With laughter and shouting and jolly good cheer,
And dear Mrs. Santa was simply entranced,
But Bok had to quiet the prancing reindeer,
For they knew little people were hanging their socks
And laughing and tumbling were going to bed,
So soon Mrs. Santa must hurry and dress
In her fur betrimmed suit of a bright cherry red.
And cram her pack full with a million gay toys
To slip down the chimneys of cottage and hall
And fill all the stockings and leave beneath trees
The presents so longed for by folks big and small.
At the last place she stopped was a great steaming bowl
That the English so love, and she said, "I've a hunch
It would help us keep warm on our cold ocean trip
If we both had a sip of this famed Christmas punch."

Proceeds amounted to $21.00.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH

A large crowd filled the Gilmour Memorial church on Thursday night on the occasion of the annual Christmas concert of the Sunday school. Supper was served in the basement by the ladies of the congregation, after which the company adjourned to church proper, which was splendidly illuminated by the new gasoline lamps recently installed in the building.

The Rev. W. S. Edgar presided at the rendering of a varied and enjoyable programme by the junior and senior scholars, by a party from School Section No 2. The programme consisted of exercises by the Primary Class under the direction of Mrs. J. Mann; recitations by Hazel Tighe, Braden and Jean Mann, Elmer Tigae, Harry Metcalfe, James Moore, Marjory Mahood and Eunice Hammond; a pageant, "The Revel of Christmas", which turned the clock back several centuries to the days of the Lord of Misrule and the jesters. A motion song and a Christmas cantata by S.S. No. 2 pupils, a solo from Eunice Hammond, a chorus from the young men's class, music by Kenneth Sanderson and Arthur Metcalfe, a dialogue, "The Train to Loon Town" and Hoop drill by S.S. No. 2.

The concluding item, "His Model Wife", depicted the ruse adopted by an impecunious artist, Arthur Everett (Allan Milburn) in his endeavour to maintain himself in the good graces of his wealthy and eccentric aunt Miss Agnes Macpherson (Beatrice McGregor) who, in the desire to save her nephew from sinking into dissipation, issued an ultimatum fixing a time within which he had to marry. Everett wrote to his aunt informing her that in accordance with her wishes, he had married. Unfortunately the lady on whom he had bestowed his affections, declined his offer, and when the aunt announced her arrival in New York, and her intention to visit the studio, a wife had to be found in a hurry. After many misgivings one of Everett's models, "Willy", or Wilhelmina Torrington Montgomery (Betty Edgar), agreed to pose as the wife. Assisting in the scheme were Everett's friend Robert Parks (Claire Grant) and Eleanor Perry (Isabell Anderson). The aunt arrived and the situation was complicated by the addition to the group in the studio, of a wealthy Congressman, John Potts (Clarence Mann, his daughter, Miss Bella Potts (Margaret Mann) who had sat for a potrait by Everett, and Mrs. Munford Wells (Leila Sanderson), a society matron, who made no secret of her conviction that something queer was afoot. Everett, on tenterhooks in the presence of the lynx-eyed ladies, openly dubious of his story was reduced to despair by the arrival of a familiar figure, Patsy (Cora Grant) with an account, long overdue, against him for washing done, and a threat to present the bill to his relations, unless immediate settlement was forthcoming. Finally, Eleanor Perry whose rejection of Everett had precipitated the crisis, confessed the plot, and atoned for her former refusal by accepting him there and then. Willy agreed to become the bride of Mr. Parks, and the play ended with the tearful lamentation of Everett's maid, Mary (Jean Scott), secretly in love with her employer, that she had lost out after having for his sake "thrown over the milkman."

AT CRAMAHE.

NORHAM, Dec. 27. — A very successful Christmas tree and entertainment was held in the Cramahe Baptist church on Thursday evening. A fine night, good roads, a large crowd and a splendid programme were conspicuous features of the evening. Those who did the training deserve great credit for the efficient manner in which the different numbers were rendered. The programme included: A chorus, "Earliest Christmas Morn," by the school; recitation, Gordon Raycraft, "Christmas Greeting"; a monologue, "Miss Prim's Shopping," Ethel McKague; musical number; recitation, "Christmas Thoughts," Leta McKague; song, Primary Class; recitation, Donald Ducie, Garry Raycraft and Frank Palmateer; monologue, Eva Bound; dialogue, "A Chance Encounter," by Mount Pleasant school; song, Ross and Herman Nelson and Albert and William Pettifat; recitation, "The Girl's Part," Neta Sharp; song, Gladys Manzie and Eva Bound; recitation, "My Dolly," Doris McKague; recitation, "Christmas in the Heart," Lincoln McEathron; song, Pictoria McCurty; recitation, "My Favorite Story," Clarence Palmateer; chorus by school; musical number; offering; recitation, "A Christmas Dilemma," Gladys Menzie; recitation, "A Crippled Dolly," Marie Sommerville; musical number; dialogue, "The Minister's Mistake"; tableau, "Nearer My God to Thee"; recitation, "A Christmas Prayer," Kenneth Palmateer; dialogue, "A Bad Mix-up"; song, Mount Pleasant school; dialogue, "Married in Haste"; recitation, "Chrismas," Marguerite Sharp; recitation, "A Christmas Thought," Alva Sharp; "The Old Maid's Song" and "God Save the King."

Beckel, of Castleton, one of the outstanding features of which was the chairmans address which was given by Babel Duncan, one of the youngest members of the school. The programme opened with a chorus by the members of the school. Other numbers were musical selections by "The Trail Rangers," Clarence Massey, Donald Massey, Lloyd Massey, Van Darling and Grant Phillips. AT HIAWATHA.

A very successful and enjoyable evening was spent at the Christmas entertainment and tree, held in Hiawatha Community Hall. A full programme of drills, dialogues and recitations and songs was given. Rev. Mr. Garratt acted as chairman. Mr. Pasker Anderson was door keeper. The tree, which was laden with many beautiful and useful gifts as the humble handkerchief and the delicate basket work, was procured by Messrs. Madden Howard and Rufus Shilling.

The hall was nicely decorated with chains made by pupils of the Public school from wall paper. Some red strings of crepe was also strung around some of the windows.

The six shovels were neatly made by Mr. Egerton Loukes for the song and exercise, "The Snow Brigade."

Mr. George Renwick and Mr. Melville Woods, both of the Trent Valley creameries, were visiting their patrons in this locality last week.

Miss Muriel Thomson is spending the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Thomson.

Mr. M. E. Hinton returned to his home for Christmas at Hastings, on Thursday last. He is spending this week in Toronto, visiting friends and attending the Boys' Parliament.

It is pleasant to relate that the wound that Mr. Andrew Paudish received is healing nicely. He had a very narrow escape.

Some of the people of Hiawatha were disappointed on last Wednesday evening at not being able to attend the Christmas tree at Keene, owing to local concert coming on the same night.

Christmas always brings its surprises. One came to our local teacher when he received a gold signet ring from his pupils, after the Christmas programme on Wednesday.

Mr. Parker Anderson is with his mother, Mrs. Alice Anderson after working some time in the bush.

AT WELCOME.

WELCOME, December 27. — The Wesleyville Sunday school held their annual entertainment and Christmas tree on Tuesday night in the church, which was prettily decorated.

Quite a lengthy programme was given, which showed much training and care and much credit was due Mr. Roy Cornish, the public school teacher, who trained the children.

An enjoyable feature was the carod singing, led by the children, in which all the audience joined.

A pantomine, given by three young ladies, 'Safe in the Arms of Jesus," was very beautiful.

A dialogue, entitled "The Spirit of Christmas," was given by the younger pupils.

The young men put on a dialogue in the form of a debate entitled "The difference between stealing hen roosts and chewing tobacco," which caused much merriment.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the taking of a special collection as a gift to a member of the congregation who is in the hospital.

Santa Claus visited the church during the evening and distributed the presents to the children.

Mr. Cornish was presented with a gentleman's dressing case during the evening.

WARSAW SCHOOL.

WARSAW, December 27. — The Warsaw school held its Christmas closing in the main school room, which was packed. Chairs were placed along the walls and down the aisles to accommodate visitors; boys were in the windows and girls in the smaller room. The room was prettily decorated. There were three choruses by the pupils; recitations by Kenneth McQuag, Ivan Clements, Jean Munro, Zelva Crowe, Dorcas Lloyd, May Payne, Willie Dobinson, Eileen Miles, Russed Greystock, Lucile Herrington, Patricia Blakely, Tom Hawthorne, Rhoda Lloyd, Harold Clifford, Willie Robinson, Harvey Clifford and Irwin Hawthorne; monologues by Laura Payne, Dorothy Hawthorne, and Kenneth McQuag; mouth organ selection by Kezham Mauradiano; readings by Rita Robinson and Cora Crowe, song by Cora Drain, Elsie Moore nad Patricia Blakely, and two dialogues "The Minister's Mistake" and "The Christmas Tree."

After the last chorus, Santa Claus (Hector Thompson) distributed the gifts from the tree.

Each child had brought a gift and each pupil received a gift from some other. The trustees provided an orange, a bag of candy, and a chocolate bar for each pupil, and the teachers, Miss Quinn, and Mr. Blakeley, each gave all their pupils gifts.

After the tree was stripped lunch was served to all. The pupils har brought sandwiches and cake.

Rev. H. B. Herrington was chairman, and at the beginning told the Christmas story.

AT MARMORA.

MARMORA, Dec. 27. — Marmora United Sunday School lived up to its reputation in the annual Christmas entertainment which was given in the Town Hall on Thursday evening. The attendance was good though not so large as on some previous years. Mr. F. S. Pearce, superintendent, was chairman for the evening. Preceding a two part Cantata entitled "The Real Santat Claus,' younger members of the Sunday School gave a talented programme of their own as follows: Recitation, Norman Sopha; Solo, Little Miss Henry; Duet, Grace and Donald Prentice; Mother Goose Rhymes—a group of children impersonating the characters with Miss Jessie Williams as Mother Goose. In the Cantata, Mary Boyd as "Molly" had a heavy role which she mastered with ease and charm. Her two songs, "There ain't no Santa Claus and "I surely must be Dreaming," proved her to be a vocalist of promise. Dougald Sanderson in Part one was a tramp who in Part two becomes transformed into a real Santa Claus. His two songs were well rendered his impersonation in either case being creditable and his attire befitting his character. The book's song by Gladys Williams, Gertie Robson and Beatrice Lee took well as did the Flower Girl's song by three younger girls. The football boys and the soldier boys and soldier girls did well in their respective chorus songs. The comedy was provided by Professor Johnson Big Wig (W. J. Cottrell) who gave two humorous songs, "I'm Professor Johnson Big Wig" and "The Cuckoo Clock" and at the end led the soldier boys and girls. Mrs. F. R. Wells as the irate Mother-in-Law provoked much mirth. At the conclusion of the Cantata, oranges and candies were distributed to the scholars by the two distinguished visitors, namely Santa Claus and the Professor.

PARLIAMENT WILL DISCUSS DOMINION'S FUEL PROBLEM

Production of Coke To Be Encouraged—Freight Rates Considered.

"NATIONAL POLICY."

Toronto M.P. Urges Adoption—Other Members Interested.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The fuel problem has always been a more or less pressing one in Canada, but the indications are that it will take a more prominent place heretofore this winter in the discussions both inside and outside of the Dominion Parliament. The Speech from the Throne intimated that legislation would be brought down to further encourage the production of coke from Canadian coal. There is a question of freight rates on coal from Alberta and the Maritime Provinces before the Board of Railway Commissioners, and the Tariff Advisory Board has a reference asking for increased protection on certain classes of coal.

There are no coal mines in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. A considerable portion of the coal used in these two Provinces comes from the Pennsylvania and Virginia mines, the much shorter haul giving these states a decided advantage over the mines of Alberta and Nova Scotia. For some time, however, there have been agitations to make the rates on Canadian coal low enough that Western Canada coal and coal from Nova Scotia could be brought to the Central Provinces on a competitive basis with that from the United States.

"National Policy" on Coal.

Two resolutions on the order paper when the House of Commons adjourned for the Christmas recess, placed there by T. L. Church, Conservative member for Toronto North-East, call on the Government to provide a "National Policy" with regard to coal. The Alberta members, as well as those from the Maritime Provinces, will also no doubt join in support of further action in this connection.

The Dominion Government instructed the Board of Railway Commissioners some time ago to report on the actual cost to the railways of carrying Alberta and Maritime coal to central Canada, and during the past few weeks steps have been taken to get definite action from the board on this matter early next year.

The reference before the Tariff Advisory Board was initiated by Dominion Coal Company. At present there is a tariff of fifty cents a ton on bituminous coal, but there is a drawback of ninety-nine per cent. when the coal is used to produce coke. The reference asks that the drawback be discontinued and that there be a tariff on anthracite screening which, with all other anthracite, now comes in free. The company advanced the claim that this type enters into competition with the bituminous coal. A tariff on coke, of which there is a heavy importation from the United States, is also asked.

The hearing before the Tariff Advisory Board will be held on January 18, and it is expected that there will be very considerable opposition to the requests of the coal company. There is a suggestion that if the drawback on coke and bituminous coal used to produce coke, which largely affects the steel and associated industries, be continued, there should be a bonus on steel smelted with Canadian coal as against that using coal from other countries. The Tariff Advisory Board does not make tariffs. It submits reports to the Miniseter of Finance, who takes such action as the Government may deem fit.

IRISH NAME LUCKY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27. — Thirteen years ago James Kelly was a bus boy in one of the leading hotels here. The other day he came back as a first class guest. His name used to be Demetrius Kellys, he explained, but when he arrived in this country his friends began calling him Kelly, and later Jim Kelly. The Irish name seemed to bring him luck, he said, as his restaurant in the Rocky Mountains near Boise, Idaho, grew into a chain of eating houses.

There are 800,000 factory workers in the United States who cannot speak English.

THE J.C. Turnbull CO. LTD.

In Peterborough Churches

Murray Street Baptist.

The "Nativity," a cantata given under the direction of Dr. S. J. Graham, choir leader, and Miss Constance Lewis, organist, was exceptionally good. The soloists, Miss Trucie Pearson, Mrs. L. Ingram, Miss Margaret Eastwood, Mrs. Liddell, Dr S. J. Graham and Mr H. H. Graham took their parts in a pleasing manner. Many were surprised and gratified that one who had presided at the organ only a few times in public could carry this difficult service through so acceptably.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

The Midnight Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral was attended by a capacity crowd of people as usual, the impressive High Mass which was solemnized first being followed by two Low Masses, at which the majority of the congregation also assisted. The High Mass was performed by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, assisted by Rev. P. Costello, as High Priest, Rev. W. P. Meagher, and Rev. S. Perdue, C.S.B., as Honorary Deacons, Rev. R. Corkery as Deacon, and Rev. Mr. DeLoughrey of St. Augustine's Seminary, as Sub-Deacon.

The music for the Midnight Mass, always impressive, was especially beautiful this year, and the large choir of the Cathedral, led by J. Minicolo, excelled itself, particularly in the men's section, in its superb rendition of Pietro Yon's Christmas Mass, also in its singing of the "Adeste Fidelis" and "Holy Night." The children's choir was also very effective in the singing for the two Low Masses, with lovely carols that included "Hark, Hark, the Angels" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem." The chancel choir of Rev. Father Finn and the Little Flower choir sang several carols at the beginning of the High Mass, which also had a beautiful opening in several Christmas pastorals played on the organ by Miss Hurley, who also played for the various masses which followed.

On Christmas morning, Low Masses were solemnized at eight o'clock, nine-fifteen, and ten-thirty, the last a High Mass, followed by Benediction, and solemnized by Rev. K. Corkery, assisted by Rev. W. P. Meagher and Rev. G. Maher.

At the conclusion of the Midnight Mass, His Lordship spoke on the observance of the Christmas festival.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH

In the Gilmour Memorial Church, yesterday morning, Rev. W. S. Edgar preached from Psalm 19:12: "Who can understand his errors? Cleanse Thou me from secret faults.

"In the good providence of God, we are privileged to see the last Sunday of another year. As we look back we are impressed by the swift passage of time; the end of every year means for all of us, young and old, that there is one year less of life for us.

"If the coming of 1927 is to challenge us to nobler achievements in the next twelve months, this challenge will come through a careful stocktaking. And yet, who can understanding his errors? It is not easy to read the story of our own hearts. Let us consider some of the things that keep us from a true self-knowledge.

'The first of these things is our own true and busy life. You remember what the people did with Ahab in order to convict him of his blindness to duty, of which the king had been guilty in carelessly letting BenHaded of Syria go free. The prophet disguised himself, and when the king came along, cried out: 'Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle, and behold I was gtven charge of a prisoner whom I was to guard with my life. But as I was busy here and busy there, he escaped.' That is the story of many a life to-day. Busy here and busy there, and the greater interests of life are crowded out. Whatever gains this excessively busy life brings, it is also spelling a great loss. Pascal has a famous saying, 'Half the calamities of the world, come about, because people are not willing to sit down and think.' It has been shown again and again that if a man does more acting than thinking, if he leaves no hour in his day and no day in his week, for calm, brooding thought, inevitably there will come a crash. The pace that kills, even though it kills by inches, is suicide, just as truly as throwing oneself into the river.

"A second thing that hinders true self knowledge is a light view of sin. To treat sin lightly is a very common attitude to-day. Sir Oliver Lodge has said, 'Men of culture are not bothering about their sins.' One eminent English preacher has made the statement that he did not understand why God should feel so aggrieved by Adam's little sin. Many people have entirely banished the word 'sin' from their vocabulary. It is a disturbing word and so the ugly thing is dressed up in soft, fine-sounding phrases. When a man or a woman treads the evil path it is said of him that he is a little gay, or that he has been somewhat foolish; of her, they say she has forgotten herself, or made a mistake. We have adopted a gospel of cheerfulness. It consists in saying to men, 'Don't trouble about your sins.' It rejoiced in the inherent goodness of human nature, in man's wonderful resourcefulness, in his capacity for exalted ideals, in his ability to receive the deep things of the Spirit of God. Many of these optimistic ideas of human nature received a rude shock during the war. The terrible carnage and atrocities revealed to us that beneath all the culture and refinement of our modern civilization, the old nature still lived and only slumbered. Only the frivolous and shallow minded can regard sin as anything less than a monstrous reality in life.

"The third thing that prevents true self-knowledge is a gradual and silent growth of sin.

Everyone has noticed how we are aroused into attention when anything flashes suddenly on us. But when a thing steals upon us gradually without sound of trumpet we are apt not to notice it at all. It is one of the business methods of Satan to get a grip of men gradually and silently.

But there is no sin too powerful to be got rid of, no matter how deep and strong its roots. If our cry be "Wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me?"—the Gospel answers, "Jesus Christ, our Lord." Who can understand his errors? Cleanse thou me from secret faults. Christ will do it. For He is able to save to the uttermost all who come unto God by Him."

Chicago Gives Hootch As Christmas Presents

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 27 (United Press).—Chicago people gave away $10,000,000 in liquor as Christmas presents, Health Commissioner Herman Bundeson estimated here today.

"Ninety to ninety-two per cent. of this liquor was poison," he said. "A very small percentage was genuine. This poison is not harmful enough to kill or blind a man immediately, but it contributes to an inevitable breakdown if enough of it is consumed."

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S TREE TRIMMINGS

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily hopped past the Hollow Stump School, the Lady Mouse Teacher crept out to speak to the old rabbit gentleman. The Lady Mouse had tied a pink ribbon on her tail, not so much to look stylish as to keep her tail from being stepped on when the animal children recited their lessons.

"Is any thing the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily when he saw the Lady Mouse holding up her paw to stop him, like a traffic policeman. "I mean is the school on fire or are any of the little boys and girls playing tricks that you want me to see?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Oh, nothing like that," squeaked the Lady Mouse. "But I saw you coming and I was wondering if you knew where I could get some Christmas tree trimmings."

"It is too early to trim Christmas trees," said the bunny.

"Oh, I'm not exactly going to trim a tree," went on Miss Mouse. "But in one of my classes there is a poor little pussy girl, whose father and mother have very little money. She heard the other animal children talking about buying Christmas tree trimmings at the three and four cent store, and, I know Mewie, which is the little thing's name—I know she felt sad. She will not be able to buy any bright things for her Christmas tree, if, indeed, she has one."

Down into his pocket went the paw of Uncle Wiggily, and the Lady Mouse teacher heard the jingle of money.

"No! No! Not that!" squeaked Miss Mouse. "It is very generous of you, but I think it would be much better to show Mewie, if you could, how to get her own Christmas tree trimmings, rather than to give her pennies to buy them."

"Perhaps it would be," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "It would make her more independent like. But how is it you can come out of school to speak to me? What is going on in there?"

"Oh, the children are very good," answered Miss Mouse. "I let Baby Bunty have charge of the classes while I crept out to speak to you. But I must hurry back. Now do you think you could show Mewie a way to get Christmas tree trimmings without spending money which she hasn't got and can't get. Do you?"

"I think so," said Uncle Wiggily,

He hopped down the cellar steps.

twinkling his pink nose. "But can Mewie come out of class?"

"Oh, yes, I'll excuse her," squeaked Miss Mouse. "She has been very good, and studies well. I'll send her out to you and if you can cheer her up please do so."

"I will," promised the bunny, and pretty soon Mewie came out, trailing her long, fluffy tail behind her. Mewie smiled when she saw Mr. Longears, and he smiled at her as he said: "Come along with me, pussy girl, help me find an adventure and I will help you find some trimmings for your Christmas tree."

"Oh, do you think you can?" purred Mewie, clapping her paws.

"We shall see," said Uncle Wiggily. And he was wondering and wondering how he could get ornaments of red, blue, gold and green color without buying them at the six and seven-cent store. Then, all of a sudden, a pine cone from a tree near the Hollow Stump School fell down and hit Uncle Wiggily on the head.

"Ha! That gives me an idea!" cried the bunny gentleman.

"I thought it gave you a bump!" laughed Mewie.

"Well, ideas often come from bumps," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "And my idea is that we can make Christmas tree trimmings from pine tree cones by gilding them and silvering them and painting them with bright colors."

"Oh, goodie!" cried Mewie, who forgot all about being poor in the joy of making something. She and Uncle Wiggily went to the woods. They gathered pine cones of many shapes and sizes. They found balls from the sycamore tree and long brown bean pods from the locust tree. They also found large nuts from the horse chestnut tree.

All these they carried to Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. The bunny gentleman had pots of paint of many colors, and he had gilding and silvering powders. Soon he and Mewie had made many ornaments from the pine cones, the balls, the nuts and the beans. And when wires were fastened to them, they were all ready to hang on the Christmas tree. While Mewie was painting a long cone a red color, the Fuzzy Fox jumped out from behind a bush and tried to bite her. But the little pussy girl daubed some red paint on his nose and the Fox thought he had the nose bleed, so away he ran.

So Mewie had all the trimmings she wanted and not a penny was spent. And if the bread knife doesn't cut the paper off the wall to make a kite for the jumping jack, I'll tell you again about Uncle Wiggily.

HUNT OLD IRONS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Dec. 27.—Relics of California's colonists are being sought by scores of antique hunters here. Branding irons of the early ranch days are prized by Californians as fireside pieces. The irons harmonize with the Spanish style interiors which are very popular along the Pacific Coast.

SOLUTION OF SATURDAY'S QUESTIONS.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

SUNSET

When sunset tints the sky with gold
And paints the windows red,
I quite forget about the cold
And gray skies overhead.
Whatever dark behind me lies;
I see ahead the sunset skies
That 'wait the hearts of men at night;
Of men grown weary of the fight.

And what is all our faith, my friend?—
A thought that turns us west
To search the sky, to glimpse the end;
Behold the hope of rest.
We quite forget about the wrong,
The care, the hurt, the labors long;
Because we know that down the years
The sunset of our lives appears.

Yet some the sunset would deny;
Would thrust its hope away,
Would quite forget we need not die
Without the hope of day.
Thank God I have the sense to see;
Whatever storms encompass me;
That at the end the storms will cease;
And sunset tint the sky with peace.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR TUESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1926.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as a fortunate day as Jupiter, Uranus and Neptune are all in benefic aspect.

It is a day for pushing all one's business affairs since the stars are supposed to give foresight and to increase wise judgment.

There is a sign of profit for merchants who should find the post-holiday trade extraordinarily good.

Education is subject to the most stimulating planetary influences which appear to indicate increase of students in schools and colleges.

Many foreign savants will send their sons and daughters to American universities, the seers declare, for the world is to draw close ties of friendship around it through education.

This is an auspicious rule for poets and philosophers who will receive respectful hearing where this configuration prevails.

Conflict between material and spiritual forces will be strong under this planetary government, with a good chance for spread of high ideals.

This is a day most favorable to oil interests and there is the forecast of excitement over new competition among producers.

Travelers who would make homeward trips from Europe should be fortunate if they start while this configuration prevails.

Aviation continues subject to influences making for the greatest progress and development.

Many private owners will operate airplanes and there will be legislation restricting traffic in the sky.

Great increase of intellectual interest is indicated in the prospects for the new year.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a quiet year. Success is indicated through a loan.

Children born on this day probably will be light-hearted and fond of pleasure. They are likely easily to attain prosperity for which most persons work hard.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Above you see the type of frock that fashion prescribed for women when George Sand first went to Paris in 1831, and decided to adopt masculine attire. The type of street costume that fashion favors today offers no excuse for the modern business or professional woman to follow George Sand's example.

"My thin boots were out in a few days. I forgot to hold up my dress, and covered my petticoats with mud. My bonnets were spoilt one after another by the rain. I generally returned from the expeditions I took, dirty, weary and cold. Whereas my young friends had none of these inconveniences to submit to. I therefore had a long gray cloth coat made, with a waistcoat and trousers to match. When the costume was completed by a gray felt hat and a loose woolen cravat, no one could have guessed that I was not a young student in my first year."

It is thus that Aurore Dudevant explained, at a later period, her adoption of masculine attire when she first went to Paris at the age of twenty-seven in 1831. This unconventional step on the part of Aurore Dudevant—better known as George Sand, sometimes spoken of as the world's greatest woman writer—was much criticised. But she took it as a matter of convenience and economy. She was living in an attic, sometimes depriving herself even of a fire. She simply could not afford to dress as other women did. For it was the year 1831. By means of enormous skirts, gigantic sleeves and wide berthas women contrived to make themselves look almost as wide as they were long. The effect of actual slenderness was retained only by the tightly laced waist.

So unless for the sheer unconventionality of it, you can hardly blame poor Aurore for doffing these outrageous clothes and donning the trousers and long coat and plain hat that were worn by the men of her acquaintance.

If George Sand had lived today non, of her unconventionalities would attract more than passing comment, and there would have been no need for this donning of male attire which was looked upon as one of the greatest of her sins. As a matter of fact, clad in her rather loose trousers and long coat Aurore was more conservatively dressed than she would be in the present-day feminine street costume. Certainly no woman of today can consider her clothes as any sort of handicap. They are actually more comfortable and better suited to all sorts of weather than those of the men.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

DEFAULTING HOUSEWIVES

By Alma Whitaker.

I have been listening to a lot of speeches recently—mostly male. A young orator made one of them, before a large audience of federated clubwomen.

The dear chap was very emotional and oratorical. He told us dramatically. "The American home has ceased to function." He drew painful pictures of neglected homes and children and absentee mammas. Some of us probably wondered if it was not a bit wicked of us to be there, forming a nice attentive audience to him, whole maybe our homes were on fire.

Another fellow was an "educationalist." He, too, was talking to women. His subject was Juvenile Crime—which we gathered was all mamma's fault. This time it was because she did not take a sufficiently passionate interest in immigration, Americanization, civic affairs, hygiene, divorce law reform, revision of judicial procedure and a few other little matters. But he, too, conveyed the idea that mother was a good deal of a dastardly slacker and was probably neglecting her home into the bargain.

In the meantime, under the presidency of Mary Sherman, the national federation of women's clubs has been quietly making a survey of the American home. Some of their information is astonishing.

Just take one set of figures, that prove conclusively via every form of available statistics and the census returns that 92% of the women of the country do all their own housework. Only eight out of every hundred housewives employ household help.

They have also discovered that an amazing number of homes are still without light, water and heat laid in. Thousands of women still have to carry every drop of water used for household purposes into the house from the outside. And this even on farms where the latest type of farm implements are used to work the land. One farm that boasts four tractors and up-to-date equipment all round, has no household plumbing in the farmhouse, is still lighted by oil lamps and candles although electricity is within reach, and still burns wood in the old cook-stove. And mother does all the work for a family of nine persons! The shameless slacker!

It also transpires that an enormous number of those 92% of women who do all their own housework are either supporting or helping to support families as well. And the homes of such women are often better ordered, cleaner, and more charming than those in which mamma has no outside work. An enormous number of women employed in gainful occupations are supporting others besides themselves, and 82% of the savings accounts are in the names of women! La, la! aren't they a lot of shameful, extravagant slackers?

But in spite of all that any gentleman with an urge to orate on the downfall of the American home can always get a large attentive audience—and he would regard it as further evidence of shameless slacking if he didn't. Quite an important part of our national duty is to listen to gentlemen telling us how slack we are.

I knew a majority of the women in both the audiences referred to. But I don't know one of them that has a neglected home, and precious few of them employ any sort of household help. Yet they find time to serve on civic and national committees and study conditions and do their bit towards bettering things. They probably knew a great deal more about some of the conditions the speakers talked on (and hurled reproaches about) than the gentlemen themselves. But no one was rude enough to say so. The slackers!

FOOD AND HEALTH

DIET FOR COLDS

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.

We are apt to think of all our modern conditions as being unduly complicated. This is, no doubt, true to some extent, but there are exceptions. Don't you remember the old days when we "fed a cold and starved a fever?" The mustard bath and the over-crowded breakfast tray?

Today this is all simplified. We no longer stuff a cold for the simple reason that we know a cold is an incipient fever. I am therefore, outlining a diet that in many ways is related to a diet for more severe fevers.

When a cold is beginning to manifest itself, the first care should be to cleanse the system entirely by a complete evacuation of the bowels. As to the method, this must depend on the individual and his digestion. A warm enema may be the safest for certain individuals. A dose of castor oil is best for another, while magnesia will "do the trick" for still another.

Which brings us to the second stage, that is, planning the diet itself. This is so simple as to be summed up in a few words. If you prefer not to burden your mind with too many details just remember that there is inevitably at the beginning an acid condition in the system. While, during health it is just as important to have acid forming foods as it is to have alkaline, when the blood begins to be more acid than alkaline, than is the time to have alkaline foods predominate in the diet.

Again, to simplify, one might sum it up by saying, eat plenty of fruits and vegetables.

It is sometimes helpful, however, to give specific direction. So next time you have a cold follow certain rules. First cleanse the system completely; second, cut down the quantity of the food eaten materially. If there has been a period of what is popularly known as over-eating, miss one meal or even two and you will feel all the better; third, select your diet from the following list: apples, apricots, bananas, beans, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, cucumbers, dates, grapes oranges, melon, peaches, potatoes, spinach and tomatoes.

Let each meal be composed of as few dishes as possible. For example, breakfast of dry toast and a slice of melon or a small glass of grape juice and a cup of cereal coffee. Luncheon, a cup of celery broth with two or three unsweetened crackers. The dinner, after these two meals should be planned, according to condition of the patiente but simplicity should still be the key note.

ANY WAY YOU WISH.

There is much latitude in evening gowns this season, some are without backs and high in front, others are cut into a very deep V in front and also in back, others are low in front and reach the neckline in the back, while others are high both back and front.

BLUE AND GREY

The sport frock of plaid taffeta is one of the new offerings from Parisian couturiers. This one is particularly interesting with its tiered skirt, scarf neckline and close sleeves. It is developed in many shades of blue on a gray ground.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

Every woman with a family ought to try to plan some sort of after-dinner or after-supper diversion for every evening—or every evening when it is possible to spare a half hour or so before bedtime. Children always like to play games at this time, and though the father of the family may profess indifference to this sort of sport he usually is drawn into the fun before it is over. A good plan is to keep a little scrap book or note book and paste, into this clippings describing various "stunts" and games that may be played at this time, or to jot down notes of those you hear about. A box of anagrams provides much amusing and instructive diversion.

Peter Piperisms have become quite popular lately, and if your children are not too young they may enjoy making them. Put the anagrams in the center of the table face downward. Let each draw one and then in turn let him recite some alliterative sentence using the letter drawn as the initial of each word. If you draw A you may say something like this: "Artful Arthur asked after adorable Amy's ancient Aunt Ann." For B this was once given: "Betty Brown broiled beautiful bloaters before Benjamin's beautiful bride."

There are all sorts of games that may be played with pencil and paper. Suggest some subject and get each one to draw a picture of it and then placing all the drawings on the table take a vote for the best. Your subject may be the name of a popular song or some historical character' Yankee Doodle, Napoleon, Little Miss Muffet, Old Black Joe might be used for suggestions. From magazines and picture supplements of the newspapers collect the photographs of well-known persons and have a contest to see which one present can tell the names of the most.

Much amusement can be had trying to spell words backwards. Let everyone spell his own name backwards and see which one can do this most glibly.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT.

(United Press Fashion Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—(United Press).—Gold metallic lace forms several of the smartest evening gowns of the Winter season. These are usually made on long-waisted, slightly bloused lines with the skirts adorned with aprons or panels to break the monotony of the lace design. Girdles of gold lame may be used at the waistline.

Underslips may be of gold metal cloth or of pastel-hued chiffon or crepe de chene. V-jumpers of gold lace accompany velvet skirts for afternoon occasions and these jumpers may be bought in almost any blouse shop for around $12.

Nothing is considered too glittering this season and thus the gown combined of gold and silver lame is not deemed too blatant. One such gown combines a silver lame bodice of long-waisted lines with slender sleeves and a silver lame skirt of narrow width adorned with four pleated and scalloped panels of gold lame. The neckline of this gown is cut square in front and slightly rounded at the rear. A flat girdle of silver extends about the waistline.

The Yale Harvard football game proved that collgeians continue to wear clothes that are purely collegiate. Young men in coonskin coats, derby hats and loud mufflers were so well represented that the wearer of a cloth coat and soft hat was most conspiciously drab. Girls in fur coats of sports variety with felt hats of blue or red, accompanied the gaudy males.

Heavy hosiery conveyed the fact that flappers are more interested in comfort than in beauty. Corsages of blue or red afforded a colorful effect to the otherwise rather fur-drabed assemblage.

Muffs will out. Especially at football games. We counted at least ten of these heirlooms which we presumed had fled into oblivion with earmuffs. A young Miss in a smart mink coat of straight lines carried the tiniest melon-shaped mink muff imaginable and it looked distinctly smart. Her companion wore a black caracul coat with huge mink cuffs trimmed with tails and she utilized her cuffs as a muff.

OLD MASTERS

In a drear-nighted December,
Too happy, happy tree,
Thy branches ne'er remember
Their green felicity:
The north cannot undo them
With a sleety whistle through them
Nor frozen thawings glue them
From budding at the prime.

In a drear-nighted December,
Too happy, happy brook,
Thy bubblings ne'er remember
Apollo's summer look;
But with a sweet forgetting
They stay their crystal fretting,
Never, never petting
About the frozen time.

Ah! would 'twere so with many
A gentle girl and boy!
But were there ever any
Writhed not at passed joy?
To know the change and feel it,
When there is none to heal it
Nor numbed sense to steal it—
Was never said in rhyme.

Pirates Break Losing Streak By Defeating The Greenshirts

ST. PATS LOSE TO PITTSBURGH IN FAST GAME

Darragh Decides Contest After Taking Puck From Behind Mesh.

TIED IN FIRST

Langlois Places Teams on Even Terms by Needed Tally.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec., 27. — (Canadian Press) Pittsburgh broke its losing streak of six straight at the expense of the St. Pats, of Toronto. here Saturday night in a brilliantly fought game, 3 to 2. The Pirates came from behind to turn apparent defeat into victory. Darragh, unassisted, decided the contest with a pretty tally after he had snatched the puck from behind the mesh. It was an opportune score which gave the Pirates troupe a well earned triumph. The Pirate outfit was not to be denied victory. It followed up its opportunities and not once did it wilt before the sweeping onslaught of the visitors, who tallied in the early period.

Using Langlois, late of the New York Americans, as a battering ram, Pittsburgh dropped numerous shots at goal tender Roach. It was Langlois who game the Pirate aggregation its needed tally. He plachis game on even terms after his mates fought stubbornly, but futile in the second period.

Pittsburgh and the St. Pats, of Toronto, were dead-locked at the end of the first period. The game started out tamely but it was not long until both teams were hammering away at their respective goals for an early advantage. Several opportunities were afforded the Toronto sextette. After 7.22 of play Bailey, unassisted, sent the disc whirling through goal tender Worters legs for the initial tally. Bailey's counter was a dazzling piece of work for he stood at a difficult angle to annex it.

Not to be outdone by the clever work of Bailey, McKinnon, Pirate defence man, came back and equally duplicated the performance. Taking the puck from the face-off McKinnon skated down the center of the ice, weaved his way through the Toronto defence and like a flash shot before Roach, goal tender, had a chance to stave off the score. His point came at 8.13. There was no more scoring during the last ten minutes of the first period. Both teams battled to and fro without gaining an edge. The Pirates entered the contest minus the services of Cotton. He was badly battered up following the Eastern trip.

Toronto took the lead in the second period through the stick work of Carson, a spare, close to seven minutes of the stanza elapsed when Carson penetrated the Pirate's defence. His shot was partially blocked but the puck passed the right side of Worters' legs.

Pittsburgh tried in vain to even the count, but its efforts proved futile. It bombarded the Toronto goalie with shots but Roach shook them off as quickly as they fell. Toronto's second forward line livened the contest when it took the ice in the closing minutes of the second period. It attempted to enhance the St. Pats margin with long-distances. Goal tender Worters had his hands full during the short spell shaking off a volley of near scores by some excellent safety work.

Langlois, new Pirate defence man, making his home debut, impressed favorably during the first two set-tos. On several occasions he broke up belated rallies. The Toronto defence crumpled before the slashing attack of the Pirates in the closing period. Two tallies enabled the home skaters to come from behind to break their protracted slump.

Going into the third period with a one-point handicap the Pirate troupe made short work of the St. Pats, once their onslaught began moving. Langlois gave Pittsburg the counter which knotted the score in the third period. He took the puck down the ice, and twisting squirming his way, broke through the Toronto defence. Nearing the goal Milks passed the washer to Langlois, who shot cleanly into the mesh. Darragh later on in the period, turned the tide with a pretty tally when he snatched the puck behind the net. He skated around the mesh and before goal tender Roach wheeled around to thwart off the goal, the disc had nestled in the net.

Competition at Tia Juana, Mexico, race track, has considerably "thickened" since the arrival of the clever Canadian jockey, Billy Munden, of Montreal. Robert Jones, nearest rival for winners during the year, Jones, up to December 10, had rode 116 winners, while Munden lagged only eight behind, having rode 108 winners. Both boys seek saddle honors for the year, and thus far at the lower California track have just about evened up. Photo shows Billy Munden.

AFTER APPEARANCE BY RACING YACHTS

Many Affected by New Rules of Yacht Racing Association.

LONDON, December 27. Canadian Press. — England's big racing yachts will be considerably altered in appearance before they appear next season.

Among the best known of the many affected by the new rules ofthe Yacht Racing Association are the the Britannia, Lulworth, White Heather and Shamrock, the alterations being made to conform with the new international rating.

Boats over 70 feet must now have their masts cut down and their sail area reduced before they can race under the new measurement rules.

The Yacht Racing Association requested that the national dinghy class be made international. It has made great strides in the past two or three years it is stated, and international races would make the interest still keener.

MENIE TEAM HAS STRONG LINE-UP

Interest Rapidly Developing in Town Hockey League at Burnbrae.

NEW UNIFORMS

BURNBRAE, Dec. 27.—With the Menie hockey team once more definitely launched into the field of conflict, interest in the hockey situation is rapidly developing. While the foundation of this year's team will be much the same as that which put up a stubborn fight against strong odds in the Town League last season, many new faces will be seen. To Legin with, Menie has the good fortune to be able to claim Ted Owens, the good little goalie, who kept the Mill in the running last year. Ted has taken up residence in East Seymour and is anxious for another season to begin. Shillinglaw and Hay, last year's defence stalwarts, are both available again, while Rannie and Linn, last year's wing players, will certainly start the 1926-27 season. Menie have lost their best player, Hume, centre ice expert, who recently was operated upon for appendicitis. Last year Hume was one of the star players in the league, a wonderful stick-handler, a sure check and packing a wicked shot. The league executive have allotted Menie three men who should be very useful. Kerr, former High School and Clerk star, has been with Lakefield for some time, but returned to town recently. He can play either centre or defence and will fill a gap acceptably. Coulter is a decidedly useful wing man, while Walt Owens will be a good defence sub. Last year's subs, Rev. Daniel, defence, and Anderson, wing, will be available if needed. Some of the players are practising regularly and Manager Rannie is desirous of holding team practices during the coming week in readiness for the start after the New Year.

When the Menie team take the ice this year they will be decked out in brand new uniforms, bearing the time-honoured Menie symbol, the crossed hockey sticks, surmounted by the letters M.H.C. The old colours, yellow and black, will be used again.

ENJOY HOLIDAY AFTER ACCIDENT

Three People Go Over 60-Foot Bank in Car and Escape Death.

MINOR INJURIES.

HAMILTON, Dec. 27.—Edwin B. Gastle, his wife, and an 11-year-old daughter escaped death as by a miracle before noon on Christmas Day when their automobile, in collision with another vehicle on the Ancaster Mountain, plunged over a 60-ft. embankment, and was wrecked by rude boulders.

Miss Gladys Brown and Miss Barkfield of Ancaster, occupants of the other car, also were injured. Miss Brown suffered a broken ankle and injuries to her back. Their car did not leave the road.

Mr. and Mrs. Gastle and daughter were flung from the car after it turned over once, and luckily escaped being pinned under its heavy weight when it turned over a second time. Strange to say, they were able to walk to the top of the embankment where another car passed and conveyed them to Brantford, where they had Christmas dinner with friends.

The accident happened near Bulmer's ice cream parlor on the long hill which the Provincial highway follows from Dundas Road to Brantford. Three cars figured in the accident. One car was stationary. Its owner was adjusting chains. The road was icy. Mr. Gastle was upbound. A third car driven by Miss Gladys Brown of Ancaster, in which Miss Barkfield of the same village was a passenger, was downbound.

As both upbound and downbound vehicles reached the stationary car, the automobile driven by Miss Brown, it is said, skidded and crashed into Mr. Gastle's car. The latter car was swerved toward the edge of the steep embankment. Mr. Gastle made frantic efforts to stop his heavy car, but it snapped off three stout highway posts, ran over the cable, and plunged to the boulders many feet below.

The top of the car was crashed in. Both doors were torn off. The front wheels and the engine also virtually demolished. Mr. Gastle suffered scratches and bruises. Mrs. Gastle complained on Sunday of injuries to one arm. She was unable to raise it. Her daughter escaped with minor injuries.

Gold Nugget In Goose May Start Ontario Rush

HAMILTON, Dec. 27 —(Canadian Press). — If there is a gold rush in this district, credit for discovering the first nuggets may go to a goose owned by Mrs. E. W. Dartnall, Rymal Station. Mrs. Dartnall, who keeps a large flock of geese, was preparing one for Christmas when she found a gold nugget the size of a bean in its crop. It is believed the bird picked up the gold in the bed of the creek which flows through Spring Valley Farm.

TAKES POISON WHEN REJECTED

Girl's Refusal of Attentions Causes Toronto Man To Suicide.

UNEMPLOYED, TOO.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Because a young woman living at Long Branch had rejected his attentions, Emil Nadeau, a Frenchman, who has a brother living on th Street, New Toronto, swallowed a quantity of strychnine Christmas night and died shortly afterwards.

The dead man had gone to call on the woman, who, however, refused to allow him to enter the house. He then took the poison and fell to the ground. County Constable Robert Wing, who happened to be passing at the time, noticed him rolling on the ground in apparent agony. To the constable, Nadeau said he had taken strychnine and expired shortly afterwards. The coroner, Dr. Roberts, after investigating the circumstances found Nadeau had purchased strychnine from a local druggist and in view of his statement to the officer, an inquest was not deemed necessary.

Nadeau has only been living in New Toronto for a short time and was not employed.

COMMON COLD THE COSTLIEST DISEASE

Average Man Catches Three or Four a Year, the Gift of Neighbors.

The common cold puts more people on the sick list than any other illness. Nine out of ten of us have at least one every six months. The average man manages to "catch" three or four of them a year.

The public and doctors long have regarded the stuffy nose as a trivial complaint, a necessary but not very important evil. As a matter of fact, writes Dr. Frederic Damrau in the January issue of Popular Science Monthly, a cold may be far from a trifling inconvenience, even from a medical standpoint. It may pave the way for some devastating infection, such as pneumonia. You may start out with a cold but end with an ear abscess or even a mastoid infection. It may develop into an even more serious affliction. In short, a cold may indirectly cause death.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company kept statistics over a period of one year to find out how many colds were caught among 6,770 of its clerical employees. There were 2,824 cases so severe as to keep the persons from working, and the average number of days lost in each case was 2.2. But these figures do not take into account the much larger number of sufferers with colds who nevertheless come to work and struggle through their duties as best they can.

Because it keeps so many persons out of work a certain number of days each year and because hardly anyone escapes it entirely, the common cold probably causes more loss in dollars and cents than any other disease. For these reasons, if for no other, it is demanding the attention of physicians as never before. They are learning its causes, and are discovering ways to prevent and treat it.

"The truth of the matter is," says Dr. Damrau, "that drafts, wet feet, failure to wear woollen underwear, and a host of other superstitions taught by our grandmothers have been greatly exaggerated as causes of colds. The majority of colds are due to infection. They come to you as a gift from your neighbor in the trolley car, who, having a cold himself, generously sprays it about as he sneezes in order that others may partake of the benefits of the stuffy nose. It has been proved that droplets containing microbes may be projected across a room twenty feet wide during the course of ordinary conversation. How far, then, can those same droplets travel when propelled by the high-powered artillery of a lusty sneeze?"

The evidence that many colds are of a microbic origin is undeniable. The germs responsible are among the tiniest known; they cannot be seen with the strongest lens of a microscope. A drop of water could contain millions of them.

An important fact about the transmission of these germs is that it is only during the first twenty-four hours of the illness that the ailment may be transmitted to others. In other words, if everybody with a cold could be made to stay at home at least the first day, the most important cause of its spread would be eliminated.

PLANS NEW BRIDGE NEAR BROCKVILLE

Promoter of Enterprise Says Plans Are Well Advanced.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—A new international bridge to cost in the civinity of six million dollars and said to be a "purely private enterprise, is to be constructed across the St. Lawrence River near Brockville, Ont., according to an announcement here today by the Ottawa Board of Trade. It was stated that a hotel owner of New York State, who is the chief promoter of the enterprise, has declared the scheme is sufficiently far advanced to permit of work being started on the new link between the two countries within thirty days. Formal obstacles in the way will delay commencement of erection until probably next summer, it was said here, however.

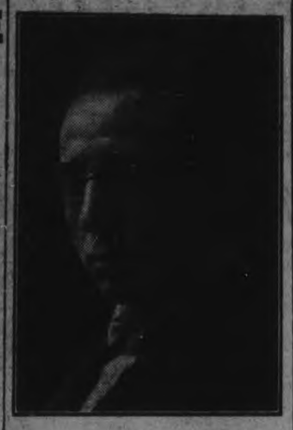
ZIONIST LEADER.



I. M. ELLENSON, B.A.,

Of Toronto, Director of the Zionist Organization for Ontario, who addressed the local Jews with regard to this work.

Local Jews held a mass meeting yesterday to hear I. M. Ellenson, B.A., director of the Zionist Organization for Ontario, and to form a local Zionist Club for the men and a Young Judea Club for the boys. There were over one hundred present, practically every Jew in Peterborough being on hand.

Mr. Ellenson, who is an active worker in the Zionist cause, and a brilliant speaker, made a stirring appeal for funds for the Keren Hayesod, or Palestine Foundation, a fund which is being raised to aid in the development and reconstruction of the Jews' homeland. Local Jews responded well, subscribing $365 in cash at the meeting, with pledges for a great deal more.

After the address a permanent organization of men was formed, to be known as the Zionist Club, for the purpose of advancing the cause in Peterborough. The officers are: E. Chesler, president; Rev. A. Fine, secretary; P. Black, treasurer, and S. M. Zacks and J. Nazimok, executive. A young Judea Club for the boys was also formed. After the meeting the visitor was the guest of honor at a banquet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Swartz, at which twenty-five were present.

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

SILLS KNOCKS OUT BEERY IN CLASSIC SCREEN BATTLE

Mix-up of Stars in "Paradise" Eclipses their former Fight in the "Spoilers," Film Epic.

It is commonly accepted in screen circles that the greatest fistic battle sen on the screen was staged by Milton Sills and Noah Beery, in "The Spoilers," some years ago. Ever since it was released film men have talked of that fight whenever screen battles are mentioned. Up until now it has stood as the screen's classic hand-to-hand battle.

But next week at the Regent Theatre motion picture goers will see the same pair, Sills and Beery, in a battle which critics declare is even greater than that of "The Spoilers." It is a screen battle that will go down through the years.

This fight takes place in "Paradise," First National's latest Milton Sills starring vehicle, which opens to-day at the Regent Theatre, with one of the most brilliant casts that picture lovers have ever seen. Included in the cast in addition to Sills and Beery are Betty Bronson, Kate Price, Charlie Murray, Lloyd Whitlock, Claude King and Ashley Cooper.

ADMITS SLAYING MAN FOR $137 PAID BY WIFE

Loren Patrick Arrested For Killing William Lindstrum.

WOMAN ARRESTED.

Was Tired of Common Law Husband and Wanted Insurance.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press)—Loren Patrick, whom police charge was hired for $137 to kill a man so that the victim's common law wife might collect his insurance and return to her husband, was arrested here yesterday and confessed the slaying. Patrick's victim was William Lindstrom, who was found on December 7 lying on an icy pavement with a fractured skull.

Several days ago, Mrs. Lillian Fraser, Lindstrom's common law wife, was arrested and said she hired Patrick to do the killing so she might collect a thousand dollar insurance policy and return to her husband, as she had grown tired of Lindstrom. She stipulated that the killing must appear accidental, and said she offered to pay a fine of $137 for Patrick and enable him to get out of jail at Crown Point, Indiana.

Mrs. Fraser and Mrs. Catherine Crassler of Crown Point, a friend, are both in jail, the latter being held as an accessory.

FRESNO, Calif., Dec. 27. — An earthquake was felt here and in the surrounding districts to-day but apparently no damage was done.

OBITUARY.

ALBERT BOOTH.

Mr. Albert Booth of Toronto, formerly of this city, died on Saturday night. The funeral will take place on the arrival of the C.P.R. noon train on Tuesday, to Little Lake Cemetery.

CLARKSON W. JAMES.

TORONTO, Dec. 27. —Without warning at the close of a Christmas Day spent with his family, Clarkson W. James, Kings Printer for Ontario, was the victim of a stroke from which he expired fifteen minutes later, at 11.45 p.m. on Saturday, at his home, 10 Hurndale Avenue. Although he had not enjoyed robust health for some time, Mr James had always been able to attend to his duties at the Parliament Buildings, and his death came as a distinct shock to the family and a large circle of friends. He had seemed to be in particularly good spirits on Christmas Day.

MRS. GEORGE HENRY.

The funeral took place this afternoon of Mary Ellen Fowler, wife of George Henry, whose death occurred on Friday.

Mrs. Henry, who was in her 84th year, had lived in Peterborough all her life. She is survived by her husband three small children, Pearl, 8, Margaret, 4, and Mamie, 2; her father, David Fowler, one sister, Helen, at home, and four brothers, Victor of Toronto, and Bruce, Elmer and Harold of Welland.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. William McDonald, of Knox United church, which Mrs. Fowler had attended. Interment was made in Little Lake cemetery.

JOSEPH J. BURNS
(Contributed.)

Joseph R. Burns passed away on Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ward, Romaine Street. He had been ill for the past year and his death was not unexpected. Born in the Township of Cavan, 79 years ago on Bonnybrae Farm, a little west of the village of Bailieboro, he lived about sixty years in Cavan. When he retired from farming he moved to the Village of Millbrook and later to Otonabee Township.

The late Mr. Burns was a noble example of a Christian and temperance man. While yet a young man he early chose the narrow path that leads to righteousness and temperance, and having settled the old account due to his Maker, he continued on to the end of life knowing in Whom he had believed. The Old Time class meeting was his delight. "Joe would never mix up in our mischief and pranks," an old settler said as he recalled the days of early settlers of Cavan Township, which was characteristic of the man who endeavored to keep in the narrow path.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife and six children: Walter, and Mrs. Ward of Peterborough; Joseph of Otonabee; Mrs. E. Steer of Manvers; Mrs. E. Gardner, Millbrook, and Ormond of Oshawa.

The funeral took place on Friday to Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. Mr. Richardson of St. James' United Church, conducted the funeral service. He based his remarks on man's brief life even to the longest.

There is not death:
The leaves may fall
The flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait through Winter hours
The coming of the May.

Axe Men Engaged in Clearing Path For Quebec-Maine Line.

111 MILES LONG.

WASHBURN, Maine, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Nearly a hundred men, going into the woods with axes, began to clear the right of way for the construction of the Quebec-Maine railway, which will reach to English Bay on the Quebec border, a distance of 111 miles. The railway will run through timberlands owned mostly by the International Paper Company. The road will cost five millions and require two years to build. It is sponsored by Senator Gould, who says an agreement between himself and the paper company concerning stumpage and water power rights on the right of way had been sufficiently reached to permit commencement of construction.

Firemen Overcome After Extinguishing Blaze in Basement

Five Men in Hospitals and Two at Home Suffering From Gas—Breaking of Pipe By Fire at Albion Sweets Causes Trouble.

CANDY STORE BADLY GUTTED BY FIRE STARTING IN CELLAR

Five firemen are in the hospital and three at home as a result of being gassed at the fire which broke out about five o'clock this morning at the Albion Sweets, 390 George street. The interior of the building is completely gutted and the entire stock damaged by either fire or smoke.

Acting Captain V. Carr and electrician J. Astels are in the Nicholls hospital, firemen Wilson, Mason and Degen are in St. Joseph's hospital, and firemen Cooney, Smith and MacFarlane have been taken to their homes.

The Bell Telephone operator at a few minutes to five this morning noticed on her switch board that the light for the phone at the Albion Sweets was aglow, but there was nobody at the other end of the phone. She immediately knew that something was wrong as this only occurs when there is trouble or it is a very damp night As the night was clear and frosty she surmised that it was a fire and the wire had become burnt in two. She telephoned the police station and asked them to investigate. When Sergeant Thomas arrived he found the fire had a good start in the basement and immediately turned in an alarm from box 24. At 5:00 Fire Chief Gimblett called to duty the second platoon. Six lines of hose were laid, three at the back and three at the front of the building.

It was a very difficult fire to fight as it was in the basement in the rear part of the store and the only access possible was through a small trap door. There was very little light in the cellar. The flames had a big start when the firemen arrived and the fire proved one of the most stubborn that the firemen have ever been called upon to fight. The heavy dense smoke hindered the men considerably but by seven o'clock they had the fire out.

As the men had completed their task as they thought, the odor of gas was noticed and in a very few seconds—before the men were able to escape—five of them became unconscious and two of the others staggered out of the fire swept building. Masks were immediately put on and the men rescued and rushed to the hospital Dr. O'Brien, who was at the fire, rendered first aid to the men.

During the fire the gas pipe connected to the meter became broken allowing the gas to escape. The meter was in the basement on a wooden partition about 25 feet from the front of the store and it was near this that the pipe became severed.

Chief Gimblett was forced this morning to secure six temporary men to take the places of those in the hospitals. The men in the hospitals are not in any serious condition but it will be some time before they get over the effects of the gas.

Christmas Oyster Held Pearl Valued at $500

WINNIPEG, Dec. 23—Christmas brought cheer to the family of Ralph Underwood, Saskatoon, Sask., in the form of a pearl, which was the size of a large pea, and has been estimated to be worth $500.

The gem was found in a quart of oysters bought on Christmas eve. When Mr. Underwood was busy Christmas morning preparing oyster dressing for the family's Christmas turkey, the pearl was discovered. He immediately presented it to his wife for a Christmas present.

LEAGUE FORMED BY PEDESTRIANS

Arise To Defend Selves From Careless Motorists in St. Louis.

CHECK UP RECORDS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—The pedestrians have arisen to defend themselves against the careless motorists who this year have killed 173 persons in St. Louis.

The Pedestrians Protective Union met last night and decided on a course of action.

Among the things that are to be done:

1. Walk to the home of every person struck down and give him some solace.

2. Walk to the police station and check up on the records of the driver.

Assist in the prosecution of all careless motor car drivers.

One of the principal discussions of the meeting centered about what action was to be taken against the careless motorists who are cutting down the membership of the Protective Union.

There were some of the members who demanded the old "eye for an eye" punishment and wanted the union to go on record as favoring that sort of punishment.

"If a motorist runs down a pedestrian, and it is the motorist's fault, and the pedestrian receives a broken leg—then the motorist's leg should be broken," this advocate said.

No definite form of action was decided upon with regard to the prosecution.

A mummified horse, the first known to history, was unearthed recently in Egypt. It is more than 16 hands tall and estimated to be about 3,500 years old.

NATURE'S FURY WROUGHT HAVOC IN PAST YEAR

Disasters' Death Toll During Year 1926 Was Unparalleled.

700 IN STATES.

September and October the Worst Months in History of Red Cross.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—Nature unbridled this year the most destructive forces it has turned loose upon this continent in the history of the American Red Cross. This is the opinion of officials of that organization who say that fires, winds and floods have concentrated their fury in a way that has set a new record.

Approximately 700 persons have been killed in the United States and hundreds injured, it was announced.

Unparalleled Outbursts.

"Two months, September and October, witnessed an unparalleled outburst of nature's wrath," a Red Cross statement said. During this period occurred the Florida hurricane, the worst disaster in the annals of Red Cross disaster relief since the San Francisco earthquake and fires; the Illinois river valley flood, the Kansas flood, the Iowa flood, two fires in Alaska, which destroyed whole villages; floods in Oklahoma, a tornado in Sandusky, Ohio; the Cuban hurricane, a flood in Mexico and hurricanes in the West Indies.

During October, Red Cross relief workers were caring for disaster victims in eight different communities and more than 24,000 homeless families were under the care of the nation's official relief agency."

DESTROY HIGHWAYS.

Miners Thrown Out of Work By Flooding of Mines.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press)—Six deaths and property damage into the hundred thousands was estimated last night from flood waters that spread over lowlands in Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama. The flood began to recede in most of the inundated area but the crest of the flood was in sight at other points.

Forecasts of further rains in the flooded area, however, caused apprehension, and additional safeguards to protect life and property were taken.

The heaviest property damage and most widespread flood was through Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee in the valley of the Cumerland river and through portions of Tennessee where small streams became raging torrents and spread out over the lowlands.

More than 2,000 people in Nashville were being routed from their homes when the Cumberland inundated 50 blocks of the city. The weather bureau there forecast a stage of 52 to 53 feet before the flood reaches its crest. The Cumberland will probably continue to rise until Wednesday or Thursday, and was higher last night than at any time since 1882.

Tennessee bore the brunt of the flood, many small streams spreading out over lowlands covering highways and causing an estimated damage of $50,000 to roads in the state, according to the state highway commission. The Tennessee River has begun falling near the headwaters.

Eastern Kentucky experienced a second flood within a week as a result of heavy rains Friday night and Saturday, but the waters had begun receding last night. Other portions of Kentucky where streams covered highways and lowlands reported the flood receding except in the western part of the state where the Cumberland crosses and where the Ohio river will probably reach flood stage Wednesday or Thursday. In the vicinity of Paducah, Ky. and Evansville, Ind., farmers living in the lowlands have been warned. Basements of some stores at Paducah will be flooded when the Ohio reaches flood stage at 43 feet there.

Crop damage in the valley of the Ouachita River in Arkansas will be heavy. Arkansas points reported water receding although the White River continued to rise, due to a rise in the Mississippi.

In Mississippi the Tombigbee was expected to reach its crest last night. Scores of people at Columbus, mostly negroes, who were marooned by the Tombigbee's rise, had been rescued last night. Thirty members of the National Guard volunteering their services to protect property there.

Smaller streams in Mississippi were reported falling.

More than a thousand miners were thrown out of work in Alabama when the Warrior River flooded the working of the mines in Walker county. The Bankhead highway between Jasper and Birmingham was made unsafe by the Warrior flood and loss of livestock in the valley was reported heavy.

THE WEATHER.

In contrast with the unseasonable conditions prevailing at present, some of the coldest weather of last winter was with us about this date. On Dec. 27th, a year ago, we had it 26 degrees below zero, while yesterday the temperature was above the freezing point in the afternoon. Though it is decidedly cold just now in Manitoba, farther west it is quite mild.—W. P.

Convert Women Smokers Is New Society's Aim

LONDON, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—"Conversion" of women smokers from the nicotine habit is one of the objects of an organization here.

The Non-Smokers' Society, as it is called, also aims to secure further legislation concerning the age at which the young may purchase tobacco, and against indiscriminate scattering of cigar and cigarette ashes in public rooms and vehicles.

It will seek to prevent any increase in the number of theatres and music halls permitting smoking.

FIGHT AGAINST CANTONESE PLAN

War Lords Resisting Campaign To Unite All of China.

TO MAKE DRIVES.

PEKING, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press) — Preparations are being made by the alliance of war lords of Northern China to resist the uninterrupted victorious march of the forces of the Cantonese government in their campaign to unite all China under one government.

Chang Tso-Lin, generalissimo of the northern alliance, is expected to issue a proclamation to the nation of his policy. Alarmed by reports that the Cantonese were about to form a junction with the Kuominchun troops of the Peking government deposed last April, the northern militarists who already have lost much of their territory, recently buried their personal animosities and combined to meet the common foe.

The Cantonese, from their new base at Wuchang, which they wrested from Wu Pei-Fu, have announced their intention of combining with the Kuominchin for drives against Peking and Shanghai. Much of Central and Eastern China has been added to the Cantonese control in recent months.

BELIEVE BRITAIN ON THE VERGE OF PROSPERITY

Amazing Display of Wealth Despite Recent Industrial Strike.

ENJOYING HOLIDAY.

Budget May Result in Considerable Trouble For Government.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—While the Old Country is spending its usual long Christmas holiday—many factories being closed for four and a half days—there is a spirit of extraordinary optimism that Britain is on the eve of a period of industrial and commercial prosperity. The Sunday newspapers, which were published in spite of the holiday, reflected this spirit, which is fostered by the unusually heavy Christmas expenditure, while the Government is naturally encouraging people to believe that the future holds the very brightest prospects.

Many persons, however, are beginning to wonder what is the basis for this optimism for 1927. It is certainly amazingly apparent that Britain is prosperous, as indicated by the expenditure in all the shops, but where the income thus spent is derived from, no one seems to know. In face of the decline of exports, due to the coal strike, naturally these skeptics are awaiting the budget with considerable anxiety, which is also shared in Government circles, because there is a definite swing in the provinces, not against the Conservative party, but against Stanley Baldwin's government. Any increase in taxation announced in the budget may push the pendulum so far as to make it necessary for the Premier to appeal to the country.

Fuel Demanded.

Extraordinary scenes were witnessed in the poorer districts of London at Christmas time, where men, women and children clamored round the coal merchants' wagons demanding fuel. The coal stocks of the country are enormous in spite of the strike, and there is a glut of coal in the north, but the railroads and the distributors failed to get it away from the pit heads in time until a definite order was issued that coal be given priority on the railroads even over Christmas passenger traffic. Some idea of the enormous consumption of coal in England in spite of the mild weather is indicated by the fact that at Christmas time London needs 100,000 tons of coal every day. This year only 25,000 tons were available, although in spite of the shortage there has been little real distress.

PELLY, Sask., Dec. 27.—John Zeleny and his brother Mike, 5 and 3 years old, were suffocated to death when their home burned while their parents were working in the fields. The mother, being the last to leave the house, had put the catch on to keep the children in.

REPUBLICANS REVIVE CHARGES THAT PRINCE HENRY OF PRUSSIA IS ACTING AGENT FOR KRUPPS

Brother of Former Kaiser Is At Present in Mexico.

OFFICER'S STORY.

Former Aid of Prince Says Henry is Lending Name and Prestige.

(By Frederick Kuh, United Press Correspondent.)

BERLIN, Dec. 28. — Recent developments in Nicaragua, have caused Republican politicians here to revive the charges that in his present visit to Mexico, Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the former Kaiser, is acting as agent of Krupps, the great German munitions and manufacturing organizations.

The report first was published here some time ago and was not denied in Berlin.

(An unequivocal denial of the report was received from Mexico City.)

It was stated that the Prince would engage in work preliminary to increasing Krupp's exports to Mexico, but no classification of the manufactured material was specified.

Captain Lothar Perseus, a prominent naval officer, formerly commander of the German waship Pacific, and a member of the Prince's party during the latter's naval tour of the Far East, told the United Press today that he understood the Prince was a Krupp agent.

"Information at my disposal," said Captain Perseus, "indicates that Prince Henry, during his journey to Mexico, is acting in behalf of Krupps. I understand that although the Prince himself probably would not conclude deals he would lend his name and prestige to the establishment of Mexican connections for Krupps. I am not aware whether the Krupps' plans envisage deliveries to Mexico or the construction of a factory there, but it might be either."

SITUATION EASIER.

WASHINGTON, December 28. — Canadian Press. — The termination of the situation which led Rear Admiral Julian Latimer to land United States blue jackets and marines, at Puerto Cabezas, was thought to be nearer to-day by Washington observers, after seeing despatches from Nicaragua. They regarded as particularly significant the decision of President Diaz to withdraw Conservative government troops from the Pearl Lagoon fighting zone, and the spread of neutral zones along the east coast, which for some time had been dominated by Liberal or revolutionary forces.

Liberals Claim Victory

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—Dr. Pedro Zapeda, representative of the Liberal Government on the east coast of Nicaragua, today claimed that the recent defeat of the Conservative Government troops in the Pearl Lagoon fighting zone meant the doom of the government of President Adolfo Diaz.

He asserted that the Pearl Lagoon defeat had left the Conservatives so crippled in strength that they would be unable to oppose the advance of the Liberals upon Managua, the capital of Nicaragua. The defeated Government forces, he said, now would be forced to seek refuge in the neutral zone at Blue Fields, where they would be disarmed by Rear Admiral Julian Latimer, in command of the United States naval squadron there.

Actress Forgot Teeth Jerome Played Queen

LONDON, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—Jerome K. Jerome, still as much of a social lion as he was back in the days when Three Men in a Boat, and the Idle Thoughts of An Idle Fellow were creating their first furore, revealed to the Bancroft Dramatic Club he once was an actor.

He mentioned that for two and a half years he was on the stage and had once played Hamlet. "I have also played The Queen,' he said. "It was not one of my successes. I took the part on short notice, owing to our managers wife having left her teeth behind."

DEMANDS PROBE OF FARM SIEGE

Former Senator Terms Attack on Mountaineers as "Brutal Murder."

SERVING WARRANT.

FLEMINGTON, N.J., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press Service).—Investigation by the Attorney-General's office into the siege of the Meeney farm, near Jutland, last week, has been asked by former State Senator George K. Large, counsel for the Meeney family.

State troopers, armed with a warrant charging Timothy and James Meeney with starving cattle, engaged in a pitched battle with the farmers, mortally wounding Beatrice Meeney and crippling James for life.

Large characterized the shooting as "brutal murder" and "a dastardly act."

SHERMAN HILL FOUND IN RIVER

Body of Missing Lockmaster Discovered This Morning.

NEAR DAM 23.

The body of Sherman Hill, who was last seen on Friday afternoon, before he went to chop ice away from a stop log at Lock 23, was found this morning by friends engaged in the search.

The body was discovered about 300 yards from the old dam, at lock 23, near where the drowning occurred.

It is expected that an inquest will be held on Thursday evening.

MANVERS NOMINATIONS.

Fred Gray Elected Reeve By Acclamation—Many Nominated.

BETHANY, Dec. 28.—The nominations for the Manvers Township Council were held on Monday in the Town Hall. W. A. Jakeman was returning officer. The nominations are as follows:

For Reeve—Fred Gray, Louis Staples. Deputy Reeve—Bert Richardson, Offa Staples. Councillors—William McMaster, William Whiteside, Robert Burns, and William Corbett. The election is to take place on Monday, January 3rd.

The hall was well filled when the 1926 Councillors gave their reports of the past year's work. The main question under discussion was the doing away with statute labor, which was tried out this past year. The pros and cons were talked over, and explanations made. It was decided to try the present system for another year.

Mr. Louis Staples resigned as a candidate for reeveship, so that Mr. Gray was elected by acclamation.

CHILD SCALDED

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press)—The joyous merriment attendant on Christmas Day was turned into in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Phillipe, farmers, near St. Claude, Man.

The Phillipe children were playing around the kitchen stove. Three-year-old Rose Marie, in evading one of her playmates, brushed against a boiling kettle of water and was scalded so badly that she died while being conveyed to a Winnipeg hospital.

RECORD EARNINGS REPORTED IN ANNUAL STATEMENT OF THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

Results Indicate Largest Business Turnover in History of Bank, With Net Profits of $4,516,239, a Gain of Close to Half a Million Over the Previous Year—Usual Strong Liquid Position Well Maintained.

The Royal Bank of Canada is submitting to its shareholders an annual statement which shows that the past year has been one of unusual business activity throughout Canada. This in turn is reflected in a substantial gain in current loans to take care of the larger requirements of industry and commerce.

Of perhaps still greater import to the shareholders is the marked gain in net profits, which at over $4,500,000 are the largest in the history of the Bank.

The Royal, with its system of over 750 branches throughout Canada covers every section of the country, and it is understood that the evidence of more favorable business conditions was general in practically every province.

The profit and loss account shows that profits for the year, after making full provision for bad and doubtful debts, amounted to $4,516,239, compared with $4,081,628 at the end of the previous year, a gain of close to half a million. The profits added to the balance carried forward from the previous year, made the total amount available for distribution $5,765,674. This was appropriated: dividends and bonus $3,416,000; officers' pension fund $100,000; appropriation for bank premises $400,000, and reserve for Dominion Government taxes $440,000, leaving a balance to be carried forward of $1,409,674.

Strong Position Maintained.

The general statement of assets and liabilities, which is for the fiscal year to November 30th, indicates that the usual strong liquid position has been well maintained. Of total assets of $766,376,943, the liquid ,or immediately available assets, amount to as much as $367,280,083, and are equivalent to 54.30% of liabilities to the public. Cash and bash balances are at the high level of $157,568,134, or 23.30% of public liabilities. WORKMEN COME BACK TO CANADA

U. S. Employers Required Them To Take Out Citizenship Papers.

LOSE POSITIONS.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—Canadian mechanics and workmen employed in factories in the United States have been told that they must become United States citizens or lose their jobs. The result of the mandate from a number of employers in Detroit, Buffalo and Cleveland, and the Government itself, is the return to Toronto within the past month of a number of young men, including two Canadian war veterans, who had been working in a United States arsenal, according to Superintendent W. S. Dobbs of the Employment Service of Canada.

General Factory Clean-Up

"A general overhauling of factories in the United States seems to be in progress,' said Mr. Dobbs yesterday, in discussing this phase of the employment situation. "What is happening is that employers are giving foreign workmen the opportunity of becoming citizens or losing their jobs, and it appears that there are a number who would prefer to return to Canada than live in the United States

"When I questioned a number of young men during the past month who had not applied for work from the service and who were returning from the United States, they told me they were offered the alternative of becoming a citizen or losing their jobs. I have heard the explanation fifty times within a short while," declared Mr. Dobbs. "It seems that a general policy of Americanization is being pursued in some centres by manufacturers.

War Veterans Return

"Among the number were two war veterans who had been working for some time in an arsenal on the manufacture of shells. One was a pensioner, and employed on work of a highly technical character. The other was a machinist. Both men were forced to leave the plant. One of the men was anxious to secure work in Northern Ontario, and refused to remain in Toronto."

LITTLE GIRL KILLED.

Dies Shortly After Being Struck By Bobsleigh in Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—The first fatality of the season on the city's toboggan slides resulted last night when Ellen Gleason, 13 years old, was struck by a bob sleigh and died shortly after walking home. An inquiry will probably be held.

When opened recently a 3,000-year-old jar of perfume found in an Egyptian tomb still retained its fragrance.

MRS. PARK ACCEPTS TORONTO POSITION

Will Be Soprano Soloist in Sherbourne Street United Church.

Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park has been offered the position of soprano soloist at Sherbourne Street United Church, Toronto, for some months, Mrs. Pugsley Walker, the present soloist, having been granted indefinite leave of absence.

The offer came to Mrs. Park entirely unsolicited on her part, she not being aware the church required a soloist.

Dr. Ernest MacMillan, the newly-appointed principal of Toronto Conservatory of Music, without mentioning it to Mrs. Park, recommended her very highly to Mr. Atkinson, the organist, and to the music committee of Sherbourne Street Church.

Mrs. Park, on resigning as soloist of St. Andrew's Church, had intended taking a rest from church work, but in view of the kind recommendation of Dr. MacMillan, and the unanimous offer from Sherbourne Street Church, she has decided to accept the position until such time as Mrs. Walker feels well enough to again take up her work. Sherbourne Street choir and church have always enjoyed a fine reputation for excellent music, and Mrs. Park is looking forward with pleasure to her work there.

Mrs. Park commences her duties next Sunday, when Dr. Richard Roberts, formerly of London, New York and Montreal, will commence his ministry at Sherbourne Street Church. Mrs. Park is well-known in Toronto, she having been soprano soloist for four summers in Timothy Eaton Church ,under Dr. MacMillan and Mr. A. Jordan.

Mrs. Park has on two former occasions been invited by two of the leading churches in Toronto to become their soprano soloist, but felt unable to accept a permanent position in view of it always entailing every week-end away from home.

An amateur gardener recently asserted that his plants drew energy from his radio aerial. Cucumbers and tomatoes, he said, were particularly susceptible, growing to enormous size.
